About the Book

The present three volume Digest covers the law laid down on Criminal Procedure Code and Criminal Trial by the Supreme Court from its inception in1950 till date. It has been conceived and planned to enable the discovery of all the rulings, easily and quickly. It is based on the time-tested SCC index system that is now widely accepted and used.

Special Features

- The rulings are placed under both topic and statutory headings, interconnected by a well-planned cross-reference system supported by synopses wherever necessary.
- Rulings that could not be placed under the provisions of any particular statute have been placed under the non-statutory topic heading Criminal Trial.
- To enable strict section-wise research, an exhaustive section-wise list of docket numbers i.e. the unique case note number allotted to each ruling, has been provided at the beginning of sections treated collectively.
- Table of Cases Digested facilitate finding citations and cross-citations of any decision.
- The Digest also contains annotations, editorial notes and comments and coram details.

The Digest will prove to be an indispensable tool to a wide range of legal professionals as well as the Bench.

§§ [5001] to [9392]

"The law is the last interpretation of the law given by the last Judge." —Anon.

"Precedents keep the law predictable and so more or less ascertainable." —Lord Devlin

"There is no such thing as a judicial precedent on facts though counsel, and even judges, are sometimes prone to argue and to act as if they were." —Bose, J., (1955) 2 SCR 1140, 1169

"The law declared by the Supreme Court is the law of the land; it is precedent for itself and for all the courts/tribunals and authorities in India." —Syed Shah Mohammed Quadri, J., (2002) 4 SCC 388

"The better wisdom of the Court below must yield to the higher wisdom of the Court above." —O. Chinnappa Reddy, J., (1985) 1 SCC 260, 268

"... the judicial system only works if someone is allowed to have the last word and if that last word, once spoken, is loyally accepted." —Lord Diplock, (1972) 1 All ER 801, 874

"Most of the decisions of the Supreme Court are of significance not merely because they constitute an adjudication on the rights of the parties and resolve the disputes between them but also because in doing so they embody a declaration of law operating as a binding principle in future cases."
—N. Santosh Hegde, J., (2002) 4 SCC 234, para 22

"... a decision is not an authority for a proposition which did not fall for its consideration."
—S.B. Sinha, J., (2005) 4 SCC 649, para 256

"The only thing binding as an authority upon a subsequent Judge is the principle upon which the case was decided." —Arijit Pasayat, J., (2003) 7 SCC 197

"The trend of judicial opinion is that stare decisis is not a dogmatic rule allergic to logic and reason; it is a flexible principle of law operating in the province of precedents providing room to collaborate with the demands of changing times dictated by social needs, State policy and judicial conscience."
— R.C. Lahoti, C.J., (2005) 8 SCC 534, para 112

"The doctrine of stare decisis has no statutory sanction but it is a rule of convenience, expediency, prudence and above all public policy." —Pattanaik, J., (2001) 1 SCC 91

"The doctrine of binding precedent has the merit of promoting a certainty and consistency in judicial decisions, and enables an organic development of the law, besides providing assurance to the individual as to the consequence of transactions forming part of his daily affairs." —Pathak, C.J., (1989) 2 SCC 754, 766

"A decision is available as a precedent only if it decides a question of law."
—L.M. Sharma, J., (1992) 1 SCC 489, 491

"... the law is, what the judges say it is since the power to interpret the law vests in the judges."
—S. Ratnavel Pandian, J., (1994) 3 SCC 569, 625

"Precedent law must be followed by all concerned; deviation from the same should be only on a procedure known to law. A subordinate court is bound by the enunciation of law made by the superior courts." —N. Santosh Hegde, J., (2000) 1 SCC 644, para 12

"The doctrine of binding precedent is of utmost importance in the administration of our judicial system. It promotes certainty and consistency in judicial decisions. Judicial consistency promotes confidence in the system, therefore, there is this need for consistency in the enunciation of legal principles in the decisions of the Supreme Court." —N. Santosh Hegde, J., (2002) 4 SCC 234, para 22

"... a judgment should be understood in the light of facts of that case and no more should be read into it than what it actually says." —B.P. Jeevan Reddy, J., (1993) 2 SCC 368, 393

"Judicial propriety, dignity and decorum demand that being the highest judicial tribunal even obiter dictum of the Supreme Court should be accepted as binding. ... But statements on matters other than law have no binding force." —Krishna Iyer, J., (1975) 1 SCC 794

"Taking recourse to the doctrine of stare decisis would be an imperative necessity to avoid uncertainty and confusion." —U.C. Banerjee, J., (1999) 4 SCC 11, para 16

"It is not everything said by a Judge while giving judgment that constitutes a precedent. ... The enunciation of the reason or principle on which a question before a court has been decided is alone binding as a precedent" —K. Ramaswamy, J., (1996) 6 SCC 44, 51, 52

PREFACE

Amongst the abiding principles of our Constitution is the one stated in Article 141 that the law declared by the Hon'ble Supreme Court is binding on all courts. It is therefore imperative for everyone concerned with law within the legal system to know and understand what this binding law is. For this the rulings lying embedded in the learned judgments and orders of the Hon'ble Judges are to be culled out and made accessible, with proper citations to locate them in authentic law reports. Since one may discover many rulings on the same point, bench strength and the date of decision are also relevant under the doctrine of precedents.

Coverage and Method

The present volumes, covering the law laid down on CrPC and Criminal Trial by the Supreme Court from its inception in 1950 till date, has been designed particularly to meet the above need. It has been conceived and planned to enable the discovery of all the rulings, easily and quickly. It is based on the time-tested SCC index system that is now widely accepted and used.

Systematic arrangement

But the search for the relevant rulings would still be tedious if they were not systematically arranged. Much effort has therefore been directed towards the proper placement of the rulings under both topic and statutory headings, interconnected by a well-planned cross-reference system supported by synopses wherever necessary. Also no effort has been spared in making this digest most comprehensive and detailed.

Criminal Trial

Since many rulings and principles cannot be docketed under the provisions of any particular statute they have been placed under the non-statutory topic heading Criminal Trial.

Synopsisation under sections of CrPC

Where the number of rulings under any section or set of sections is large, for convenient research they have been placed under topic headings and a synopsis added for quick reference.

A few sections have been treated collectively as such collective treatment seemed more conducive to enabling systematic and convenient research on the provisions of law contained therein. Sections 125 to 128 which deal with a Magistrate's power to award maintenance have been dealt with collectively. So also Sections 155 to 159, which deal with the power and conduct of investigation by police. So also Sections 161 and 162.

However, to enable strict section-wise research, an exhaustive section-wise list of docket numbers i.e. the unique case note number allotted to each ruling, has been provided at the beginning of each such collective treatment of sections.

Table of Cases Digested: Looking at dockets nearby

It is also possible to conduct a search through the Table of Cases Digested. Since digest notes on the same or similar points are naturally placed close to each other, by locating the digest notes on any known case from the Table of Cases Digested, other relevant rulings on that point can easily be located nearby. For convenience the docket numbers are indicated at the top corners of pages. The Table of Cases Digested is also a convenient source for finding the citation and cross-citations of any decision.

Annotations, notes and comments

This Digest also contains annotations under some digest notes with respect to earlier connected cases of the Supreme Court and the High Courts, especially those appealed against, and some editorial notes and comments.

Coram details: Names of Hon'ble Judges and author(s) of the opinion(s)

Another feature of interest added is that below each ruling are given the names of the Hon'ble Judges who constituted the Bench which heard the matter, with the name of the Hon'ble Judge(s) who has/have given the opinion(s) indicated in bold. In case of several opinions in a case, the superscript numbers after the names of Judges indicate the sequence of the opinions as well as which other Judges signed each of those opinions.

Acknowledgement

An analytical, systematic and comprehensive work such as this necessarily involves the combined effort of several persons. Each one of them has contributed in his own way. The merit and accuracy of this work therefore is the result of their dedication, commitment, sustained effort and team work. We warmly appreciate their efforts and contribution and they can justly feel proud of this publication.

Appreciation and our commitment

We equally appreciate and value the goodwill and continued support received from our subscribers and readers. We are trying our best to publish the volumes as quickly as is expected of us but we prefer not to be hasty and instead make this Digest as comprehensive and neatly arranged as is possible, and also cover the case law up to the date of publication. We are beholden to our readers for their patience and understanding. Besides, in trying to provide through Supreme Court Cases™ (SCC) and various digests all the rulings of the Supreme Court we seek to fulfil our own commitment to serve the legal profession as well as the cause of justice.

(1) Generally

[5001] — S. 378 — Applicability — "Acquittal" — Meaning of — Held, even when the trial Court does not entirely acquit the accused of the major offence and convicts him of a minor offence, it is still an "acquittal" — CrPC, 1898, S. 417(1)

Having regard to the language employed in S. 417(1) of the 1898 Code and S. 2*(a)* of the Supreme Court (Enlargement of Criminal Appellate Jurisdiction) Act, 1970, when an accused is acquitted of a major charge but convicted under a minor charge, it is still an acquittal under the major charge which may be challenged by the State before the High Court in an appeal under S. 417(1) of the 1898 Code. Kishore Singh v. State of M.P., (1977) 4 SCC 524: 1977 SCC (Cri) 656: AIR 1977 SC 2267: 1977 Cri LJ 1937.

[5002] — S. 378 — The figure "(5)" in S. 378(1) is inadvertently retained and should read as "(6)"

The reference to sub-section (5) in sub-section (1) is clearly an inadvertent mistake. Sub-section (5) of Section 378 applies only to application for special leave by a complainant. Sub-section (5) of Section 378 has no application to an appeal by the State Government or to an application for leave under sub-section (3). What the legislature clearly intended was to continue to provide that an appeal by the State Government would not be maintainable if special leave to appeal had been refused to a complainant. Thus sub-section (1) of Section 378 was to be subject to provisions of sub-section (6) and not sub-section (5) as inadvertently provided therein. Inadvertently the figure (5) in Section 417(1) was continued, without noticing that now under Section 378 the relevant provision was sub-section (6). The figure (5) in Section 378(1) is inadvertently retained. Thus in Section 378(1) the figure (6) will have to be read in place of the figure (5). State (Delhi Admn.) v. Dharampal, (2001) 10 SCC 372: AIR 2001 SC 2924.

[5003] — Ss. 378 & 401 and 190 — Appeal against acquittal — Locus standi — Held, in prosecution based on police report, State has a statutory right to appeal, while the private party does not — Private complainant, in such cases, can only excite general powers of revision by High Court

The Division Bench in not allowing the condonation of delay has effectively dismissed the appeal in the sense that it has not allowed the State Government to proceed with the appeal for which there was a provision. This was a prosecution not based on a private complaint but on the police report. Therefore, the State Government had a right under Section 378(2) CrPC to file an appeal and very conspicuously the private party did not have that right. The private complainant, therefore, could only excite the general powers of revision by the High Court. (Para 20). K. Ramachandran v. *V.N. Akalu Ahir v. Ramdeo Ram, (1973) 2 SCC 583: 1973 SCC (Cri) 903, considered and relied on

[5004] — S. 378(1) — Mode of construction — Exception clause — Held, all changes in wording and phrasing are presumed to be deliberate with the purpose to limit, qualify or enlarge the pre-existing law — Any construction that makes the exception (clause) with which the section opens unnecessary and redundant should be avoided

As noticed above, the words—"save as otherwise provided in sub-section (2)"—were added in the 1973 Code; Section 417 of the 1898 Code did not have these words. It is a familiar rule of construction that all changes in the wording and phrasing may be presumed to have been deliberate and with the purpose to limit, qualify or enlarge the pre-existing law as the changes of the words employ. Any construction that makes the exception (clause) with which the section opens unnecessary and redundant should be avoided. (Para 36)

If the legislature had intended to give the right of appeal under Section 378(1) to the State Government in all cases of acquittal including the classes of cases referred to in sub-section (2), it would not have been necessary to incorporate the exception (clause) in the opening words. This objective could have been achieved without the use of these words as the erstwhile Section 417 of the 1898 Code enabled the State Government to appeal from all cases of acquittal while in the two types of cases mentioned in sub-section (2) thereof, an appeal from the order of acquittal could be filed under the direction of the Central Government as well. (Para 37)

Parliament in the 1973 Code re-enacted the provision for appeal from an order of acquittal with certain modifications. It changed the language by addition of the words—"save as otherwise provided in sub-section (2)". The alteration in language by addition of these words gives rise to an inference that the legislature made conscious changes in Section 378 (the 1973 Code). The addition of words in Section 378(1) by way of exception (clause) cannot be set at naught by giving the same interpretation which has been given to Section 417 (the 1898 Code). The language used in Section 417 (the 1898 Code) and Section 378 (the 1973 Code) is not in pari materia. (Para 41)

One of the rules of construction of statutes is that the language of the statute should be read as it is and any construction that results in rejection of words has to be avoided; the effort should be made to give meaning to each and every word used by the legislature. However, such rule of construction of statutes is not without exceptions. (Para 43). Lalu Prasad Yadav v. State of Bihar, (2010) 5 SCC 1.

[5005] — S. 378(1) — Phrase "in any case" — Construction of — Held, means "in all cases", but the opening words in S. 378(1) put fetters on State Government in directing appeal to be filed in the two types of cases mentioned in S. 378(2)

The main object and legislative intent by the opening words—"save as otherwise provided in sub-section (2)"—in sub-section (1) of Section 378 being clear i.e. to fetter the general power given to the State Government in filing appeal from the order of acquittal in two types of cases stated in sub-section (2), the use of word "also" in sub-section (2) does not make any sense. The word "also" in sub-section (2), if construed in the manner suggested by the State Government, may result in reducing the opening words in sub-section (1) a nullity and will deny these words their full play. Since exception (clause) in the beginning of sub-section (1) has been expressly added in Section 378 and it is not possible to harmonise the word "also" occurring in sub-section (2) with that, it appears that no sensible meaning can be given to the word "also" and the said word has to be treated as immaterial. To declare "also" enacted in sub-section (2) immaterial or insensible is not very satisfactory, but it is much more unsatisfactory to deprive the words—"save as otherwise provided in sub-section (2)"—of their true and plain meaning. In order that the exception (clause) expressly stated in the opening words of sub-section (1) might be preserved, it is necessary that word "also" in sub-section (2) is treated as immaterial and is held accordingly. The phrase "in any case" in sub-section (1) of Section 378, without hesitation, means "in all cases", but the opening words in the said section put fetters on the State Government in directing appeal to be filed in the two types of cases mentioned in sub-section (2). (2) Appeal against acquittal vis-à-vis appeal against conviction

See also under Section 378, '(3) Nature and scope of power under — Interference when called for/Reversal of acquittal when permissible/warranted', below

[5007] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Appeal against acquittal — Not distinct in nature from appeal against conviction — Only there is a presumption of innocence in favour of accused — But if on a reappreciation of evidence acquittal is not found to be based on a reasonable view, appellate court will interfere with the order of acquittal — Constitution of India — Art.136

There is no difference between an appeal against conviction and an appeal against acquittal except that when dealing with an appeal against acquittal the Court keeps in view the position that the presumption of innocence in favour of the accused has been fortified by acquittal and if the view adopted by the High Court is a reasonable one and the conclusion reached by it had its grounds well set on the materials on record, the acquittal may not be interfered with. Upon reading the record and after hearing the counsel it is clear that the High Court's judgment of acquittal in the instant case was not based on a reasonable view. Once evidence has been read and this Court has proceeded to review the entire material, there is indeed no limitation in law in the exercise of the jurisdiction under Art. 136 of the Constitution for the matter of making a just decision. Therefore, interference with the acquittal is called for in this case.

Supreme Court indicated as to how courts should find out the truth from evidence and decide in a detached mind, dissociated from "the heat generated outside the courtroom either through the news media or through flutter in the public mind".

The Court also expressed opinion on the cause of bride killing as also the place that should be given to women in our society. State (Delhi Admn.) v. Laxman Kumar, (1985) 4 SCC 476: 1986 SCC (Cri) 2: AIR 1986 SC 250.

[5009] — Ss. 378 and 374 — Appeal before Supreme Court against acquittal — Scope of interference — Comparison with scope of appeal against conviction

While deciding an appeal against acquittal, the power of the appellate court is no less than the power exercised while hearing appeals against conviction. In both types of appeals, the power exists to review the entire evidence. However, one significant difference is that an order of acquittal will not be interfered with, by an appellate court, where the judgment of the trial court is based on evidence and the view taken is reasonable and plausible. It will not reverse the decision of the trial court merely because a different view is possible. The appellate court will also bear in mind that there is a presumption of innocence in favour of the accused and the accused is entitled to get the benefit of any doubt. Further, if it decides to interfere, it should assign reasons for differing with the decision of the trial court. (Para 11)

It is pointed out that the witnesses on hearing about the dacoity had rushed to the police station and had no occasion to know the names of the accused persons. The parameters for dealing with an appeal against the judgment of acquittal have been laid down by the Supreme Court in several cases. The golden thread which runs through the web of administration of justice in criminal cases is that if two views are possible on the evidence adduced in the case, one pointing to the guilt of the accused and the other to his innocence, the view which is favourable to the accused should be adopted. The paramount consideration of the court is to ensure that miscarriage of justice is prevented. A miscarriage of justice which may arise from acquittal of the guilty is no less than from the conviction of an innocent. In a case where admissible evidence is ignored, a duty is cast upon the appellate court to reappreciate the evidence for the purpose of ascertaining as to whether any of the accused committed any offence or not. Facts :

Long standing enmity pursuant to land dispute between parties who were related. On the day of occurrence, during morning hours, when PW 1, his brother PW 2, and their father (deceased) were sitting in front of their house, appellant (A-1) alleged to have stabbed the deceased with knife, while A-2 assaulted PW 2 with knife. When victims tried to run away from the place, other accused alleged to have pelted stones at them. Deceased died on the spot, while PW 2, who was grievously injured was taken to a hospital. PW 5 who conducted post-mortem opined that the death was due to cardio respiratory arrest brought about by haemorrhagic shock as a result of stab injury to the left ventricle of the heart. It was clear therefore, that the injuries which were inflicted on the deceased were on vital parts, namely, on the scalp and on the chest which pierced the left ventricle of the heart. PWs 1, 2 and 8 (wife of PW 1) were stated to be eyewitnesses.

Trial court convicted appellant under S. 302 and sentenced him to rigorous LI and fine of Rs 100 with default stipulation, while A-2 was convicted under S. 324 and sentenced to 3 years' RI and fine of Rs 500 with default stipulation. Rest of the accused, however, were acquitted of all charges framed against them. The High Court, by impugned judgment upheld judgment of trial court. Hence, present appeal.

Submissions by appellant that: (i) eyewitnesses should not be believed as they were closely related to deceased, and there was admitted enmity between parties; (ii) there was delay in lodging FIR; and (iii) injuries on accused were not explained which leads to inference that genesis of occurrence had been suppressed.

Under the Criminal Procedure Code there is no difference so far as the power of the appellate court is concerned to deal with an appeal from a conviction and that from an appeal against an order of acquittal excepting that an appeal against a conviction is as of right and lies to courts of different jurisdictions depending on the nature of sentence and kind of trial and the court in which the trial was held, whereas an appeal against an order of acquittal can be made only to the High Court with the leave of the court. The procedure for dealing with two kinds of appeals is identical and the powers of the appellate court in disposing of the appeals are in essence the same. The High Court, therefore, has full powers while hearing an appeal against an order of acquittal, to reappreciate the evidence and to come to a conclusion whether the order of acquittal passed by the Sessions Judge was per se bad or not. If, however, on the evidence two views are reasonably possible, one supporting acquittal and the other indicating conviction then the High Court would not be justified in interfering with an order of acquittal merely because it takes the view that it would have taken the other view sitting as a trial court. It would, therefore, be correct to state that the High Court while reversing an order of acquittal must apply its mind to the reasons given by the trial court and find out whether such reasons are at all sustainable or not. But on examining the reasons advanced by the trial court as well as on reappreciating the evidence on record if the High Court is satisfied that the reasons given by the trial court for acquittal are totally unsustainable and the appreciation of evidence made by the trial court is per se bad then there would be no limitation on the power of the High Court to set aside an order of acquittal. Banwari Ram v. State of U.P., (1998) 9 SCC 3: 1998 SCC (Cri) 835: AIR 1998 SC 674: 1998 Cri LJ 869.

[5015] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Appeal before High Court against acquittal — High Court's power to reassess the evidence and reach its own conclusion as extensive as in any appeal against conviction — High Court however must give proper weight and consideration to the view of the trial court — If the view taken by the trial court is reasonable and plausible, order of acquittal should not be disturbed — On facts, view taken by the High Court was the only possible view and the High Court was justified in reversing order of acquittal passed by the trial court

The powers of the High Court in an appeal from order of acquittal to reassess the evidence and reach its own conclusions under Sections 378 and 386 CrPC are as extensive as in any appeal against the order of conviction. But as a rule of prudence, it is desirable that the High Court should give proper weight and consideration to the view of the trial court with regard to the credibility of the witness, the presumption of innocence in favour of the accused, the right of accused to the benefit of any doubt and the slowness of appellate court in justifying a finding of fact arrived at by a judge who had the advantage of seeing the witness. No doubt it is settled law that if the main grounds on which the court below has based its order acquitting the accused, are reasonable and plausible, and the same cannot entirely and effectively be dislodged or demolished, the High Court should not disturb the order of acquittal. There is no embargo on the appellate court reviewing the evidence upon which an order of acquittal is based. Generally, the order of acquittal shall not be interfered with because the presumption of innocence of the accused is further strengthened by acquittal. The golden thread which runs through the web of administration of justice in criminal cases is that if two views are possible on the evidence adduced in the case, one pointing to the guilt of the accused and the other to his innocence, the view which is favourable to the accused should be adopted. The paramount consideration of the court is to ensure that miscarriage of justice is prevented. A miscarriage of justice which may arise from acquittal of the guilty is no less than from the conviction of an innocent. In a case where admissible evidence is ignored, a duty is cast upon the appellate court to reappreciate the evidence where the accused has been acquitted, for the purpose of ascertaining as to whether any of the accused really committed any offence or not. The principle to be followed by the appellate court considering the appeal against the judgment of acquittal is to interfere only when there are compelling and substantial reasons for doing so. (3) Nature and scope of power under — Interference when called for/Reversal of acquittal when permissible/warranted (contd.)

Generally, the order of acquittal shall not be interfered with because the presumption of innocence of the accused is further strengthened by acquittal. The golden thread which runs through the web of administration of justice in criminal cases is that if two views are possible on the evidence adduced in the case, one pointing to the guilt of the accused and the other to his innocence, the view which is favourable to the accused should be adopted. However, there is no embargo on the appellate court reviewing the evidence upon which an order of acquittal is based. (Para 19)

The paramount consideration of the Court is to ensure that miscarriage of justice is prevented. No doubt a miscarriage of justice which may arise from acquittal of the guilty is no less than from the conviction of an innocent. In a case where admissible evidence is ignored, a duty is cast upon the appellate court to reappreciate the evidence where the accused has been acquitted, for the purpose of ascertaining as to whether any of the accused really committed any offence or not. Therefore the principle to be followed by the appellate court considering the appeal against the judgment of acquittal is to interfere only when there are compelling and substantial reasons for doing so in order to prevent miscarriage of justice resulting therefrom. If the impugned judgment is clearly unreasonable and relevant and convincing materials have been unjustifiably eliminated in the process, it would be a compelling reason for interference. (Para 19)

No error can be said to have been committed by the High Court, nor any other infirmity to undermine the legality and propriety of the findings of the High Court, warranting the interference of the Supreme Court has been substantiated, in this case. The following principles have to be kept in mind by the appellate court while dealing with appeals, particularly, against an order of acquittal:

(i) There is no limitation on the part of the appellate court to review the evidence upon which the order of acquittal is founded and to come to its own conclusion.

(ii) The appellate court can also review the trial court's conclusion with respect to both facts and law.

(iii) While dealing with the appeal preferred by the State, it is the duty of the appellate court to marshal the entire evidence on record and by giving cogent and adequate reasons set aside the judgment of acquittal.

(iv) An order of acquittal is to be interfered with only when there are "compelling and substantial reasons" for doing so. If the order is "clearly unreasonable", it is a compelling reason for interference.

(v) When the trial court has ignored the evidence or misread the material evidence or has ignored material documents like dying declaration/report of ballistic experts, etc. the appellate court is competent to reverse the decision of the trial court depending on the materials placed. The appellate court may only overrule or otherwise disturb the trial court's acquittal if it has "very substantial and compelling reasons" for doing so. This is a murder case in which the trial court acquitted the accused. The High Court reversed the trial court's decision, finding the accused guilty. In doing so, the appellate court failed to give proper weight to the views of the trial court as to credibility of witnesses, thereby ignoring the standards by which the appellate courts consider appeals against acquittals. (Paras 70 and 2)

A number of instances arise in which the appellate court would have "very substantial and compelling reasons" to discard the trial court's decision. "Very substantial and compelling reasons" exist when: (i) the trial court's conclusion with regard to the facts is palpably wrong; (ii) the trial court's decision was based on an erroneous view of law; (iii) the trial court's judgment is likely to result in "grave miscarriage of justice"; (iv) the entire approach of the trial court in dealing with the evidence was patently illegal; (v) the trial court's judgment was manifestly unjust and unreasonable; (vi) the trial court has ignored the evidence or misread the material evidence or has ignored material documents like dying declarations/report of the ballistic expert, etc. (vii) this list is intended to be illustrative, not exhaustive. [5025] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Appeal against acquittal — Murder case — Scope of interference by High Court — Restated — Not necessary for High Court to advert to all the reasons for acquittal given by the trial court if reversal of acquittal otherwise called for — Where the consistent statements of the three eyewitnesses that the accused gave a stabbing blow on vital part of the deceased with a knife while he came out of his house, were fully corroborated by medical evidence, and, without any sound reasons the trial court discarded the same and acquitted the accused, held, High Court was fully entitled to reappreciate the said evidence and to record its own conclusion as to whether a conviction was sustainable — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 300 and 302

The plenitude of power available to the court hearing an appeal against acquittal is the same as that available to a court hearing an appeal against conviction. However the court will not interfere solely because a different plausible view may arise on the evidence. In a case of murder, if the reasons given by the trial court for discarding the testimony of the eyewitnesses are not sound, then there should be no hesitation on the part of the High Court in interfering with an order of acquittal. If the judgment of the trial Judge was absolutely perverse, legally erroneous and based on wrong testimony, it would be proper for the High Court to interfere and reverse the order of acquittal. In the instant case although the High Court has not adverted to all the reasons given by the trial Judge for recording an order of acquittal, it is not possible to hold that the High Court exceeded its jurisdiction and the parameters fixed for interference with an order of acquittal. In order to bring home the charge of murder against the appellant the ground that he gave a stabbing blow on the deceased on a vital part by means of a knife while he came out of his house has been consistently narrated by the three eyewitnesses. There has been no embellishment or exaggeration by these eyewitnesses so far as the role ascribed to the appellant from their previous version to the police is concerned. The testimony of the three witnesses is fully corroborated by the medical evidence of the two doctors and, therefore, the trial court was not justified in discarding this part of the prosecution case and in acquitting the appellant and the High Court, therefore, was fully entitled to reappreciate the evidence of these witnesses and record its own conclusion on the question whether the same can sustain conviction or not. *K. Facts

The case commonly came to be known as the "Best Bakery Case". Between 8.30 p.m. of 1-3-2002 and 11.00 a.m. of 2-3-2002, a business concern known as "Best Bakery" at Vadodara was burnt down by an unruly mob of a large number of people. In the ghastly incident 14 persons died. The attacks were stated to be a part of retaliatory action to avenge the killing of 56 persons burnt to death in the Sabarmati Express near Godhra in Gujarat. Z, the appellant, was the main eyewitness who lost her family members, including helpless women and innocent children in the gruesome incident. Many persons other than Z were also eyewitnesses. The accused persons were the alleged perpetrators of the crime. After investigation a charge-sheet was filed in June 2002. During trial the purported eyewitnesses resiled from the statements made during investigation. Faulty and biased investigation as well as perfunctory trial were said to have marred the sanctity of the entire exercise undertaken to bring the culprits to book. By judgment dated 27-6-2003, the trial court directed acquittal of the accused persons. Z appeared before the National Human Rights Commission stating that she was threatened by powerful politicians not to depose against the accused persons.

On 7-8-2003 an appeal was filed by the State against the judgment of acquittal before the Gujarat High Court. The Gujarat High Court upheld the acquittal of the respondents-accused. Along with the said appeal, two other petitions were disposed of. The prayers made by the State in those petitions for adducing additional evidence under Section 391 CrPC and/or for directing retrial were rejected. Consequentially, prayer for examination of witnesses under Section 311 CrPC was also rejected. Thereafter, NHRC moved the Supreme Court and its special leave petition was treated as a petition under Article 32 of the Constitution. Z and another organisation, Citizens for Justice and Peace, filed an SLP challenging the judgment of acquittal affirmed by the High Court.

These appeals raised important issues regarding witness protection, the quality and credibility of the evidence before court, the improper conduct of trial by the Public Prosecutor and the role of the investigating agency itself, which was alleged to be perfunctory and not impartial.

Allowing the appeals to the extent and in the terms below,

Held :

If the State's machinery fails to protect citizen's life, liberties and property and the investigation is conducted in a manner to help the accused persons, it is but appropriate that the Supreme Court should step in to prevent undue miscarriage of justice that is perpetrated upon the victims and their family members. (Para 22)

Though justice is depicted to be blindfolded, as popularly said, it is only a veil not to see who the party before it is while pronouncing judgment on the cause brought before it by enforcing law and administering justice, and not to ignore or turn the mind/attention of the court away from the truth of the cause or lis before it, in disregard of its duty to prevent miscarriage of justice. Courts have always been considered to have an overriding duty to maintain public confidence in the administration of justice — often referred to as the duty to vindicate and uphold the "majesty of the law". Due administration of justice has always been viewed as a continuous process, not confined to determination of the particular case, protecting its ability to function as a court of law in the future as in the case before it. When an ordinary citizen makes a grievance against the mighty administration, any indifference, inaction or lethargy shown in protecting his right guaranteed in law will tend to paralyse by such inaction or lethargic action of courts, and erode in stages the faith inbuilt in the judicial system, ultimately destroying the very justice-delivery system of the country itself. Doing justice is the paramount consideration and that duty cannot be abdicated or diluted and diverted by manipulative red herrings. (Paras 54 and 35)

Courts have to ensure that accused persons are punished and that the might or authority of the State are not used to shield itself or its men. It should be ensured that they do not wield such powers, which under the Constitution have to be held only in trust for the public and society at large. If deficiency in investigation or prosecution is visible or can be perceived by lifting the veil trying to hide the realities or covering the obvious deficiencies, courts have to deal with the same with an iron hand, appropriately within the framework of law. It is as much the duty of the prosecutor as of the court to ensure that full and material facts are brought on record so that there might not be miscarriage of justice. (Para 56)

If one even cursorily glances through the records of the present case, one gets a feeling that the justice-delivery system was being taken for a ride and literally allowed to be abused, misused and mutilated by subterfuge. The investigation appears to be perfunctory and anything but impartial without any definite object of finding out the truth and bringing to book those who were responsible for the crime. The Public Prosecutor appears to have acted more as a defence counsel than one whose duty was to present the truth before the Court. The Court in turn appeared to be a silent spectator, mute to the manipulations and preferred to be indifferent to sacrilege being committed to justice. (Para 68)

The role of the State Government also leaves much to be desired. One gets a feeling that there was really no seriousness in the State's approach in assailing the trial court's judgment. This is clearly indicated by the fact that the first memorandum of appeal filed was an apology for the grounds. A second amendment was done, that too after the Supreme Court had expressed its unhappiness over the perfunctory manner in which the appeal was presented and the challenge made. That also was not the end of the matter. There was a subsequent petition for amendment. All this sadly reflects on the quality of determination exhibited by the State and the nature of seriousness shown to pursue the appeal. Those who are responsible for protecting life and property and ensuring that investigation is fair and proper seem to have shown no real anxiety. Large number of people had lost their lives. Whether the accused persons were really assailants or not could have been established by a fair and impartial investigation. In a country like ours with heterogeneous religions and multiracial and multilingual society which necessitates protection against discrimination on the ground of caste or religion taking lives of persons belonging to one or the other religion is bound to have dangerous repercussions and reactive effect on the society at large and may tend to encourage fissiparous elements to undermine the unity and security of the nation on account of internal disturbances. It strikes at the very root of an orderly society, which the founding fathers of our Constitution dreamt of. When the ghastly killings take place in the land of Mahatma Gandhi, it raises a very pertinent question as to whether some people have become so bankrupt in their ideology that they have deviated from everything which was so dear to him. When a large number of people including innocent and helpless children and women are killed in a diabolic manner it brings disgrace to the entire society. Criminals have no religion. No religion teaches violence and cruelty-based religion is no religion at all, but a mere cloak to usurp power by fanning ill feeling and playing on feelings aroused thereby. The golden thread passing through every religion is love and compassion. The fanatics who spread violence in the name of religion are worse than terrorists and more dangerous than an alien enemy. The little drops of humanness which jointly make humanity a cherished desire of mankind had seemingly dried up when the perpetrators of the crime had burnt alive helpless women and innocent children. Was it their fault that they were born in the houses of persons belonging to a particular community? The still, stard music of humanity had become silent when it was forsaken by those who were responsible for the killings.The modern-day "Neros" were looking elsewhere when Best Bakery and innocent children and helpless women were burning, and were probably deliberating how the perpetrators of the crime could be saved or protected. Law and justice had become flies in the hands of these "wanton boys". When fences start to swallow the crops, no scope will be left for survival of law and order or truth and justice. Public order as well as public interest become martyrs and monuments. (Paras 68 and 69)

Criminal trials should not be reduced to be mock trials or shadow-boxing or fixed trials. Judicial criminal administration system must be kept clean and beyond the reach of whimsical political wills or agendas and properly insulated from discriminatory standards or yardsticks of the type prohibited by the mandate of the Constitution. (Para 68)

It is no doubt true that the accused persons have been acquitted by the trial court and the acquittal has been upheld, but if the acquittal is unmerited and based on tainted evidence, tailored investigation, unprincipled prosecution and perfunctory trial and evidence of threatened/terrorised witnesses, it is no acquittal in the eye of the law and no sanctity or credibility can be attached and given to the so-called findings. It seems to be nothing but a travesty of truth, fraud on the legal process and the resultant decisions of courts — coram non judis and non est. There is, therefore, every justification to call for interference in these appeals. (Para 64). *Zahira Habibulla H. [5031] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Ambit and scope of High Court's powers in appeal against acquittal under — Principles restated — CrPC, 1898, Ss. 417 and 423

The High Court in an appeal against an order of acquittal has full power to review at large the evidence on which the order of acquittal was founded and to reach the conclusion that, upon the evidence, the order of acquittal should be reversed.

The different phraseology used in the judgment of the Supreme Court such as 'substantial and compelling reasons', 'good and sufficiently cogent reasons', 'strong reasons', are not intended to curtail or place any limitation on the undoubted power of an appellate Court in an appeal against acquittal to review the entire evidence and to come to its own conclusion as stated above but in doing so it should give proper consideration to such matters as (i) the views of the trial Judge as to the credibility of the witnesses; (ii) the presumption of innocence in favour of the accused, a presumption certainly not weakened by the fact that he has been acquitted at his trial; (iii) the right of the accused to the benefit of any real and reasonable doubt; and (iv) the slowness of an appellate Court in disturbing a finding of fact arrived at by a Judge who had the advantage of seeing the witnesses.

In the present case, the High Court had not lost sight of the above principles in reversing the order of acquittal made by the trial Court. The appellant's version that the injuries observed on his person by the doctor were the result of shots fired by the deceased from revolver not having been established and the appellant having admitted that he fired two or three shots at the deceased, the High Court was fully justified in reversing the trial Court's order of acquittal of the appellant which was erroneously made by the Sessions Judge on the basis of surmises and conjectures and convicting him specially when the prosecution story that the appellant fired at the deceased without any justifiable provocation was established to the hilt by the evidence of a number of prosecution witnesses who, even according to the Sessions Judge, gave a true account of the occurrence. Salim Zia v. State of U.P., (1979) 2 SCC 648: 1979 SCC (Cri) 568: AIR 1979 SC 391: 1979 Cri LJ 323.

[5032] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Appeal against acquittal — If trial court's order of acquittal is based on plausible reasons, High Court not justified in reversing it merely because another view is possible

If the finding reached by the trial court cannot be said to be unreasonable, the appellate court should be slow in disturbing the finding of fact of the trial court even if it was possible to reach a different conclusion on the basis of the material on the record because the Trial Judge has the advantage of seeing and hearing the witnesses and the initial presumption of innocence in favour of the accused is not weakened by his acquittal. If two views are reasonably possible of the evidence on the record, Supreme Court is not expected to interfere simply because it feels that it would have taken a different view if the case had been tried by it. Babu v. State of U.P., (1983) 2 SCC 21: 1983 SCC (Cri) 332: AIR 1983 SC 308: 1983 Cri LJ 334: 1983 ALJ 826: 1983 MLJ (Cri) 478.

[5034] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Appeal against acquittal — Interference — Grounds for — Held, acquittal by the trial court should not be interfered with unless it is totally perverse or wholly unsustainable

An acquittal by the trial court should not be interfered with unless it is totally perverse or wholly unsustainable. The trial court has the advantage of watching the demeanour of the witnesses who have given evidence, therefore, the appellate court should be slow to interfere with the decisions of the trial court. The appellate court undoubtedly has wide powers of reappreciating and re-evaluating the entire evidence but it would be justified in interfering with the judgment of acquittal only when the judgment of the trial court is palpably wrong, totally ill-founded or wholly misconceived, based on erroneous analysis of evidence and non-existent material, demonstrably unsustainable or perverse. The principles which would govern and regulate the hearing of appeal by the High Court against an order of acquittal passed by the trial court may be reiterated as under:

(1) In an appeal against an order of acquittal, the High Court possesses all the powers, and nothing less than the powers it possesses while hearing an appeal against an order of conviction.

(2) The High Court has the power to reconsider the whole issue, reappraise the evidence and come to its own conclusion and findings in place of the findings recorded by the trial court, if the said findings are against the weight of the evidence on record, or in other words, perverse.

(3) Before reversing the finding of acquittal, the High Court has to consider each ground on which the order of acquittal was based and to record its own reasons for not accepting those grounds and not subscribing to the view expressed by the trial court that the accused is entitled to acquittal.

(4) In reversing the finding of acquittal, the High Court has to keep in view the fact that the presumption of innocence is still available in favour of the accused and the same stands fortified and strengthened by the order of acquittal passed in his favour by the trial court.

(5) If the High Court, on a fresh scrutiny and reappraisal of the evidence and other material on record, is of the opinion that there is another view which can be reasonably taken, then the view which favours the accused should be adopted.

(6) The High Court has also to keep in mind that the trial court had the advantage of looking at the demeanour of witnesses and observing their conduct in the Court especially in the witness-box.

(7) The High Court has also to keep in mind that even at that stage, the accused was entitled to benefit of doubt. The doubt should be such as a reasonable person would honestly and conscientiously entertain as to the guilt of the accused. Ajit Savant Majagvai v. State of Karnataka, (1997) 7 SCC 110: 1997 SCC (Cri) 992: AIR 1997 SC 3255: 1997 Cri LJ 3964.

It was contended by the appellants that an appeal against the acquittal cannot be interfered with by the appellate court except for the compelling reasons. The appellants questioned the correctness of the High Court's judgment. According to them, the High Court had not kept in view the parameters of appeal against acquittal. It was submitted that even if two views are possible, the view supporting the accused had to be accepted and since the trial court had precisely done that there was no reason to interfere with the judgment of the trial court. Herein, when the factual position is analysed in the background of the conclusions arrived at by the High Court, the inevitable conclusion is that the High Court's judgment is correct. The appellant-accused purchased an undivided share in the property concerned vide sale deeds dated 7-5-1993 and 24-5-1993, and allegedly sowed some bajra crop therein claiming possession. Prosecution alleging that deceased was the co-owner and was in possession of said land for a long time. On the day of occurrence when PW 8 was ploughing the agricultural land, and his father (deceased) was also standing there, accused armed with lathis and jaellies came there. They grievously assaulted the deceased and also caused injuries to PW 12 L, D and M (uncle, aunt and sister of PW 8 respectively). The entire incident lasted for about 2/2 ½ minutes. After admitting the injured at Primary Health Centre, PW 8 proceeded to the police station where his statement was recorded at 1.50 p.m.

Two of the accused had also sustained injuries which were found simple in nature. Deceased died on the same day.

Trial court acquitted accused on following grounds: (i) since the accused were in possession of land since 16 days prior to occurrence having purchased the same, the complainant party had no right to destroy the bajra crop sown by them; and when complainants inflicted injuries on them, they rightfully exercised their right of private defence of person and property; (ii) presence of PW 8 at place of occurrence was doubtful; (iii) injuries sustained by accused were not explained by prosecution; and (iv) FIR was antedated and ante-timed.

The High Court by impugned judgment reversed the said judgment. Initially eight persons were arrayed as accused. The High Court did not grant special leave to appeal in respect of Accused 6 to 8. Accused 1 dying during pendency of appeal. Hence, Accused 2 to 5 had preferred the instant appeal.

It was submitted by the appellants that: (i) view taken by trial court being a plausible one, High Court should not have interfered therewith; (ii) "settled possession" on part of accused having been established by trial court inter alia on basis of admission made by PW 8 vide Exts. DN and DQ, High Court erred in interfering therewith; (iii) exercise of right of private defence on part of injured accused S and R having been accepted and the High Court not granting special leave to appeal so far as they were concerned, same benefit ought to have been extended to appellants too; and (iv) injuries sustained by accused not being explained, and FIR having been ante-dated and ante-timed, no interference with judgment of trial court acquitting accused was warranted.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held:

It is true that right of private defence need not be specifically raised. The right of private defence can be exercised provided any occasion arises therefor. Appellants were not in settled possession of the property. If they were not, they had no right of private defence to defend the possession of the property. Furthermore, they came wholly armed, whereas except L who was having a small twig (kamari), the deceased party were not armed with any weapon. The kamari was not a dangerous weapon. No grievous injuries could have been caused by use thereof and in fact no grievous injuries have been suffered by the accused. (Paras 46 to 51)

Presence of PW 12 at place of occurrence was admitted. Presence of PW 8 was doubted by trial court only on the ground that he got his father admitted at 2.30 p.m. His presence could not have been doubted on such slender evidence. He was driving the tractor. The entire occurrence lasted for only 2/2 ½ minutes. No suggestion was given by the defence that no tractor was found at the place, or it was deceased himself who was driving the tractor. Evidence of PW 8 was found trustworthy and he was cross-examined on all material points. The reason why he suffered no injury was also satisfactorily explained by stating that by the time he reached there all accused had fled away. (Paras 54 and 55)

There cannot be any doubt or dispute that when two views are possible, appellate court should not interfere with judgment of acquittal. But this has many exceptions. The instant case is a case where no two views are possible. Trial court erred in acquitting accused. Judgment of the High Court convicting appellants calls for no interference. [5050] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Appeal against acquittal — Powers of appellate court — Scope

The following principles emerge from the case law:

1. The accused is presumed to be innocent until proven guilty. In the instant case, the accused possessed this presumption when he was before the trial court. The trial court's acquittal further bolstered the presumption that he was innocent.

2. The power of reviewing evidence is wide and the appellate court can reappreciate the entire evidence on record. It can review the trial court's conclusion with respect to both facts and law, but the appellate court must give due weight and consideration to the decision of the trial court.

3. The appellate court should always keep in mind that the trial court had the distinct advantage of watching the demeanour of the witnesses. The trial court is in a better position to evaluate the credibility of the witnesses.

4. The appellate court may only overrule or otherwise disturb the trial court's acquittal if it has "very substantial and compelling reasons" for doing so.

5. If two reasonable or possible views can be reached — one that leads to acquittal, the other to conviction — the High Courts/appellate courts must rule in favour of the accused. (Para 39). Dhanapal v. State, (2009) 10 SCC 401: (2009) 82 AIC 160 (SC).

In an appeal from acquittal under Sections 378 CrPC, the High Court has full power to reappreciate and reassess the entire evidence upon which the order of acquittal was founded and then to come to its own conclusion. There is no limitation placed on that power of the High Court. CrPC makes no difference in the power of the appellate court, between the appeal filed by the State or by other person but the appellate court would not be justified merely because it feels that a different view should be taken for reasons which are not so strong. [5062] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Appeal against acquittal — When High Court should not disturb trial court's order of acquittal — Rule of prudence — Reiterated, if on appraisal of evidence and on considering relevant attending circumstances, it is found that two views are possible, one for acquitting accused and other for convicting accused, in such a situation rule of prudence should guide High Court not to disturb order of acquittal made by trial court — Unless conclusions of trial court drawn on evidence on record are found to be unreasonable and perverse or unsustainable, High Court should not interfere with the order of acquittal

Having regard to the entire evidence and considering the judgments of the courts below, it appears that the view taken by the trial court was reasonable and plausible. It is well settled that, if on appraisal of the evidence and on considering the relevant attending circumstances it is found that two views are possible, one, as held by the trial court, for acquitting the accused and the other for convicting the accused, in such a situation the rule of prudence should guide the High Court not to disturb the order of acquittal made by the trial court. Unless the conclusions of the trial court drawn on the evidence on record are found to be unreasonable and perverse or unsustainable, the High Court should not interfere with the order of acquittal. (Para 61)

The evidence of the eyewitnesses including injured witnesses does not at all inspire confidence and their evidence is in conflict and contradiction with the medical evidence and ballistic expert's report in regard to the weapon of offence, which was different from the one sealed in the police station. The High Court disregarded the rule of judicial prudence in converting the order of acquittal to conviction. (Para 62)

In view of the facts and circumstances, the prosecution failed to prove its case beyond all reasonable doubt and the High Court committed an error in interfering with the trial court's order of acquittal. Accordingly, the order of the High Court and the appellant's conviction set aside and the order of the trial court restored, acquitting the appellant. Appellate court has full power to review, reappreciate and reconsider the evidence upon which the order of acquittal is founded and its power to review and reappreciate the evidence and come to its own conclusion is not controlled by any provisions of CrPC. The Supreme Court in more than one case cautioned that an appellate court, however, must always bear in mind that in case of acquittal, there is double presumption in favour of the accused. Firstly, the presumption of innocence is available to him under the fundamental principle of criminal jurisprudence that every person shall be presumed to be innocent unless he is proved guilty by a competent court of law. Secondly, the accused having secured his acquittal, the presumption of his innocence is further reinforced, reaffirmed and strengthened by the trial court. If two reasonable views are possible on the basis of the evidence on record and one favourable to the accused has been taken by the trial court, it ought not to be disturbed by the appellate court. [5073] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Appeal against acquittal — Interference by appellate court — When called for — Principles restated

Though the Code does not make any distinction between an appeal from acquittal and an appeal from conviction so far as powers of the appellate court are concerned, certain unwritten rules of adjudication have consistently been followed by Judges while dealing with appeals against acquittal. No doubt, the High Court has full power to review the evidence and to arrive at its own independent conclusion whether the appeal is against conviction or acquittal. But while dealing with an appeal against acquittal the appellate court has to bear in mind: first, that there is a general presumption in favour of the innocence of the person accused in criminal cases and that presumption is only strengthened by the acquittal. The second is, every accused is entitled to the benefit of reasonable doubt regarding his guilt and when the trial court acquitted him, he would retain that benefit in the appellate court also. Thus, the appellate court in appeals against acquittals has to proceed more cautiously and only if there is absolute assurance of the guilt of the accused, upon the evidence on record, that the order of acquittal is liable to be interfered with or disturbed. Dhanna v. State of M.P., (1996) 10 SCC 79: 1996 SCC (Cri) 1192: AIR 1996 SC 2478.

[5075] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Appeal against acquittal — Interference by High Court when justified — On facts, High Court justified in reserving order of acquittal passed by the trial court

It is well settled that in appeal against acquittal the High Court is entitled to reappreciate the evidence if it is found that the view taken by the acquitting court was not a possible view or that it was a perverse or infirm or palpably erroneous view.

In the present case the defence failed to establish the theory of alibi still the trial court accepted the theory of alibi as put forward by the defence and extended benefit of doubt to the appellants. The said reasoning of the trial court was clearly perverse, unreasonable and against the weight of evidence. Under these circumstances the High Court was perfectly justified in interfering in appeal against acquittal and in coming to its own conclusion by appreciating the evidence led by the prosecution. Hari Chand v. State of Delhi, (1996) 9 SCC 112: 1996 SCC (Cri) 950: AIR 1996 SC 1477.

[5079] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Appeal against acquittal — Interference of High Court in appeal, when called for — Principles restated

The principles relating to interference by the High Court in appeals against acquittal are well settled. While the High Court can review the entire evidence and reach its own conclusions, it will not interfere with the acquittal by the trial court unless there are strong reasons based on evidence which can dislodge the findings arrived at by the trial court, which were the basis for the acquittal. The High Court has to give due importance to the conclusions of the trial court, if they had been arrived at after proper appreciation of the evidence. The High Court will interfere in appeals against acquittals, only where the trial court makes wrong assumptions of material facts or fails to appreciate the evidence properly. If two views are reasonably possible from the evidence on record, one favouring the accused and one against the accused, the High Court is not expected to reverse the acquittal merely because it would have taken the view against the accused had it tried the case. The very fact that two views are possible makes it clear that the prosecution has not proved the guilt of the accused beyond reasonable doubt and consequently the accused is entitled to benefit of doubt. If on the same evidence two views are reasonably possible, where the court below takes a view in favour of the accused, the appellate court will not set aside the order of acquittal unless it finds the findings to be perverse, highly unreasonable, based on no evidence on record or made in ignorance of relevant evidence on record or for other such reasons. [5085] — S. 378 — Appeal against acquittal — Power of appellate court to reappreciate, review or reconsider evidence and interfere with acquittal — Scope — Principles restated — Where two views are possible on evidence on record, one taken by trial court in favour of accused should not be disturbed by appellate court — Trial court gave benefit of doubt to accused finding that prosecution had not examined material witnesses, testimony of the witnesses was unreliable and inconsistent, prosecution story was unnatural, knife produced before court as mudammal article was not the same which was used by accused in inflicting injuries — Fact that PWs tried to suppress the fact that Accused 1 also sustained injuries during the course of the same incident also creates doubt about the prosecution case — In the circumstances held, High Court erred in interfering with the possible view taken by trial court on evidence and reversing the order of acquittal — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302, 324, 143, 147 and 148

The accused persons were running a chit transaction in which successful members were given articles like vessels, watches, sarees, etc. On the day of occurrence, one such transaction was held at about 5.30 p.m. in which one N, the successful bidder was given a copper vessel (kolaga). N returned the vessel as it was old and demanded a new one which was refused. At about 9.30 p.m. on the same day when PWs 1 to 4 were near a bypass, Accused 1 to 8 who were armed with weapons like knife, rippers, stones, formed themselves into an unlawful assembly and attacked PWs 2 to 4 causing injuries. At that time A, the deceased intervened to stop the quarrel. Accused 8 then took out a button knife from the pocket and stabbed A on the left side of his chest, due to which A fell down. The complainant V along with one K took A to hospital but on the way he died. The accused persons after committing the assault, threw the clubs and rippers on the spot and ran away. The trial court found that the prosecution had failed to examine certain persons who could have unfolded the genesis of the prosecution case.

The trial court indicated that the root cause of the quarrel was refusal to exchange copper vessel (kolaga) to N, winner of the draw, but he was not examined. Likewise, K, who accompanied the deceased to the hospital, was not brought before the court. Though it was in evidence that Accused 1 was injured and was also taken to the hospital along with the deceased, some witnesses had denied the fact as to injuries sustained by the accused. The trial court had also stated that it was unnatural that the prosecution witnesses and the deceased could have gone to the bypass at about 9.30 p.m. when a shorter route was available for going to their destination. The trial court observed that there was inconsistency in prosecution evidence as to availability of electric light at the time of incident. The court also noted that the knife produced before the court as mudammal article was not the same which was used by Accused 8 for inflicting injury on the deceased. There was also no consistency in evidence as to injuries sustained by prosecution witnesses. On the basis of these findings, the trial court extended benefit of doubt to the accused-appellants and acquitted them of offences punishable under Sections 143, 147, 148, 302 and 324 IPC.

In an appeal against an order of acquittal by the State, the High Court reversed the order of the trial court. It observed that on careful examination of evidence of PWs 1 to 4, it was clearly established that deceased was done to death by Accused 8 and PWs 2 to 4 sustained injuries in the course of incident. However, the High Court did not give much weight to the fact regarding injuries sustained by Accused 1 observing that Accused 1 was neither examined by a doctor nor was a cross-complaint filed by him against the prosecuting party. It was held by the High Court that contradictions and variations were of minor nature which did not affect substratum of the prosecution case and evidence of PWs 1 to 4 had remained totally unshaken and there was a ring of truth running through their testimony which inspired confidence notwithstanding trivial omissions and discrepancies, which did not go to the root of the matter. The High Court, accordingly, set aside acquittal recorded by the trial court and convicted the appellants.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The following general principles regarding powers of the appellate court while dealing with an appeal against an order of acquittal emerge:

(1) An appellate court has full power to review, reappreciate and reconsider the evidence upon which the order of acquittal is founded.

(2) The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 puts no limitation, restriction or condition on exercise of such power and an appellate court on the evidence before it may reach its own conclusion, both on questions of fact and of law.

(3) Various expressions, such as, "substantial and compelling reasons", "good and sufficient grounds", "very strong circumstances", "distorted conclusions", "glaring mistakes", etc. are not intended to curtail extensive powers of an appellate court in an appeal against acquittal. Such phraseologies are more in the nature of "flourishes of language" to emphasise the reluctance of an appellate court to interfere with acquittal than to curtail the power of the court to review the evidence and to come to its own conclusion.

(4) An appellate court, however, must bear in mind that in case of acquittal, there is double presumption in favour of the accused. Firstly, the presumption of innocence is available to him under the fundamental principle of criminal jurisprudence that every person shall be presumed to be innocent unless he is proved guilty by a competent court of law. Secondly, the accused having secured his acquittal, the presumption of his innocence is further reinforced, reaffirmed and strengthened by the trial court. (Para 42)

(5) If two reasonable views are possible on the basis of evidence on record and one favourable to the accused has been taken by the trial court, it ought not to be disturbed by the appellate court. (Para 44)

In the present case, the High Court ought not to have disturbed the order of acquittal recorded by the trial court. It is not material whether Accused 1 had or had not filed a complaint or he was or was not examined by a doctor, but the fact that even though it was the case of prosecution that Accused 1 was injured during the course of incident, prosecution witnesses tried to suppress that fact which would throw doubt as to the correctness of the case or the manner in which the incident had happened. (Para 43)

If in the light of the circumstances of the case, the trial court felt that the accused could get benefit of doubt, the said view cannot be held to be illegal, improper or contrary to law. Hence, even though in an appeal against acquittal, powers of the appellate court are as wide as that of the trial court and it can review, reappreciate and reconsider the entire evidence brought on record by the parties and can come to its own conclusion on fact as well as on law, in the present case, the view taken by the trial court for acquitting the accused was possible and plausible. On the basis of evidence, therefore, at the most, it can be said that the other view was equally possible. A possible view on the evidence of prosecution had been taken by the trial court which ought not to have been disturbed by the appellate court. The decision of the appellate court (the High Court), therefore, is liable to be set aside. [5086] — S. 378 — Reversal of acquittal by High Court — Principles to be followed restated — Reversal of acquittal upheld

The High Court in an appeal under S. 417 of the Code of Criminal Procedure has full power to review at large the evidence on which the order of acquittal was founded and to reach the conclusion that upon the evidence the order of acquittal should be reversed. No limitation should be placed upon that power unless it be found expressly stated in the Code, but in exercising the power conferred by the Code and before reaching its conclusion upon fact the High Court should give proper weight and consideration to such matters as (1) the view of the trial Judge as to the credibility of the witnesses; (2) the presumption of innocence in favour of the accused, a presumption certainly not weakened by the fact that he has been acquitted at his trial; (3) the right of the accused to the benefit of any real and reasonable doubt; and (4) the slowness of an appellate Court in disturbing a finding of fact arrived at by a Judge who had the advantage of seeing the witness. Barati v. State of U.P., (1974) 4 SCC 258: 1974 SCC (Cri) 420: AIR 1974 SC 839: (1974) 3 SCR 570: 1974 Cri LJ 709.

[5088] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Appeal against acquittal — When interference of appellate court with acquittal called for

There cannot be any dispute in regard to the legal proposition that an appellate court while entertaining an appeal from a judgment of acquittal would not ordinarily interfere therewith, if two views are possible. But when there were very serious infirmities in the judgment of the trial court both in regard to the legal propositions as also appreciation of evidence and there were non-consideration of material facts and consideration of irrelevant facts, the appellate court's interference with the judgment of acquittal would be warranted.

Which matter deserves interference at the hands of the appellate court would depend upon the fact situation of each case. Legal proposition must be applied having regard to the fact of each case. An appellate court entertaining an appeal from the judgment of acquittal by the trial court though entitled to reappreciate the evidence and come to an independent conclusion, it should not do so as a matter of routine. In other words, if from the same set of evidence two views are possible and if the trial court has taken one view on the said evidence, unless the appellate court comes to the conclusion that the view taken by the trial court is either perverse or such that no reasonable person could come to that conclusion or that such a finding of the trial court is not based on any material on record, it should not merely because another conclusion is possible reverse the finding of the trial court. In the instant case the trial court had taken a view which the High Court has not held to be either perverse, unreasonable or a finding which is not based on evidence, still on reappreciation of the evidence, the High Court came to a different conclusion which on facts of this case and on the basis of the ratio of the law laid down by this Court in the above cited cases cannot be sustained. The jurisdiction and obligation of the High Court to reappreciate the evidence is identical in case involving acquittal and conviction and all that is required of the High Court while dealing with an appeal against acquittal is that it shall take into consideration and be alive of the factors which influenced the trial court to record an order of acquittal. In the present case the High Court had dealt with the case keeping in view the above settled principles and had analysed and reappreciated the entire evidence with great care and caution. The High Court while upholding the acquittal of the four co-accused found sufficient, reliable and clinching evidence to convict the appellants. The High Court was perfectly justified in setting aside the acquittal of the appellants. Amrik Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (1994) 1 SCC 563: 1994 SCC (Cri) 447.

If the trial court's view is possible and plausible, the High Court should not substitute the same by its own possible views. Due or proper weight and consideration must be given to the trial court's decision and findings. This is especially true when a witness' credibility is at issue. The difference in treatment of the case by two courts below is particularly noticeable in the manner in which they have dealt with the prosecution evidence. While the trial court took great pain in discussing all important material aspects and to record its opinion on every material and relevant point, the Judges of the High Court have reversed the judgment of the trial court without placing the very substantial reasons given by it in support of its conclusion. The trial court after marshalling the evidence on record came to the conclusion that there were serious infirmities in the prosecution's story. The reasoning given by the High Court for overturning the judgment of the trial court is wholly unsustainable and contrary to the settled principles of law crystallised by a series of judgment. [5100] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Appeal against acquittal — Reversal of acquittal when not justified — Interference with trial court's appreciation of evidence by appellate authority when called for

While the jurisdiction of an appellate court is co-extensive with that of the trial court, in the case of an appeal against a judgment of acquittal it cannot totally brush aside the appreciation of the evidence by the trial court. The reasons for reversing a judgment of acquittal should be cogent and if two views are reasonably possible, the appellate court should be slow in interfering with the judgment of the trial court, even if it is possible for it to take a different view after a process of laborious reasoning.

In the present case, in view of inordinate delay in filing FIR, prosecution's failure to show sufficient motive of the accused to commit the crime and unreliability of the uncorroborated testimony of the sole and closely related eyewitness, High Court was not justified in reversing the acquittal, and convicting the first accused (appellant 1) under Ss. 302/34, IPC. Ramji Surjya Padvi v. State of Maharashtra, (1983) 3 SCC 629: 1983 SCC (Cri) 748: AIR 1983 SC 810: 1983 Cri LJ 1105: 1983 MLJ (Cri) 520.

In this case the High Court proceeded on the ground that evidence of PWs 1 and 2 clearly established the case and as such the motive aspect had no bearing on the case. The High Court recorded its finding on the aspect of motive without dispelling valid reasons given by the trial court. It held that the evidence of PWs 1 and 2 was trustworthy as nothing had been elicited in their cross-examination to discredit their testimony. Here again, it was not shown as to how the reasons recorded by the trial court on appreciation of the entire evidence were perverse or untenable in not relying on the evidence of PWs 1 and 2. As to the non-conducting of identification parade and its impact on the prosecution case, the High Court disagreed with the view taken by the trial court observing that the appellants and PWs 1 and 2 were from the same locality and as such not holding test identification parade was of no consequence. As to the non-examination of independent witnesses, though several independent persons had witnessed the incident, the High Court accepted the feeble explanation given by the investigating officer, that none of them came forward to give evidence because of fear of the accused. Nothing had come in evidence that the appellants were notorious criminals or they were a terror in the village. The trial court took the view that non-examination of independent witnesses seriously impaired the credibility of the prosecution case. The High Court erroneously accepted the explanation of the investigating officer. In relation to the overt acts of Appellants 1 and 2, the High Court was again not correct in ignoring the discrepancy which the trial court pointed out on the basis of conflicting evidence of PWs 1 and 2 on the one hand and that of the doctor on the other. (Para 15)

Thus the High Court committed a serious error in disturbing the order of acquittal recorded by the trial court that too without dislodging the reasons given by the trial court. Assuming one other view was possible, that itself was no ground to interfere with the order of acquittal unless it was shown that the appreciation of evidence by the trial court was either perverse or untenable and that in ordering acquittal, the trial court either ignored material evidence or that the view taken by it was patently untenable. (Para 16)

Doubtless the High Court in appeal either against an order of acquittal or conviction as a court of first appeal has full power to review the evidence to reach its own independent conclusion. However, it will not interfere with an order of acquittal lightly or merely because one other view is possible, because with the passing of an order of acquittal presumption of innocence in favour of the accused gets reinforced and strengthened. The High Court would not be justified to interfere with the order of acquittal merely because it feels that sitting as a trial court it would have proceeded to record a conviction; a duty is cast on the High Court while reversing an order of acquittal to examine and discuss the reasons given by the trial court to acquit the accused and then to dispel those reasons. If the High Court fails to make such an exercise the judgment will suffer from serious infirmity. (Para 12)

(3) Nature and scope of power under — Interference when called for/Reversal of acquittal when permissible/warranted (contd.)

In our administration of criminal justice an accused is presumed to be innocent unless such a presumption is rebutted by the prosecution by producing the evidence to show him to be guilty of the offence with which he is charged. Further if two views are possible on the evidence produced in the case, one indicating to the guilt of the accused and the other to his innocence, the view favourable to the accused is to be accepted. In cases where the court entertains reasonable doubt regarding the guilt of the accused the benefit of such doubt should go in favour of the accused. At the same time, the court must not reject the evidence of the prosecution taking it as false, untrustworthy or unreliable on fanciful grounds or on the basis of conjectures and surmises. The case of the prosecution must be judged as a whole having regard to the totality of the evidence. In appreciating the evidence the approach of the court must be integrated not truncated or isolated. In other words, the impact of the evidence in totality on the prosecution case or innocence of the accused has to be kept in mind in coming to the conclusion as to the guilt or otherwise of the accused. In reaching a conclusion about the guilt of the accused, the court has to appreciate, analyse and assess the evidence placed before it by the yardstick of probabilities, its intrinsic value and the animus of witnesses. It must be added that ultimately and finally the decision in every case depends upon the facts of each case. (Para 11). Harijana Thirupala v. Public Prosecutor, High Court of A.P., (2002) 6 SCC 470: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1370: AIR 2002 SC 2821.

[5102] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Appeal against acquittal — Review of evidence and interference with order of acquittal by appellate court — When called for — Paramount consideration is prevention of miscarriage of justice — There must be compelling and substantial reasons for interference — Such reasons exist where judgment of acquittal is unreasonable and eliminates relevant and convincing materials — Where two views are possible, one favourable to accused should be preferred — Prosecution case that the accused had exhorted the co-accused, who was having a pistol, to kill the deceased — High Court finding that prosecution failed to establish the factum of exhortation, acquitting the accused — Held on facts, High Court's view being a possible view, no interference called for (Paras 10 and 11)

There is no embargo on the appellate court reviewing the evidence upon which an order of acquittal is based. Generally, the order of acquittal shall not be interfered with because the presumption of innocence of the accused is further strengthened by acquittal. The golden thread which runs through the web of administration of justice in criminal cases is that if two views are possible on the evidence adduced in the case, one pointing to the guilt of the accused and the other to his innocence, the view which is favourable to the accused should be adopted. The paramount consideration of the court is to ensure that miscarriage of justice is prevented. A miscarriage of justice which may arise from acquittal of the guilty is no less than from the conviction of an innocent. In a case where admissible evidence is ignored, a duty is cast upon the appellate court to reappreciate the evidence where the accused has been acquitted, for the purpose of ascertaining as to whether any of the accused really committed any offence or not. The principle to be followed by the appellate court considering the appeal against the judgment of acquittal is to interfere only when there are compelling and substantial reasons for doing so. If the impugned judgment is clearly unreasonable and relevant and convincing materials have been unjustifiably eliminated in the process, it is a compelling reason for interference. (Para 10)

The High Court analysed the evidence of PWs 1 and 2 to conclude that it would not have been possible for PW 2 to hear the exhortation as he was at a distance. It is not the evidence that the exhortation was in a loud voice. Evidence of PW 1 was vague about the exhortation. The view taken by the High Court is a possible view. The right of the appellate Court to review the entire evidence and come to its own conclusion bearing in mind the consideration mentioned by the Privy Council in Sheo Swarup case, AIR 1934 PC 227 and affirmed by the Supreme Court in Sanwant Singh case, AIR 1961 SC 715 is beyond dispute. In some later decisions of the Supreme Court it has been said that to the principles laid down in Sanwat Singh case may be added the further principle that "if two reasonable conclusions can be reached on the basis of the evidence on record, the appellate Court should not disturb the finding of the trial Court". This, of course, is not a new principle. It stems out of the fundamental principle of our criminal jurisprudence that the accused is entitled to the benefit of any reasonable doubt. If two reasonably probable and evenly balanced views of the evidence are possible, one must necessarily concede the existence of a reasonable doubt. But, fanciful and remote possibilities must be left out of account. To entitle an accused person to the benefit of a doubt arising from the possibility of a duality of views, the possible view in favour of the accused must be as nearly reasonably probable as that against him. If the preponderance of probability is all one way, a bare possibility of another view will not entitle the accused to claim the benefit of any doubt. It is, therefore, essential that any view of the evidence in favour of the accused must be reasonable even as any doubt, the benefit of which an accused person may claim, must be reasonable.

"A reasonable doubt does not mean some light, airy, insubstantial doubt that may flit through the minds of any of us about almost anything at some time or other; it does not mean a doubt begotten by sympathy out of reluctance to convict; it means a real doubt, a doubt founded upon reasons."

(3) Nature and scope of power under — Interference when called for/Reversal of acquittal when permissible/warranted (contd.)

So where the trial Court allows itself to be best with fanciful doubts, rejects creditworthy evidence for slender reasons and takes a view of the evidence which is but barely possible, it is the obvious duty of the High Court to interfere in the interest of justice, lest the administration of justice be brought to ridicule. *K. There is no embargo on the appellate court reviewing the evidence upon which an order of acquittal is based. Generally, the order of acquittal shall not be interfered with because the presumption of innocence of the accused is further strengthened by acquittal. The golden thread which runs through the web of administration of justice in criminal cases is that if two views are possible on the evidence adduced in the case, one pointing to the guilt of the accused and the other to his innocence, the view which is favourable to the accused should be adopted. The paramount consideration of the court is to ensure that miscarriage of justice is prevented. A miscarriage of justice which may arise from acquittal of the guilty is no less than from the conviction of an innocent. In a case where admissible evidence is ignored, a duty is cast upon the appellate court to reappreciate the evidence where the accused has been acquitted, for the purpose of ascertaining as to whether any of the accused really committed any offence or not. The principle to be followed by the appellate court considering the appeal against the judgment of acquittal is to interfere only when there are compelling and substantial reasons for doing so. If the impugned judgment is clearly unreasonable and relevant and convincing materials have been unjustifiably eliminated in the process, it is a compelling reason for interference. (Para 9)

[5110] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Appeal against acquittal — Scope of appellate power — Factors to be taken into account

The appellate court while dealing with an appeal against the order of acquittal has full power to review at large the evidence on which the order of acquittal is founded and to reach to a conclusion that upon such evidence the order of acquittal should be reversed. However, in exercising that power the appellate court should give proper weight and consideration to the following matters: (1) the views of the Trial Judge as to the credibility of the witnesses, (2) the presumption of innocence in favour of the accused, a presumption certainly not weakened by the fact that he has been acquitted at the trial, (3) the right of the accused to the benefit of any doubt, and (4) the slowness of the appellate court in disturbing a finding of fact arrived at by a Judge, who had the advantage of seeing the witnesses, which finding would not certainly be disturbed if two reasonable conclusions can be reached on the basis of the evidence on record.

In the present case the High Court was fully alive to the legal position about the power of the appellate court and the order of reversal passed by the High Court is fully warranted and justified by the evidence on record. Solanki Chimanbhai Ukabhai v. State of Gujarat, (1983) 2 SCC 174: 1983 SCC (Cri) 379: AIR 1983 SC 484: 1983 Cri LJ 822: (1983) 2 GLR 870.

The appellate court is given wide powers to review the evidence to come to its own conclusions. The appellate court may review the evidence in appeals against acquittal under Sections 378 and 386 CrPC. Its power of reviewing evidence is wide and the appellate court can reappreciate the entire evidence on record. It can review the trial court's conclusion with respect to both facts and law. But this power must be exercised with great care and

One R (PW 15), father of the complainant S (PW 1), was shot at while reading a telegram, at the main door of his residence. S was standing behind him at that time. Brother of the complainant, PW 2, ran after the four miscreants. R (deceased) also ran after the miscreants and was able to catch hold of one of them. The miscreant in his attempt to flee, fired at R which hit R in the abdomen. The miscreant was thereafter overpowered by the complainant and others while other miscreants escaped from the spot, but various witnesses managed to see their faces in the streetlight. A country-made pistol was recovered from the apprehended miscreant. R succumbed to his injuries. The accused-appellant was charged under Sections 302, 307/34 IPC and Section 27 of the Arms Act. The Sessions Judge acquitted the appellant as it found statements of PW 1, PW 2 and other eyewitnesses unreliable, inter alia, on following grounds: (1) It is unnatural that PW 1 would scribe the FIR in his own hand inside his house when his injured father was lying at the door during that period; (2) When 32-40 persons had assembled at the house of PW 1, he could not name even 2-4 persons; (3) Only one out of the four miscreants was apprehended but none tried to go after the remaining miscreants; (4) PW 1's clothes were not found smeared with blood although his father PW 15 had bleeding injuries; (5) PW 2 was disbelieved because he was unable to see the person who handed over the telegram to his father but was able to see the miscreants who were about 15 paces away and who were facing north-west, whereas PW 2 was coming from west and facing east; (6) PW 3 was disbelieved because he could not give the direction of the shop at which he was standing during occurrence; (7) Despite the fact that other miscreants were armed, no attempt was made by them to free the captured miscreants even though he was the brother of the two miscreants; (8) Persons responsible for hatching the conspiracy were not proceeded against though evidence was collected against them; (9) PW 1 and his family members were not strangers to the crime; (10) PW 3 was a chance witness and was closely associated with PW 1; and (11) Prosecution had not examined independent witnesses even when their presence was admitted.

The High Court in appeal against acquittal, on reappreciation of evidence convicted the appellant under Section 302 and Sections 307/34 IPC and Section 27 of the Arms Act and sentenced him to life imprisonment, five years RI and one year RI respectively. Hence the present appeal by the accused-appellant.

Dismissing the appeals,

Held :

The High Court had reached a conclusion contrary to that of the Sessions Court on reappreciation of evidence. It had appreciated the statement of the victim, PW 15 which the Sessions Court failed to do. The High Court had placed reliance on the fact of immediate lodging of FIR and the confirmation of the story narrated therein by ocular statement of the witnesses examined by the prosecution. The High Court had rightly taken a different view on the statement of PW 1 which has been ignored by the trial court on the basis of the insignificant aspects. Testimony of PW 15 cannot be discarded as he is the victim and the fact that he was shot at cannot be denied. A person who is shot at from a near distance would be in a position to look at the face of the assailants in the availability of sufficient light. There does not appear to be any motive or reason for PW 15 to falsely implicate the appellant in such a serious crime. The statement of PW 1 could not have been discarded whose presence in the whole of the incident was natural as the incident commenced at his house and culminated in a nearby place when he along with other persons including the deceased R, chased the miscreants and apprehended the accused-appellant with a gun in his hand. There was sufficient time and opportunity for him to see that the appellant who was involved in commission of the crime. Further, fact that PW 1 could not remember the faces of persons among the people who had gathered outside his house at the time of the incident, would not make his testimony unreliable. One has to look at the situation in which crime was committed and also the mental condition of the witness who is the son of the injured person who had witnessed the heinous crime. In the heat of the moment it is quite natural that his attention would be more towards the assailants and his injured father and also to catch hold of the assailants who were running away from the spot rather than to find out who were the persons present at the spot and in that course if he could not remember the faces of the persons present, it cannot be a ground for discarding his statement whose presence at the spot was most natural. Sessions court had discarded his statement on the ground that his clothes were not found smeared with bloodstains. The evidence on record shows that he had simply helped his father after he received the injuries and thereafter he immediately left the spot and particularly so, when there is nothing on record to disbelieve the statement of his father R (PW 15). There is no reason to disbelieve the version of PW 2 whose presence at the spot cannot be denied. His testimony does not suffer from any material incongruity or falsehood. Though PW 3 was found not to be a wholly truthful witness but so far as his statement of identifying the assailant is concerned, it does inspire confidence. The High Court's acceptance of part of the evidence and discarding the unreliable part is in accordance with law and is in tune with the established practice followed by the courts while appreciating the evidence of the witnesses. The Sessions Court committed an error in discarding his evidence wholly. The statement of PW 3 is a corroborative piece of evidence corroborating the statement of witnesses PW 1 and PW 2. The High Court has rightly found that the testimony of the doctor who first examined the deceased, is reliable regarding the nature of injuries and supported by the statement of ballistics expert (PW 21) that a gun was used in the incident. Moreover, FIR was promptly lodged and story narrated therein was confirmed by the PWs. There is no merit in the argument that appellant had been falsely implicated as he was caught near the place of incident with the country-made pistol. Deposition of DW 5 that accused-appellant had gone there only for the purpose of purchasing buffalo not inspiring confidence as only Rs 120.13 was recovered from him and any person intending to purchase buffalo would not come with such a meagre amount. Besides such defence was put forth not at the outset when he was examined for the first time under Section 313 CrPC. The stand was only taken when he was examined for the second time after examination of the court witnesses. (Paras 8 and 10)

On an overall consideration and on appreciation of the evidence on record placed by the prosecution, the conclusion is that the High Court has not committed any error or illegality in reversing the order of acquittal passed by the Sessions Court. A Granthi of a Gurudwara was murdered. According to prosecution, few days prior to the day of occurrence, the two appellants had asked the deceased to vacate the office of Granthi as the first appellant was desirous of becoming Granthi and had threatened him that in case of not doing so he would be done to death. On the day of occurrence, when the deceased was going to a bank with his son on a cycle pedalled by his son for withdrawing money from his account, he was intercepted by the appellant on the road and while the first appellant grabbed him, the second appellant stabbed him with gatra kirpan on the left side of his neck resulting in his death. The deceased's son had to run away when appellants tried to attack him also. The kirpan was later recovered pursuant to the disclosure statement made by the second appellant. However, neither the cycle nor the passbook of the bank had been taken into custody by police. The doctor, who conducted post-mortem examination, initially opined that the injury in question could not be possible by a mini-kirpan which the appellant, being an Amritdhari Sikh, was keeping but on the adjourned day, he stated that after seeing the kirpan he was of the opinion that possibility of the injury being caused by that weapon could not be ruled out. Prosecution case was mainly based on testimony of deceased's son as the sole eyewitness, which was corroborated by the testimony of other witnesses and medical evidence. The trial court acquitted the appellants holding:

(i) The prosecution failed to establish motive. It failed to show any relation between the second appellant and the first appellant. The motive if any of the first appellant i.e. his aspiration to become Granthi could not be attributed to the second appellant who had allegedly caused the injury.

(ii) The deceased's son was a got-up witness. Neither the cycle nor the passbook of the bank were taken into custody by police. There was no reason for the deceased's son to accompany the deceased.

(iii) Recovery of the weapon from the second appellant was not a sufficient circumstances.

(iv) The medical evidence contradicted the ocular evidence. The doctor only later tried to improve upon his evidence in a manner favourable to the prosecution.

(v) The prosecution case with regard to the role attributed to the second appellant, if accepted to be correct, the first appellant would not be made responsible for the injury allegedly inflicted by the second appellant on the deceased.

However, the High Court, on appeal against the acquitted considered the whole matter afresh and finding the evidence led by the prosecution trustworthy, it convicted the second appellant under Section 302 IPC and sentenced him to undergo imprisonment for life and to pay fine of Rs 5000 and in default of payment of fine to undergo further rigorous imprisonment for six months. The first appellant was convicted under Sections 302/34 IPC and similarly sentenced. Dismissing the appeal of the accused persons,

Held :

The High Court while considering the appeal against acquittal is not exercising any extraordinary jurisdiction. Its power to consider and decide the appeal against the judgment of acquittal is same as against the judgment of conviction. However, there are certain guidelines. One is that if there are two views on evidence which are reasonably possible one supporting acquittal and the other indicating conviction, the High Court in an appeal against judgment of acquittal should not interfere merely because it feels that it would as a trial court have taken a different view. The High Court will certainly interfere if it finds that the judgment of acquittal is manifestly erroneous and that the trial court has acted with material irregularity or its appreciation of evidence lacks coherence or it has made assumptions which are unwarranted or its evaluation of evidence is such as to shock the sense of justice and which has led to a miscarriage of justice or its reasoning is unintelligible or defies logic or its conclusions are against the weight of the evidence. (Para 12)

The High Court was right in overturning the judgment of acquittal of the Court of Session. Perversity is writ large on the face of the judgment of the trial court. Its appreciation of evidence is wholly inappropriate and it has acted with material irregularity. It has taken into consideration inconsequential circumstances to record acquittal of the appellants. (Para 13)

Both the appellants were acting in concert. Their intention to do away with the deceased was manifest when a couple of days before the occurrence they openly threatened him to kill him in case he did not give up the post of Granthi of the Gurudwara. The testimony of the deceased's son was cogent and reliable, and was corroborated by evidence of other witnesses. The evidence on record clearly points to murder of the deceased by the appellants with the common intention. It is not disputed that Amritdhari Sikhs always carry kirpans on their bodies and in that view of the matter it is not necessary for the appellants to carry any other arm or weapon. The kirpan (Exh. P-1) was used to commit the murder. The trial court totally went wrong when it said that the recovery of the kirpan from the second appellant was of no consequence and was not sufficient to connect the appellants with the crime. [5114] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Appeal against acquittal — Scope of High Court's power of interference — High Court has power to reappreciate the entire evidence — But while doing so it cannot interfere with the acquittal merely because it prefers another possible view — High Court should give proper weight to the views of the trial court — But where the judgment of the trial court is perverse, and its appreciation of evidence is based on surmises and conjectures, High Court would reverse the judgment of the trial court, otherwise it would result in miscarriage of justice — On facts held, trial court erred in disbelieving the trustworthy evidence of the eyewitnesses and acquitting the accused-appellants of charge under Ss. 302/34 IPC and High Court was justified in reversing trial court's judgment and convicting the accused under Ss. 302/34 — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/34

The power of the High Court, while hearing an appeal against an acquittal, is as wide and comprehensive as in an appeal against a conviction and it has full power to reappreciate the entire evidence, but if two views on the evidence are reasonably possible, one supporting the acquittal and the other indicating conviction, then the High Court would not be justified in interfering with the acquittal, merely because it feels that it would, sitting as a trial court, have taken the other view. While reappreciating the evidence, the rule of prudence requires that the High Court should give proper weight and consideration to the views of the trial Judge. But if the judgment of the Sessions Judge was absolutely perverse, legally erroneous and based on a wrong appreciation of the evidence, then it would be just and proper for the High Court to reverse the judgment of acquittal, recorded by the Sessions Judge, as otherwise, there would be gross miscarriage of justice. (Para 4)

Bearing in mind the aforesaid parameters and having scrutinised the evidence of the two eyewitnesses PWs 6 and 7 as well as the reasoning advanced by the Sessions Judge in discarding their testimony, it must be held that the Sessions Judge, instead of appreciating the evidence as a court of law, entered into an arena of conjecture and recorded the conclusion, which cannot be held to be a conclusion on the basis of the evidence on record. Instead of analysing the evidence of the two eyewitnesses and trying to find out the intrinsic worth of their testimony, the Sessions Judge, on wrong assumptions and by mere conjecture, was of the opinion that the two eyewitnesses PWs 6 and 7 could not have seen the occurrence at all. The High Court, therefore, while sitting in appeal, was fully justified in examining those reasons of the Sessions Judge and in coming to the conclusion that the reasons on the face of it are unsustainable in law and there is no justification to discard the testimony of the two eyewitnesses PWs 6 and 7. Having scrutinised the evidence of the two eyewitnesses, it is clear that the High Court was justified in making appreciation of evidence and coming to the conclusion that the two eyewitnesses must be held to be trustworthy and full reliance can be placed on their testimony. These two witnesses have not only seen the occurrence but they have also seen the accused persons with their respective weapons in their hands mercilessly assaulting the deceased, which was fully corroborated by the medical evidence and presence of a large number of injuries on the dead body of the deceased on different parts. In this view of the matter, there is no infirmity with the conclusions arrived at by the High Court in the impugned judgment and in relying upon the testimony of the two trustworthy witnesses PWs 6 and 7, one of whom happens to be the wife of the deceased and as such, is the most natural witness to be present and have witnessed the occurrence. Though the High Court while hearing an appeal against an acquittal has powers as wide and comprehensive as in an appeal against a conviction and while exercising its appellate jurisdiction the High Court can reappraise the evidence, arrive at findings at variance with those recorded by the trial court in its order of acquittal and arrive at its own findings, yet, the salutary principle which would guide the High Court is — if two views are reasonably possible, one supporting the acquittal and the other recording a conviction, the High Court would not interfere merely because it feels that sitting as a trial court its view would have been one of recording a conviction. It follows as a necessary corollary that it is obligatory on the High Court while reversing an order of acquittal to consider and discuss each of the reasons given by the trial court to acquit the accused and then to dislodge those reasons. Failure to discharge this obligation constitutes a serious infirmity in the judgment of the High Court. [5117] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Appeal against acquittal — Scope of interference by High Court and limitations thereof, restated — Where the lower appellate court by a reasoned order acquitted the accused of the charges under Ss. 276-C and 277, IT Act for filing incorrect income tax return for AY 1980-81, withholding books of accounts seized during search under S. 132 and making a wrong verification on the said return, held, High Court erred in interfering with the order of acquittal merely on the basis of the presumption under S. 132(4-A) without adverting to the reasons and grounds contained in the impugned order and without finding any proof of mens rea — Income Tax Act, 1961, Ss. 276-C, 277, 132(4-A) and 271(1-C)

The appellant was convicted under Sections 276-C and 277 of the IT Act for filing an incorrect return of income tax for AY 1980-81, making an incorrect verification thereon and deliberately withholding books of account later seized during search under Section 132. The first appellate court found the charge to be vague, and the evidence insufficient to infer criminal intent on the part of the appellant. That there was nothing on record to pinpoint the identity, veracity or falsity of entries in the books of account on which the entire prosecution case was founded. The first appellate court also took into account the fact that CIT (Appeals) had partly allowed the appellant's appeal and had recorded that the income estimated by the ITO was not based on reasonable data and therefore, directed the ITO to work out the commission @ 8% instead of 10%. It further noted that that direction had resulted in substantial reduction of the appellant's liability. Therefore the first appellate court gave benefit of doubt to the appellant. The High Court reappraised the evidence and, in view of the presumption under Section 132(4-A) of the IT Act, reversed the order of the first appellate court and affirmed the decision of the trial court. The instant appeal was opposed by the Revenue on the grounds: (i) that a conviction in a criminal proceedings could not be interfered with on the basis of the findings of the appellate authority or the Tribunal in a penalty proceedings, and (ii) that Section 279(1-A) had no application as the penalty had been reduced neither by the Commissioner nor the Chief Commissioner. Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The plenitude of power available to the court hearing an appeal against acquittal although is the same as that available to a court hearing an appeal against an order of conviction, the court will not interfere with an order of acquittal solely because a different plausible view may arise on the evidence and the court thinks that the view taken by the trial court of the evidence is not correct. In other words, the court must come to the conclusion that the view taken by the trial Judge while acquitting cannot be the view of a reasonable man on the materials on record. Moreover, the court of appeal must examine the reasons on which an order of acquittal is based and must reach the conclusion that the view taken by the acquitting Judge was clearly unreasonable. If the evaluation of the evidence made by the courts below while recording an order of acquittal does not suffer from any illegality or manifest error and the grounds on which the said order of acquittal is based are not unreasonable, then the High Court should not disturb the said order of acquittal. In the instant case, the High Court has not considered the reasons and grounds advanced by the Sessions Judge while recording an order of acquittal and by merely relying upon the presumption arising out of Section 132(4-A) of the Income Tax Act, reversed the order of acquittal without reversing the findings arrived at by the Sessions Judge on the evidence on record. The conclusion of the Sessions Judge after appreciating the evidence led by the prosecution and after perusing the appellate order of CIT (Appeals) has not been given due consideration by the High Court. (Para 4)

To attract the provisions of Section 276-C of the IT Act the prosecution has to establish that the accused wilfully attempted in any manner to evade any tax, penalty or interest chargeable or imposable under the Act. Similarly a statement made by a person in any verification under the Act can be an offence under Section 277 if he either knew or believed the same to be false or did not believe to be true. Necessary mens rea, therefore, is required to be established by the prosecution to attract the provisions of Section 277. There is nothing in Section 132(4-A) which would establish the ingredients of the offences under Sections 276-C and 277. More so, when in the instant case, the ITAT while interfering with the penalty imposed under Section 271(1-C) of the Act came to a positive finding that there was no act of concealment on the part of the assessee and he had returned the income on estimate basis. The ITAT further found that it was a case purely on difference of opinion as to the estimates and not a case of concealment of income or even furnishing of inaccurate particulars of income. (Paras 4 and 8)

Therefore, the High Court was totally in error in interfering with the order of acquittal passed by the Sessions Judge by an elaborate and well-reasoned judgment. (Para 9)

The literal interpretation sought to applied to Section 279(1-A) of the IT Act in the second contention of the Revenue cannot be accepted when it is found that CIT (Appeals) has reduced the penalty. Further that the Tribunal has totally set aside the order imposing penalty could not have been lost sight of by the High Court while considering the question whether the order of acquittal passed by the Sessions Judge had to be interfered with or not, particularly, when the gravamen of indictment related to filing of incorrect return and making wrong verification of the statements filed in support of the return, resulting in initiation of penalty proceedings. Therefore, the High Court was not justified in interfering with the order of acquittal. (Para 11). Prem Dass v. ITO, (1999) 5 SCC 241: 1999 SCC (Cri) 1004: AIR 1999 SC 1079: (1999) 236 ITR 683.

[5118] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Appeal against acquittal — Strong and convincing reasons must exist for interference by appellate court — In a group clash, members of both the groups sustaining injuries and one belonging to the prosecution party succumbing to his injuries — Serious injuries suffered by members of the accused party not explained by prosecution — Accused claiming to have acted in self-defence — Prosecution version not containing the whole truth and therefore trial court giving benefit of doubt to accused — High Court proceeding on the footing that presence of injuries on the accused persons established their participation in the occurrence by forming unlawful assembly — Held, whole truth not revealed by the prosecution and the real question as to who were the aggressors could not be conclusively ascertained — High Court therefore, erred in reversing the acquittal recorded by trial court without giving cogent and convincing reasons for its interference — Hence conviction and sentence awarded by High Court set aside — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 147, 148, 323 & 324, 326 r/w 149 and 34

The Appellate Court while reversing the order of acquittal has to consider the entire evidence in detail. It should be slow in reversing the order of acquittal and unless there are good and strong grounds the acquittal should not be interfered with.

In this case the High Court mainly seems to have proceeded on the footing that the presence of injuries on some of the accused by virtue of the fact that the injuries were found on them establishes them as members of an unlawful assembly. It may be treated that the presence can be accepted but the important question is as to how they are culpable particularly when they come forward with a plausible explanation by giving a report about the occurrence at the earliest moment. The prosecution has not come forward with the whole truth. The prosecution at the most has established that an occurrence has taken place in which some persons on either side received injuries. No explanation was given as to how four accused happened to receive injuries. In such a situation the version given by the defence cannot be rejected. Consequently a grave doubt arises about the credibility and truthfulness of the version put forward by the prosecution. Consequently the convictions and sentences awarded against the appellants are set aside. Ram Milan v. State of U.P., 1993 Supp (1) SCC 561: 1993 SCC (Cri) 348: AIR 1992 SC 1577.

[5119] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Appeal against acquittal — Powers of appellate court — Scope — Reiterated — On facts held, High Court erred in setting aside the order of acquittal by making observations in abstract and general manner without even discussing the factors which weighed with the trial court in recording acquittal

There is no embargo on the appellate court reviewing the evidence upon which an order of acquittal is based. Generally, the order of acquittal shall not be interfered with because the presumption of innocence of the accused is further strengthened by acquittal. However, judgment of acquittal can be interfered with only when there are compelling and substantial reasons for doing so. If the impugned judgment is clearly unreasonable, and relevant and convincing materials have been unjustifiably eliminated in the process, it is a compelling reason for interference. (Para 5)

If two views are possible on the evidence adduced in the case, one pointing to the guilt of the accused and the other to his innocence, the view which is favourable to the accused should be adopted. The paramount consideration of the court is to ensure that miscarriage of justice is prevented. A miscarriage of justice which may arise from acquittal of the guilty is no less than from the conviction of an innocent. In a case where admissible evidence is ignored, a duty is cast upon the appellate court to reappreciate the evidence where the accused has been acquitted, for the purpose of ascertaining as to whether any of the accused really committed any offence or not. (Para 5)

On facts held, the High Court's judgment is clearly indefensible. By making observations in an abstract and general manner it concluded that the discrepancies were immaterial, without even discussing the factors which weighed with the trial court to hold that the prosecution evidence was not cogent and credible. Therefore, the order of acquittal should not have been set aside in the manner as done. (Para 6). *V.N. The High Court does not ordinarily set aside a judgment of acquittal in a case where two views are possible, although, the view of the appellate court is a more probable one. However, while dealing with a judgment of acquittal, it is free to consider the entire evidence on record so as to arrive at a finding as to whether the views of the trial court were perverse or otherwise unsustainable. It is also entitled to consider as to whether in arriving at a finding of fact, the trial Judge has failed to take into consideration admissible evidence and has taken into consideration evidence brought on record contrary to law. Similarly, wrong placing of burden of proof may also be a subject-matter of the scrutiny by the appellate court. (Paras 9 to 13)

On 12-4-1992, at about 9 p.m., while the deceased R and his wife C were irrigating their sugarcane field in the moonlit night and a lantern was hanging nearby, the appellants armed variously are alleged to have entered their field. They stopped running of motor resulting in exchange of abuses. Hearing the noise CR (PW 2), S (PW 3), V and SW arrived at the place of occurrence with torches. B allegedly fired from his gun at R, whereas A-5 fired at his wife. A-6 was said to have fired at their son RV (PW 1). Other accused were also alleged to have fired from their respective weapons. On receiving injuries R and C ran a few paces but fell down dead at some distance. PW 1 thereafter went to a police station which was 28 km away from the place of occurrence in a tractor, along with PW 2 and V and lodged FIR at about 0025 hours on 13-4-1992, which was dispatched to the court at about 6.25 a.m. on the same day, but which reached the court only on 18-4-1992. PW 7, SI of the police station, reached the place of occurrence and found the dead bodies lying in the field. He made an attempt to arrest the accused at night.

In the meantime, PW 1 who had received a gun shot injury was examined by the doctor (PW 4) at about 4 a.m. on 13-4-1992, and was advised to take an x-ray of the injured part. However, x-ray was taken only on 18-4-1992 by PW 6, Senior Radiologist, who found an opaque substance, which according to him was a metallic pellet in the upper part of his right arm.

PW 1 allegedly came back to the village at 6 a.m. Inquest of the dead bodies started at 8 a.m. and concluded at 9.30 a.m. whereafter dead bodies were taken for autopsy at about 12/12.30 p.m. The post-mortem was done only on 14-4-1992 by PW 9 because no autopsy surgeon was available on previous day.

The trial court acquitted the appellants, inter alia, holding that: (i) FIR was ante-timed and antedated; (ii) exact time of occurrence was not proved; (iii) injuries on the person of PW 1 were doubtful; (iv) evidence of PW 2 and PW 3, who were chance witnesses was unreliable; and (v) medical evidence did not support the prosecution case.

On an appeal preferred thereagainst by the State, a Division Bench of the High Court reversed the same. Hence the present appeal by the accused-appellants. Budh Singh v. State of U.P., (2006) 9 SCC 731: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 377: AIR 2006 SC 2500: 2006 Cri LJ 2886: (2006) 4 All LJ 284.

[5123] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Appeal against acquittal — Principles to be followed by the High Court

The principles governing appeals against acquittal are thus firmly established and the issue cannot now be reopened. The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898 by S. 423, has accorded parity to appeals against conviction and appeals against acquittal; the Code makes no distinction between the powers of the appellate Court in regard to the two categories of appeals and therefore the High Court has powers as full and wide in appeals against acquittal as in appeals against conviction. Whether the High Court is dealing with one class of appeals or the other, it must equally have regard to the fundamental principles of Criminal Jurisprudence that unless the statute provides to the contrary, there is a presumption of innocence in favour of the accused and secondly that the accused is entitled to the benefit of reasonable doubt. Due regard to the views of the trial Court as to the credibility of witnesses in matters resting on pure appreciation of evidence and the studied slowness of the appellate Court in disturbing a finding of fact arrived at by a judge who had the advantage of seeing and hearing the witnesses, where such seeing and hearing can be useful aids to the assessment of evidences, are well-known principles which generally inform the administration of justice and govern the exercise of all appellate jurisdiction. They are self-imposed limitations on a power otherwise plenary and like all voluntary restraints, they constitute valuable guidelines. Such regard and slowness must find their reflection in the appellate judgment, which can only be if the appellate Court deals with the principal reasons that influenced the order of acquittal and after examining the evidence with care gives its own reasons justifying a contrary view of the evidence. It is implicit in this judicial process that if two views of the evidence are reasonably possible, the finding of acquittal ought not to be disturbed. Ram Jag v. State of U.P., (1974) 4 SCC 201: AIR 1974 SC 606.

Where the view taken by the trial court in acquitting the accused is extremely perverse and is not reasonably sustainable on the evidence on record, then the appellate court can interfere with such an order of acquittal and set at naught the injustice done to the parties. When facts of the present case are examined in the light of this well-settled principle regarding the scope and power of the High Court in interfering with an order of acquittal, the High Court in the present case cannot be said to have committed any illegality but on the other hand it has arrived at a proper and just conclusion. While there cannot be any denial of the factum that the power and authority to appraise the evidence in an appeal, either against acquittal or conviction stands out to be very comprehensive and wide, but if two views are reasonably possible, on the state of evidence: one supporting the acquittal and the other indicating conviction, then and in that event, the High Court would not be justified in interfering with an order of acquittal, merely because it feels that it, sitting as a trial court, would have taken the other view. While reappreciating the evidence, the rule of prudence requires that the High Court should give proper weight and consideration to the views of the trial Judge. But if the judgment of the Sessions Judge was absolutely perverse, legally erroneous and based on a wrong appreciation of the evidence, then it would be just and proper for the High Court to reverse the judgment of acquittal, recorded by the Sessions Judge, as otherwise, there would be gross miscarriage of justice. [5129] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Appeal against acquittal — Principles reiterated

The appellate court should not ordinarily set aside a judgment of acquittal in a case where two views are possible, though the view of the appellate court may be the more probable one. While dealing with a judgment of acquittal, the appellate court has to consider the entire evidence on record, so as to arrive at a finding as to whether the views of the trial court were perverse or otherwise unsustainable. The appellate court is entitled to consider whether in arriving at a finding of fact, the trial court had failed to take into consideration admissible evidence and/or had taken into consideration the evidence brought on record contrary to law. Similarly, wrong placing of burden of proof may also be a subject-matter of scrutiny by the appellate court. (Para 12)

In exceptional cases where there are compelling circumstances, and the judgment under appeal is found to be perverse, the appellate court can interfere with the order of acquittal. The appellate court should bear in mind the presumption of innocence of the accused and further that the trial court's acquittal bolsters the presumption of his innocence. Interference in a routine manner where the other view is possible should be avoided, unless there are good reasons for interference. (Para 19)

The findings of fact recorded by a court can be held to be perverse if the findings have been arrived at by ignoring or excluding relevant material or by taking into consideration irrelevant/inadmissible material. The finding may also be said to be perverse if it is "against the weight of evidence", or if the finding so outrageously defies logic as to suffer from the vice of irrationality. (3) Nature and scope of power under — Interference when called for/Reversal of acquittal when permissible/warranted (contd.)

It is not the correct position in law that the appellate court is precluded from assessing the evidences in an appeal arising out of the judgment of acquittal. If the finding made by the trial court is against the weight of the evidence and the view taken by the trial court is unreasonable, the appellate court will be justified in rejecting such unreasonable finding made by the trial court which is against the weight of the evidence adduced in the case and the court of appeal will be quite competent to set aside the order of acquittal and convict the accused.

In this case the High Court has taken pains in analysing the evidences in detail, by adverting to each and every finding made by the trial court and has given cogent reasons for not accepting the finding made by the Sessions Judge in holding that the prosecution case was not proved beyond doubt. The prosecution case was proved by a number of eyewitnesses and there was no justification to hold that the accused persons were entitled to the benefit of doubt. There is, therefore, no reason to interfere with the judgment impugned in these appeals and the appeals are therefore, dismissed. Kathavan Servai v. State of T.N., 1994 SCC (Cri) 69.

The Supreme Court is not precluded or the court hearing the appeal against acquittal is not prevented from examining and reappreciating the evidence on record. But the duty of a court hearing the appeal against acquittal in the first instance is to satisfy itself if the view taken by the acquitting court exercising appellate jurisdiction was possible view or not. And if the court comes to conclusion that it was not, it can on reappreciation of evidence reverse the order. [5132] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Appeal against acquittal — Power of High Court to reverse acquittal — Practice and considerations restated — On facts the overall view of the evidence by the trial Court was reasonable and should not have been disturbed

Although in an appeal from an order of acquittal the powers of the High Court to reassess the evidence and reach its own conclusions are as extensive as in an appeal against an order of conviction, yet, as a rule of prudence, it should always give proper weight and consideration to such matters as (1) the views of the trial Judge as to the credibility of the witnesses; (2) the presumption of innocence in favour of the accused, a presumption certainly not weakened by the fact that he has been acquitted at the trial; (3) the right of the accused to the benefit of any doubt; and (4) the slowness of an appellate Court in disturbing a finding of fact arrived at by a Judge who had the advantage of seeing the witnesses. Where two reasonable conclusions can be drawn on the evidence on record, the High Court should, as a matter of judicial caution, refrain from interfering with the order of acquittal recorded by the Court below. In other words, if the main grounds on which the Court below has based its order acquitting the accused, are reasonable and plausible, and cannot be entirely and effectively dislodged, or demolished, the High Court should not disturb the acquittal.

On facts, the overall view of the evidence taken by the trial Court was reasonable. While it is true that some of the reasons given by the trial Court, if taken individually, do not appear to be substantial or impeccable, but taken in their totality, they certainly render the evidence of the material prosecution witnesses unsafe to be acted upon. The vitiating circumstance of delay in lodging the FIR and further delay in recording statements of eyewitnesses has not been effectively dispelled by the High Court, except by acceptance of the ipse dixit of the sub-inspector. The reversal of acquittal by the trial Court was unjustified in the circumstances. Ganesh Bhavan Patel v. State of Maharashtra, (1978) 4 SCC 371: 1979 SCC (Cri) 1: AIR 1979 SC 135: 1979 Cri LJ 51.

High Court did not exceed its powers in interfering with the order of acquittal passed under Ss. 376 and 511, IPC, by the trial court — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 375, 376 and 511

There is no limitation on the part of the appellate court to review the evidence upon which an order of acquittal is founded. The different expressions used in different judgments of the Supreme Court to the effect that there must be "sufficient and compelling reasons" or "good and sufficiently cogent reasons" for the appellate court to alter an order of acquittal to one of conviction, by no manner curtail the power of an appellate court in an appeal against acquittal to review the entire evidence and come to its conclusion. But in doing so the appellate court should consider every matter on record and the reasons given by the trial court in support of the order of acquittal; and should interfere on being satisfied that the view taken by the acquitting Judge is unreasonable. If two views are possible on a set of evidence then the appellate court need not substitute its own view in preference to the view of the trial court which has recorded an order of acquittal. If the Sessions Judge acquits an accused by giving undue importance to minor discrepancies and taking a suspicious view of the evidence based on conjectures then the High Court will be fully justified in interfering with the order of acquittal. But all the same while reversing an order of acquittal the High Court must give sufficient grounds for holding that the appreciation of evidence by the trial court is unsupportable.

In the instant case, the High Court on reading the evidence of the prosecutrix has come to the finding that the prosecutrix's evidence was cogent and clear to the effect that there was no penetration of the organ of the accused into the vagina of the prosecutrix and on the other hand the accused merely rubbed his genital organ as a result of which there was discharge of hot white liquid substance which fell on the thighs of the prosecutrix. On going through the reasoning advanced by the High Court for interfering with an order of acquittal passed by the trial court, it has to be held that the High Court has not exceeded the parameters indicated in the judgments of the Supreme Court for interference with an order of acquittal.

In assessing the testimonial potency of the victim's version, human psychology and behavioural probability must be looked into. The inherent bashfulness and the feminine tendency to conceal the outrage of masculine sexual aggression are factors which are relevant to improbabilise the hypothesis of false implication. The High Court review of the evidence on record and on examining the reasons given by the learned Sessions Judge for according an order of acquittal was fully justified in interfering with the said order of acquittal. Madan Lal v. State of J&K, (1997) 7 SCC 677: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1151: AIR 1998 SC 386.

According to the prosecution, the appellant along with another person, went to the teastall of the deceased on 27-3-1989 at about 7.30 p.m. armed with a dharia and inflicted four blows to the deceased with that dharia, as a result of which the deceased sustained serious injuries on head and other parts of his body. He was shifted to the hospital where he succumbed to the injuries. At about 7.45 p.m. a message was received at the police station from the hospital about the serious injuries sustained by the deceased. The intimation was recorded as crime entry in the police station. Thereafter, statement of PW 4 was recorded at the police station and FIR (Ext. 30) was registered. On completion of investigation, charge-sheet was filed against the accused persons. The trial court discarded the testimony of the eyewitnesses (PW 4, PW 5, PW 6 and PW 9) cited by the prosecution and acquitted the accused by relying mainly upon the following aspects: (i) the crime entry in the police station diary was the first information report under Section 154 CrPC and not the complaint lodged by PW 4 (Ext. 30); (ii) the time of death of the deceased was not established, hence the prosecution story was doubtful; (iii) identity of the muddamal articles was doubtful as the witnesses had not been shown such items and had not identified; (iv) identity of PW 9 was also doubtful and in his place somebody was placed; (v) the investigation carried by the IO was not truthful but was shaky, which created doubt; (vi) statements of some of the witnesses by police under Section 162 CrPC were recorded late and therefore, there was chance for manipulation; (vii) non-cognizable complaint lodged by A-1 was not admissible in evidence as it was given to the IO during course of investigation; and (viii) the contradictions in the evidence of witnesses were also creating doubt on the veracity of the prosecution case. In appeal the High Court relied upon the testimony of the eyewitnesses and convicted the appellant under Section 302 IPC. It found that the appellant was the prime accused who had given four successive dharia-blows on the vital organs of the deceased which resulted in his death. The weapon of offence recovered from the appellant was stained with blood Group 'B' which was the blood group of the deceased. The statements of three eyewitnesses viz. PW 4, PW 6 and PW 9 proved the version of the prosecution leading to the unerring conclusion that it was the appellant alone who had committed the murder of the deceased by inflicting four successive blows with the weapon of offence. The evidence of the eyewitnesses stood corroborated by the medical evidence of the doctors.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

None of the aforesaid circumstances or aspects relied upon by the trial court can be held to be based upon legal evidence. Whether the crime entry was the first information report would not change the nature of the allegation made against the accused as no discrepancy is pointed out in the aforesaid entries. The said entry was recorded on the basis of report received from the hospital and the entry was on the basis of the statement of the complainant. In the absence of any discrepancy in the aforesaid two documents, the accused-appellant could not be acquitted. The two entries did not make the so-called two versions possible. The only inference of the two entries is that occurrence had taken place in which the deceased had died and the appellant had inflicted injuries. Similarly the time of death in no way proves the appellant to be innocent. In the presence of the ocular testimony of eyewitnesses that occurrence had taken place on 27-3-1989 at about 7.30 p.m. in which the injuries found on the person of the deceased were caused by the appellant, the time of death of the deceased ascertained on the basis of opinion of the doctor was in no way helpful to the appellant. The trial court had no reason to hold that the identity of the weapon of offence was doubtful or PW 9 was not the prosecution witness whose statement had been recorded under Section 161 CrPC. The defects in the investigation holding it to be shaky and creating doubts also appears to be the result of the imaginative thought of the trial court. Otherwise also, defective investigation by itself cannot be made a ground for acquitting the accused. The trial court was also not justified in holding that the statements of the witnesses under Section 161 CrPC were recorded late by the police and that there was any chance of manipulation. The FIR is proved to have been recorded within 15 minutes of the occurrence and its copy furnished to the Magistrate within 24 hours, which rules out the possibility of manipulation. The contradictions in the evidence of the witnesses, referred to in the judgment of the trial court, are of very minor nature which instead of discarding their testimony strengthens the case of the prosecution of the witnesses being truthful as they were not shown to have made parrot-like statements. A critical examination of the judgment of the trial court shows that the view taken by it was uncalled for, not based upon the facts of the case or the legal evidence tendered in the case and was the result of conjectures, imagination and hypothesis. The High Court rightly held that the conclusions arrived at by the trial court were factually and legally incorrect. The High Court was, therefore, justified in re-examining the whole evidence produced in the case and holding that the accused-appellant was proved to have committed the offence of murder beyond all reasonable doubt. He has rightly been convicted and sentenced for the commission of the offence under Section 302 IPC. There is no illegality or error of jurisdiction in the judgment of the High Court requiring the Supreme Court's interference. (Para 8)

Though the High Court has full powers to review the evidence upon which an order of acquittal is based, it will not interfere with an order of acquittal because with the passing of an order of acquittal the presumption of innocence in favour of the accused is reinforced. The High Court should be slow in disturbing the finding of the fact arrived at by the trial court. The golden thread which runs through the web of administration of justice in criminal case is that if two views are possible on the evidence adduced in the case, one pointing to the guilt of the accused and the other to his innocence, the view which is favourable to the accused should be adopted. The paramount consideration of the court should be to avoid miscarriage of justice. A miscarriage of justice which may arise from the acquittal of guilty is no less than from the conviction of an innocent. In a case where the trial court has taken a view based upon conjectures and hypothesis and not on the legal evidence, a duty is cast upon the High Court to reappreciate the evidence in acquittal appeal for the purposes of ascertaining as to whether the accused has committed any offence or not. Probable view taken by the trial court which may not be disturbed in the appeal is such a view which is based upon legal and admissible evidence. Only because the accused has been acquitted by the trial court, cannot be made a basis to urge that the High Court under all circumstances should not disturb such a finding. The reasons recorded by the trial court while recording an order of acquittal are unreasonable and perverse. On the basis of the evidence on record it was not possible to take a view in favour of the accused. The High Court was therefore, justified in setting aside the order of acquittal. (Para 28)

It is true, the settled legal position is that in an appeal against acquittal the High Court ought not to interfere with the order of acquittal if on the basis of the same evidence two views are reasonably possible — one in favour of the accused and the other against him. In such a case if the trial court takes a view in favour of the accused, the High Court ought not to interfere with the order of acquittal. unreasonable or the trial court records a finding of acquittal on the basis of irrelevant or inadmissible evidence, the High Court, if it reaches a conclusion that on the evidence on record it is not reasonably possible to take another view, it may be justified in setting aside the order of acquittal. A-1, A-5 and A-6 were convicted by the trial court under Sections 120 and 302 of the Penal Code. A-5 was convicted also under Sections 302 and 109 of the Penal Code as well as under Section 3 of the Explosive Substances Act. The trial court acquitted A-2, A-3 and A-4 of all the offences they were charged with.

The High Court found A-1 guilty of the offences under Section 147 IPC and after setting aside acquittal of A-2 and A-3 found them guilty under Section 148 IPC. The High Court also held A-2 guilty for the offence under Section 302 IPC and A-1 and A-3 guilty under Sections 302/149 IPC. A-2 and A-3 were further held guilty under Section 3 of the Explosive Substances Act, 1908 and were convicted accordingly and all the three were sentenced to undergo life imprisonment. The conviction of A-1 and A-3 under Section 3 of the Explosive Substances Act was also maintained but no separate sentence was awarded on that count. The appeal filed by A-1 abated due to his death during the pendency of the appeal before the Supreme Court. Dismissing the appeal of A-2 and A-3 and rejecting their contention that the High Court should not have interfered with the well-reasoned judgment of the trial court and should not have reversed the findings recorded by the trial court

Held :

It is well-settled law that the appellate court should be slow in reversing the order of acquittal unless there are good and strong grounds for interference. But, in the instant case, the reasoning of the trial court in rejecting the evidence of PWs 4 and 6 is highly discrepant and patently erroneous which could not be accepted at all. The evidence of PW 4 when no infirmity was found therein, ought not to have been rejected merely on the ground that he was an uncle of the deceased. The evidence of PW 6 and other eyewitnesses has been rejected by the trial court on the ground that after the bomb had exploded PWs 4, 6 and other witnesses would not have been able to see the miscreants who had hurled the bomb due to smoke after explosion. But, on facts, this reasoning is not only faulty but perverse and could not be accepted. The High Court has given cogent and plausible reasons for rejecting the finding of the trial court and accepting the evidence of the said eyewitnesses. The High Court was right in taking that view. Tallurri Venkaiah Naidu v. Public Prosecutor, High Court of A.P., (1996) 11 SCC 355: 1997 SCC (Cri) 175: AIR 1997 SC 353.

[5140] — S. 378 — Appeal against order of acquittal — Power of High Court to interfere on reappreciation of evidence in appeal — Scope — Unless the findings of trial court are perverse or contrary to the material on record, held, High Court cannot, in appeal, substitute its finding merely because another contrary opinion was possible on the basis of the material on record — Further held, High Court must express its reasons in the judgment for holding the acquittal to be not justified — Hence, where the trial court passed the acquittal order under S. 138 of Negotiable Instruments Act on the basis of its findings on a number of points, held, the High Court erred in not applying its mind to the said points and reversing the acquittal order on totally different grounds — Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, S. 138

The respondent filed a complaint under Section 138, Negotiable Instruments Act, against the appellant alleging that the respondent had advanced to the appellant a certain sum in cash in repayment whereof the appellant issued a cheque to the respondent. That cheque was dishonoured by the bank. The appellant denied the said allegations and stated that the cheque in question was a blank one and was issued five years ago not to the respondent but to one C as security for future instalments in a chit transaction. The appellant added that C did not return the cheque even after the chit transaction was over and the said cheque was misused by the respondent in collusion with C. The trial court noticed that: (i) although the respondent complainant admitted that he did not know the appellant personally and had advanced the money at the instance of V, the respondent did not examine V to prove that fact, (ii) the respondent did not examine C despite the presence of C in the court hall, (iii) there was difference in the ink used in writing of the name and amount in the cheque and the ink used in the signature portion thereof. Therefore the trial court held that the prosecution case was not proved and dismissed the complaint. In appeal, the High Court noticed that: (i) the appellant had failed to produce the counterfoils of his cheque-book to prove the year of issuance of the cheque, and (ii) had failed to examine himself. On those bases, the High Court held the appellant to be guilty and convicted him. Thereupon the appellant filed the instant appeal by special leave.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

Sitting as an appellate court against a judgment of acquittal passed by the trial court, there was an obligation on the part of the High Court to come to a definite conclusion that the findings of the trial court were either perverse or contrary to the material on record because the High Court could not have substituted its finding merely because another contrary opinion was possible based on the material on record. (Para 5)

Moreover, while hearing an appeal against an order of acquittal, the High Court must express its reasons in the judgment for holding the acquittal to be not justified. If two reasonable conclusions can be reached on the basis of the evidence on record, the appellate court should not disturb the finding of the trial court. (Para 6)

Therefore, it is held, that the trial court was justified in coming to the said conclusion because of the said three deficiencies pointed out by the trial court, and that the respondent's complaint ought to fail. The High Court fell in error in reappreciating the case of the respondent on a totally different perspective without coming to the conclusion that the findings given by the trial court on the said three points were either irrelevant or contrary to the material on record. The High Court was in error in reversing the finding of acquittal recorded by the trial court. (Para 8). C. Antony v. K.G. Raghavan Nair, (2003) 1 SCC 1: AIR 2003 SC 182.

In the present case the High Court has carefully analysed the entire evidence and has demonstrated how the trial court has gone wrong and the conclusions drawn by the trial court are not sustainable on the evidence. It is not a case where the High Court has failed to observe the caution or misdirected itself in drawing the conclusions. The trial court had on conjecture and strained reasoning arrived at the conclusion that the prosecution case is not true. The evidence placed on record as found by the High Court is truthful and proved the fact beyond the shadow of doubt and the involvement of the appellant in the crime is clearly established. Section 378 of the new Code (corresponding to S. 417 of the old Code) gives the High Court full power to review at large the evidence upon which the order of acquittal was founded. The whole case is at large for review by the High Court both as to the facts and the law. The High Court is clothed with the plenary powers to go through the entire evidence and to come to its own conclusions as warranted by the facts of the case concerned but, of course, subject to certain guidelines laid down by the judicial pronouncements. But however circumspect and cautious approach of the High Court may be in dealing with those appeals by exercising its plenary and unlimited statutory powers, the Court is to reach its own proper conclusions of guilt or otherwise of the indicted persons as the established facts warrant and to award appropriate sentence which will be commensurate with the gravity of the offence in case of conviction. There is no embargo on the appellate court reviewing the evidence upon which an order of acquittal is based. Generally, the order of acquittal shall not be interfered with because the presumption of innocence of the accused is further strengthened by acquittal. The golden thread which runs through the web of administration of justice in criminal cases is that if two views are possible on the evidence adduced in the case, one pointing to the guilt of the accused and the other to his innocence, the view which is favourable to the accused should be adopted. The paramount consideration of the court is to ensure that miscarriage of justice is prevented. A miscarriage of justice which may arise from acquittal of the guilty is no less than from the conviction of an innocent. (Para 8)

In a case where admissible evidence is ignored, a duty is cast upon the appellate court to reappreciate the evidence where the accused has been acquitted, for the purpose of ascertaining as to whether any of the accused really committed any offence or not. (Para 8)

The principle to be followed by the appellate court considering the appeal against the judgment of acquittal is to interfere only when there are compelling and substantial reasons for doing so. If the impugned judgment is clearly unreasonable and relevant and convincing materials have been unjustifiably eliminated in the process, it is a compelling reason for interference. [5149] — S. 378 — Appeal against acquittal — Scope of consideration by appellate court — Possibility of two views, one taken by trial court and the other which is considered more probable by appellate court — Held, view of trial court should not normally be overturned because trial court which had the benefit of watching demeanour of witnesses is best judge to assess credibility of evidence (Paras 38 and 40)

While dealing with a judgment of acquittal, an appellate court must consider the entire evidence on record, so as to arrive at a finding as to whether the views of the trial court were perverse or otherwise unsustainable. Even though the appellate court is entitled to consider, whether in arriving at a finding of fact, the trial court had placed the burden of proof incorrectly or failed to take into consideration any admissible evidence and/or had taken into consideration evidence brought on record contrary to law; the appellate court should not ordinarily set aside a judgment of acquittal in a case where two views are possible, though the view of the appellate court may be the more probable one. The trial court which has the benefit of watching the demeanour of the witnesses is the best judge of the credibility of the witnesses. (Para 38)

In exceptional cases where there are compelling circumstances, and the judgment under appeal is found to be perverse, the appellate court can interfere with the order of acquittal. The findings of fact recorded by a court can be held to be perverse if the findings have been arrived at by ignoring or excluding relevant material or by taking into consideration irrelevant/inadmissible material. A finding may also be said to be perverse if it is against the weight of evidence, or if the finding so outrageously defies logic as to suffer from the vice of irrationality. (Para 40)

The High Court did not dislodge the reasons given by the trial court for acquittal and dealt with the case very casually, adopting a very superficial approach to the whole matter. The High Court did not make any attempt to appreciate the evidence with accuracy and erroneously reversed the findings of the trial court which were based on the evidence on record and for which detailed reasons had been assigned. In an appeal arising from an order of acquittal, the appellate court is not precluded from appreciating the evidence on its own if the reasons given by the trial Judge in passing the order of acquittal do not stand scrutiny and are against the weight of the evidence adduced in the trial. The appellate court will be quite justified in setting aside the order of acquittal if it appears to the court of appeal that improper consideration of the material and evidence on record was made and the reasonings of the trial Judge are wholly unjustified. It is only necessary that the court of appeal should weigh the reasonings of the trial Judge with care and caution in the light of the evidence adduced in the case by giving cogent reasons as to why such findings are unreasonable and against the evidence. In the instant case, the High Court has taken care in analysing each and every finding of the Sessions Judge in the light of the evidence adduced in the case and has given cogent reasons as to why such findings were unreasonable and not acceptable. The findings of the Sessions Judge were not accepted by the High Court by indicating that such findings were against the weight of the evidences and the same were wholly unreasonable. Accused B and his father and the deceased M all lived in the neighbourhood of each other in a village. There was a civil dispute regarding opening of a door for access to the chabutra between the houses of the parties and the deceased M filed a civil suit and obtained an injunction against the accused B restraining the latter from opening any door or window towards the chabutra of the plaintiff. The case of the prosecution was that the accused B, therefore, hatched a plan to kill M with the help of the other co-accused. To accomplish their plan, they entered the house of M at midnight and throttling him by neck, killed him and hanged him with the hook of the door in the house. They also killed his daughter who was found dead inside the house with burns. The main evidence led by the prosecution against the accused was the solitary testimony of the alleged child eyewitness aged about 6 years at the time of the incident. According to the prosecution, he along with his two younger brothers were sleeping with his deceased mother in the house of deceased M. The investigating officer claimed to have recorded the statement of the child witness under Section 161 CrPC on the next day of the incident. In his deposition the child claimed to have seen the accused B catching hold of his mother by face and the co-accused L and S assaulting her. He also stated that there were two other persons present with the accused. After witnessing the incident, he got terrified and went back to sleep. When he woke up in the morning, he found his grandfather dead and hanging on the door of the house and mother lying burnt and dead. On seeing this ghastly scene, he again fell asleep inside the house. In the morning, his maternal uncle A came and took him and his younger brothers to the village where his father lived. A was, however, not produced by the prosecution as a witness. Further, father of the child witness in his statement did not state that after the incident his son had disclosed to him the names of the assailants. Although the child had named three appellant-accused in his statement under Section 161 CrPC on 1-3-1984, the named accused were not arrested immediately thereafter. They were arrested on 12-3-1984. The child witness was examined in the court. His statement was recorded on 14-2-1985. The accused are said to have been produced in the court with their faces covered. They were then on the directions of the court asked to uncover their faces. The child is said to have identified them in the court when they were in the dock. The trial Judge recorded the demeanour of the child witness that he was pausing and sometimes faltering while deposing and did not seem to understand a few questions put to him. The trial Judge, therefore, held that it would be hazardous to rely on such shaky testimony of a child witness who could have been tutored in the period intervening the date of incident and the date of his deposition. The oral evidence led by the prosecution against the accused of hatching a plan and talking about it before and after its accomplishment, which was allegedly overheard by the witnesses had not been believed both by the trial court as also the High Court. The trial court also totally rejected the evidence of the alleged recovery of articles on the alleged information of the accused but the High Court made a mention of recovery of a few domestic articles as a corroborative evidence against the accused. The High Court relied on the sole testimony of the above eyewitness and brushed aside such serious omissions including not holding of test identification parade after the child witness had named the three assailants before the police. The High Court relied on dock identification stating that the child witness used to regularly visit his deceased grandfather with his mother and was knowing since before the incident the accused B living in the neighbourhood and other accused S and L who were also of the same village. The High Court relied on the judicial confession made by the co-accused P against the present appellant-accused as a corroborative evidence to the eyewitness account of the child. The High Court reversed the verdict of the trial court and convicted the three accused-appellants for offences for which they were charged i.e. under Sections 302/34, 396, 460, 404 IPC and Sections 11/13 of the M.P. (Dacoity Vihavaran Kshetra) Adhiniyam, 1981. They were sentenced to life imprisonment and fine of Rs 1000 each with directions that they shall suffer RI for one year in default of payment of fine. The fourth accused P was acquitted by both the courts below.

Allowing the appeal filed by the three accused, Held :

The High Court was not at all justified in reversing the verdict of acquittal passed by the trial Judge. In appeal against acquittal, the High Court is competent to reappreciate the evidence to find out whether the trial Judge has misappreciated any part of the evidence or not. Here the appreciation of the evidence made by the trial Judge is proper and the conclusions drawn are reasonable. The High Court, therefore, erred in reappreciating the evidence to substitute its own view for that of the trial Judge. (Para 35)

It is not denied that the village where the incident took place comes under dacoity-affected area to which provisions of the M.P. (Dacoity Vihavaran Kshetra) Adhiniyam, 1981 are applicable. In such circumstances, possibility of commission of the alleged crime by unknown criminals is not wholly ruled out. The High Court, as an appellate court, can reappreciate the evidence and interfere with the findings, if they are perverse or the reasons given by the trial Judge are palpably untenable. In this case the view taken by the trial court cannot be considered to be a reasonably possible view precluding interference against the verdict of acquittal. The High Court has rightly taken the view that the evidence of the eyewitness has been discarded on feeble and untenable grounds and unnecessary doubts were entertained by the trial court despite the clear and cogent evidence linking the appellant to the crime. Though the High Court has full powers to review the evidence upon which an order of acquittal is based, it will not interfere with an order of acquittal because with the passing of an order of acquittal the presumption of innocence in favour of the accused is reinforced. The paramount consideration of the court should be to avoid miscarriage of justice. A miscarriage of justice which may arise from the acquittal of guilty is no less than from the conviction of an innocent. In a case where the trial court has taken a view based upon conjectures and hypothesis and not on the legal evidence, a duty is cast upon the High Court to reappreciate the evidence in acquittal appeal for the purposes of ascertaining as to whether the accused has committed any offence or not. Probable view taken by the trial court which may not be disturbed in the appeal is such a view which is based upon legal and admissible evidence. Only because the accused has been acquitted by the trial court, cannot be made a basis to urge that the High Court under all circumstances should not disturb such a finding. (Para 11). *Harisingh M. [5158] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Appeal against acquittal — Power of appellate court to reverse orders of acquittal on a matter of fact — Principles restated — When two views possible appellate court should take the view which supports the acquittal — On facts, however, the acquittal of A-2 and A-6 need to be reversed

If on reassessment of the evidence, the appellate court comes to the conclusion that the guilt of the accused is established, the fact that the appeal is against the acquittal will be immaterial. However, if two views are possible, the court, having regard to the basic principle that presumption of innocence of the accused gets strengthened by the fact of his acquittal by court, should take the view that supports the acquittal of the accused.

On facts, the view of the evidence taken by the High Court is erroneous and that it misled itself in coming to the conclusion that the guilt of A-2 and A-6 was not established; we are of the view that prosecution has proved the guilt of the accused beyond any reasonable doubt. The trial court was, therefore, right in convicting them and that the High Court was not justified in interfering with their conviction and sentence. State of U.P. v. Nahar Singh, (1998) 3 SCC 561: 1998 SCC (Cri) 850: AIR 1998 SC 1328.

On 18-7-1986 at about 8.30 a.m., the appellant Swamiji in a position of authority in the Mutt school allegedly through PW 2, P and G called the complainant, PW 1 a student of the IXth standard to his office. The office had been partitioned and one part of it had been converted into a bedroom. PW 1 alleged that he was then subjected to unnatural offence by the appellant. His clothes, anus and panche (lungi) got soiled. He allegedly came back to his house with his brother on 28-7-1986. He gave the dirty clothes for washing to his mother. His mother, PW 4 found sticky substances in the lungi. When accosted, he allegedly told her about the indecent behaviour of the appellant. PW 8, B, the maternal uncle of Respondent 2 at that time was also present. The victim was allegedly persuaded to go back to the school. He came back to the school on 3-8-1986. PW 9, S and N were said to have been asked by the appellant to bring him again to the appellant's office. He declined to come. He allegedly made a complaint to the senior Swamiji as regards the incident who assured him of looking thereinto and asked him not to make any complaint, the prestige of the Mutt being involved. However, no action was allegedly taken. PW 1 thereafter lodged a first information report on 29-8-1986 at about 6.30 p.m. The appeal against acquittal and the criminal revision application were taken up together for hearing by the High Court. The High Court by the impugned order convicted the appellant-accused.

Allowing the appeal,

Held:

The High Court completely lost sight of the parameters of its jurisdiction to reverse a judgment of acquittal. The High Court could have made an endeavour to arrive at its independent findings. But the mind of the Judges of the High Court stood influenced. If the High Court was clear in its mind that it was dealing with a criminal case and that too with the offence under Section 377 IPC, which is a serious one, there was no reason why it had made endeavours to mediate in the internal disputes of the Mutt and for that purpose held sittings in chamber. There was also no reason why the presence of the appellant on each day of hearing was insisted upon and his absence had been adversely commented upon. A large number of irrelevant factors including the rate of conviction, legalisation of sodomy in other countries had been taken into consideration by the High Court. The appellant for no reason was condemned in the clearest possible terms. He was accused of coming to the High Court in an air-conditioned car and holding press conferences which was denied and disputed by the Public Prosecutor. He was also branded as a habitual offender. Again, although the allegation against the appellant was commission of a heinous offence, an attempt was made by the Court to get certain civil disputes between the appellant and the senior Swamiji of the Mutt settled. (Paras 38, 32 and 12)

It is one of the rarest of rare cases where a deeper scrutiny was necessary particularly when the trial court had recorded a judgment of acquittal upon assigning sufficient and cogent reasons. While deciding an appeal against acquittal, the power of the appellate court is no less than the power exercised while hearing appeals against conviction. In both types of appeals, the power exists to review the entire evidence. However, one significant difference is that an order of acquittal will not be interfered with, by an appellate court, where the judgment of the trial court is based on evidence and the view taken is reasonable and plausible. It will not reverse the decision of the trial court merely because a different view is possible. The appellate court will also bear in mind that there is a presumption of innocence in favour of the accused and the accused is entitled to get the benefit of any doubt. Further, if the appellate court decides to interfere, it should assign reasons for differing with the decision of the trial court. While deciding an appeal against acquittal, the power of the appellate court is no less than the power exercised while hearing appeals against conviction. In both types of appeals, the power exists to review the entire evidence. However, one significant difference is that an order of acquittal will not be interfered with by an appellate court, where the judgment of the trial court is based on evidence and the view taken is reasonable and plausible. Further, if it decides to interfere, it should assign reasons for differing with the decision of the trial court. (Para 8)

In the instant case the High Court had not interfered in the matter in a routine manner merely because a different view was possible. The High Court had interfered rightly, because the trial court unreasonably disbelieved the evidence of six eyewitnesses on insufficient grounds, and had also assigned reasons for interfering with acquittal. Hence, judgment of the High Court was well justified. (Para 16). Kallu v. State of M.P., (2006) 10 SCC 313: (2006) 3 SCC (Cri) 546: AIR 2006 SC 831: 2006 Cri LJ 799.

The deceased sustained gunshot injuries as a result of which he died near an octroi toll barrier. The appellants were charged with the offence of committing the murder of the deceased. The trial court held that the cumulative effect of the following circumstances made the prosecution case doubtful: (i) the FIR was not recorded or lodged at the time it is purported to have been lodged, (ii) two of the three eyewitnesses did not give the names of assailants to the third eyewitness who had come to the scene after the firing incident, (iii) recovery of cartridges one day after the occurrence, (iv) nature and position of injuries on the body of the deceased were not consistent with the testimony of the eyewitness having regard to the local site, (v) the empty cartridges alleged to have been fired by the accused-appellants causing injuries to the deceased were not sent to the ballistic expert for his opinion, nor was he examined to support the prosecution case, (vi) unnatural and inconsistent testimony of the eyewitnesses, and (vii) though a large number of persons were available at the scene of occurrence, but no independent witness, either employee of the toll barrier or of Home Guard, having office adjacent to the octroi toll barrier, or any other person was examined to support the prosecution. Accordingly, the trial court acquitted the accused persons. On appeal against the acquittal the High Court took the view that sometimes the memory of the eyewitnesses fail and held that a broad view of the evidence given by the eyewitnesses clearly indicated that the prosecution had proved its case.

Allowing the present appeal,

Held:

Having regard to the entire evidence and having carefully and closely considered the judgments of the trial court and the High Court, it appears that the view taken by the trial court was reasonable and plausible, that the prosecution failed to prove its case beyond all reasonable doubt, and that the High Court committed error in interfering with the trial court's order of acquittal. The High Court disregarded the rule of judicial prudence in converting the order of acquittal to conviction. If on appraisal of the evidence and on considering relevant attending circumstances it is found that two views are possible, one as held by the trial court for acquitting the accused and the other for convicting the accused, in such a situation the rule of prudence should guide the High Court not to disturb the order of acquittal made by the trial court. Unless the conclusions of the trial court drawn on the evidence on record are found to be unreasonable, perverse or unsustainable, the High Court should not interfere with the order of acquittal. Awadesh v. State of M.P., (1988) 2 SCC 557: 1988 SCC (Cri) 361: AIR 1988 SC 1158.

[5166] — S. 378 — Reappreciation of evidence by appellate court — When justified — Perverse findings of trial court — Findings recorded by trial court acquitting appellant found perverse — Held, reversal of acquittal by High Court by reappreciating evidence, justified

A judgment of acquittal rendered by a trial court must be given the greatest consideration and the appellate court would be slow in setting aside that judgment, and where two views are possible, the one taken by the trial court would not be disturbed. On the contrary, if the trial court's judgment was perverse, meaning thereby that it was not only against the weight of evidence but was all together against the evidence, interference was called for. The High Court in the present case was alive to its limitation in such a matter and while dealing with this argument first expressed its shock and observed that though virtually all the findings were in favour of the prosecution, yet curiously, the decision had been rendered in favour of the accused. The judgment of the trial court was accordingly held to be perverse and against the evidence. The High Court's observations were justified on the facts. Even assuming that the matter in the present case was to be treated as a first appeal, the Supreme Court too would have interfered in the matter and set aside the judgment of the trial court, as it was against the evidence and to desist from doing so would cause great injustice not only to the prosecution but even to the deceased victim and her family. There is no embargo on the appellate court reviewing the evidence upon which an order of acquittal is based. Generally, the order of acquittal shall not be interfered with because the presumption of innocence of the accused is further strengthened by acquittal. The golden thread which runs through the web of administration of justice in criminal cases is that if two views are possible on the evidence adduced in the case, one pointing to the guilt of the accused and the other to his innocence, the view which is favourable to the accused should be adopted. The paramount consideration of the court is to ensure that miscarriage of justice is prevented. A miscarriage of justice which may arise from acquittal of the guilty is no less than from the conviction of an innocent. In a case where admissible evidence is ignored, a duty is cast upon the appellate court to reappreciate the evidence in a case where the accused has been acquitted, for the purpose of ascertaining as to whether any of the accused committed any offence or not. The principle to be followed by the appellate court considering the appeal against the judgment of acquittal is to interfere only when there are compelling and substantial reasons for doing so. If the impugned judgment is clearly unreasonable and relevant and convincing materials have been unjustifiably eliminated in the process, it is a compelling reason for interference. [5170] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Appeal against acquittal — Due importance to the opinion of the Sessions Judge to be given only if arrived at after proper appreciation of evidence

In an appeal against acquittal the High Court would not ordinarily interfere with the trial Court's conclusion unless there are compelling reasons to do so, inter alia, on account of manifest errors of law or of fact resulting in miscarriage of justice. In the present case, the High Court was justified in intervening in the matter. Once it is found that the High Court was justified in entertaining the appeal against the order of acquittal, the High Court is entitled to reappreciate the entire evidence independently and can come to its own conclusion. Ordinarily, the High Court would give due importance to the opinion of the Sessions Judge if it was arrived at after proper appreciation of the evidence. This would, however, not be applicable in the present case where the Sessions Judge had made an absolutely wrong assumption of a very material and clinching aspect in the peculiar circumstances of the case. Umedbhai Jadavbhai v. State of Gujarat, (1978) 1 SCC 228: 1978 SCC (Cri) 108: AIR 1978 SC 424: 1978 Cri LJ 489: (1978) 19 GLR 268: (1978) 2 SCR 471.

The settled position of law regarding the powers of the High Court in an appeal against an order of acquittal is that the court has full powers to review the evidence upon which an order of acquittal is based and generally it will not interfere with the order of acquittal because by passing an order of acquittal the presumption of innocence in favour of the accused is reinforced. The golden thread which runs through the web of administration of justice in criminal case is that if two views are possible on the evidence adduced in the case, the view which is favourable to the accused should be adopted. Such is not a jurisdiction limitation on the appellate court but Judge-made guidelines for circumspection. The paramount consideration of the court is to ensure that miscarriage of justice is avoided. A miscarriage of justice which may arise from the acquittal of the guilty is no less than from the conviction of an innocent. (Para 7)

In a case where the trial court has taken a view ignoring the admissible evidence, a duty is cast upon the High Court to reappreciate the evidence in acquittal appeal. Probable view taken by the trial court which may not be disturbed in the appeal is such a view which is based upon legal and admissible evidence. In the instant case the trial court acquitted the accused persons by not relying upon the testimony of the three eyewitnesses on considerations which apparently appeared to be extraneous. The High Court has ascribed valid reasons for believing the statements of those witnesses by pointing out the illegalities committed by the trial court in discarding their testimonies. The High Court has also rightly held that the trial court completely ignored the basic principles of law in criminal jurisprudence which entitles the accused to claim the benefit of right of self-defence. In view of the above facts, the High Court was justified in setting aside the order of acquittal passed by the trial court. A usual brawl between the appellant and the deceased K, who was living with the appellant as his mistress, resulted in the death of the deceased. The appellant was acquitted by the trial court on the ground of various omissions, improvements and contradictions found in the testimony of the eyewitness. The High Court reversed the said acquittal by holding that there was no contradiction in the evidence of the eyewitnesses. The appellant challenged the judgment of the High Court on the grounds of (i) contradictions, improvements and omissions in the testimony of the eyewitnesses, (ii) non-examination of the fingerprint expert, (iii) non-availability of the serologist report, and (iv) difference between the statement of the eyewitnesses and the post-mortem report regarding the position of the injury inflicted on the person of the deceased. Allowing the appeal partly,

Held :

The High Court was justified in setting aside the judgment of the trial court because the judgment of acquittal is based upon surmises, conjectures and assumed contradictions. The High Court rightly found that in fact there was no contradiction in the depositions of the eyewitnesses and omissions or improvements noticed by the trial court did not amount to contradictions for the purposes of discarding the testimony of otherwise trustworthy natural witnesses. The trial court totally ignored the testimony of the eyewitnesses while holding that they had not seen the injury because, according to the FIR, the injury allegedly had been inflicted on the nose of the deceased. All the witnesses had deposed in the court that the injury was caused on the body of the deceased from behind near the right shoulder and the force with which it was caused resulted in the cutting of the vital inner parts of her body. (Para 4)

Non-examination of the fingerprint expert has not, in any way, affected the case of the prosecution because it has come on record that before the seizure of the weapon of offence many persons had handled it. Though the report of the serologist is not available on the record, yet the report of the Chemical Analyser clearly and unequivocally shows that the clothes of the appellant and the weapon of offence were stained with human blood. Non-ascertainability of the blood group cannot be made a basis to discard the evidence of the witnesses who otherwise inspire the confidence of the court and are believed by it. Hence, no fault can be found with the judgment of the High Court by which the acquittal was reversed. [5187] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Reversal of acquittal by High Court — Principles restated

The power of an appellate court to review evidence in appeals against acquittals is as extensive as its power in appeals against convictions, and before an appellate court can set aside an order of acquittal it must carefully consider the reasons given by the trial court in support of its decision and give its own reasons for rejecting them. Thus if the finding reached by the trial Judge cannot be said to be unreasonable, the appellate court should not disturb it even if it were possible to reach a different conclusion on the basis of the material on the record. This has been held to be so because the trial Judge has the advantage of seeing and hearing the witnesses and the initial presumption of innocence in favour of the accused is not weakened by his acquittal. The appellate court therefore should be slow in disturbing the finding of fact of the trial court, and if two views are reasonably possible of the evidence on the record, it is not expected to interfere simply because it feels that it would have taken a different view if the case had been tried by it. Vasudeo Kulkarni v. Surya Kant Bhatt, (1977) 2 SCC 304: 1977 SCC (Cri) 349: AIR 1977 SC 1331: 1977 Cri LJ 1000: (1977) 3 SCR 109.

The rule that in an appeal against acquittal the High Court will be slow in interfering with the findings of the trial court which has the opportunity to watch the witnesses while giving evidence before it may be largely true where the trial court records remarks about the demeanour of the witnesses. But where the prima facie appreciation of the recorded evidence is opposed to even a reasonable appraisement of the same bearing in mind the relevant point or points sought to be established by the evidence, there will be no option to the High Court in the interest of justice but to step in to do justice in the case. Ravinder Singh v. State of Haryana, (1975) 3 SCC 742: 1975 SCC (Cri) 202: AIR 1975 SC 856: (1975) 3 SCR 453: 1975 Cri LJ 765.

[5192] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Reversal of acquittal by High Court justified where the trial Court had simulated 'mere frivolities' as 'reasons' for rejecting the prosecution case

The approach of the trial Judge could not be said to be a judicial approach. Prepossessed by suspicion, he smelled something sinister in the evidence of each and every witness examined by the prosecution. Instead of logical ratiocination, he depended for his conclusions on speculation and conjectures. This is apparent from his repeated observations that he was not impressed by the demeanour of the witnesses, although he did not make any note whatever of such demeanour. Even in his judgment he did not reveal with particularity, the nature of the "demeanour" that led him to doubt the veracity of the witnesses. (Paras 13 to 19).

The view of the evidence taken by the trial Judge was not reasonably possible, and the High Court was fully justified in reversing the acquittal of the appellants. Abdul Majid Abdul Rahman v. State of Gujarat, (1976) 4 SCC 351: 1976 SCC (Cri) 625: AIR 1976 SC 1782: 1976 Cri LJ 1382.

[5206] — S. 378 — Appeal against acquittal — High Court's interference with acquittal, when not called for, reiterated — If two views are possible judgment of acquittal should be ordinarily preferred

The appeal preferred by the respondents was against a judgment of acquittal. The High Court should have, therefore, exercised its jurisdiction keeping in view the limited role it had to play in the matter. (Para 14)

The High Court itself had come to the finding that the respondents were not interested in getting the matter prosecuted. Despite the same, it allowed their appeal, opining that any lis between the parties should be decided on merits rather than on technicalities. On what basis such a statement of law was made is not known. No precedent was cited; no reason has been assigned. The High Court failed to take into consideration the fact that it was dealing with an order of acquittal and, thus, the principle of law which was required to be applied was that, if two views are possible, a judgment of acquittal should not ordinarily be interfered with. (Para 15)

The High Court therefore, misdirected itself in passing the impugned judgment. It cannot therefore be sustained. (Para 17). S. Rama Krishna v. S. Rami Reddy, (2008) 5 SCC 535: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 645: AIR 2008 SC 2066: 2008 Cri LJ 2625.

In an appeal from the order of acquittal, the court of appeal should be careful enough in weighing the reasonings of the Sessions Judge and it need not reappreciate the evidences to substitute its own finding when the other finding is also a possible one and not contrary to the evidences. But if it transpires that the finding made by the Sessions Judge is contrary to the weight of the evidence adduced and facts established in the trial and such finding is inherently based on surmise and conjecture and improper and irrational inferences have been drawn from the facts established, it will not only be just and proper to discard the judgment of acquittal but it will be the duty of the appeal court in exercise of its appellate power to consider the evidences and materials on record to come to its own finding.

In the present case the evidences adduced by the eyewitnesses do not suffer from any material discrepancy, inconsistency or improbability for which there was any occasion to hold that the case sought to be made out by the prosecution was doubtful or the veracity of the eyewitnesses was to be doubted. There is no material warranting a finding that the eyewitnesses had any motive to falsely implicate the accused persons on a charge of murder. The FIR had been lodged within a short period after the murder because the FIR had been lodged within less than three hours, although the informant got the information from an eye witness at his own village which was three kilometers away from the place of occurrence and thereafter he came to the place of occurrence on foot and then went to the police station at some distance. The injury on another eye witness conforms to the case of the prosecution that she also sustained injury while she had been trying to prevent the murderous assault. Any case of cooking up a story by introducing alleged eyewitnesses does not stand scrutiny. The murder had taken place near the bus stop of a populous village in the morning at about 7.15 a.m. It was quite likely that such incident might have been noticed by some other villagers. In such circumstances, it will be a wild imagination to suggest that in order to cook up a story by lodging a FIR within three hours, fabrication was meticulously made by introducing two ladies and another person from a different village as eyewitnesses even at the risk of exposing unusual behaviour of a widow in leaving her residence on the fateful day. The evidences of the eyewitnesses appear to be quite natural straightforward and trustworthy. Moreover, the evidences of the eyewitnesses got ample corroboration from other facts established in the trial by the prosecution. The view taken by the Sessions Judge does not appear to be acceptance of one of the probable views. Sessions Judge proceeded on surmise and conjectures and had drawn adverse inference against the prosecution case by analysing the evidences from an erroneous point of view. The reasonings given by the High Court in accepting the evidences are sound. In these circumstances, there is no reason to interfere with the decision passed by the High Court in convicting and sentencing the accused persons. Aher Maya Visa v. State of Gujarat, 1993 Supp (1) SCC 348: 1993 SCC (Cri) 214: AIR 1992 SC 2155.

While caution is the watchword, in appeal against acquittal as the trial Judge has occasion to watch demeanour of witnesses interference should not be made merely because a different conclusion could have been arrived at. Prudence demands restraint on mere probability or possibility but in perversity or misreading interference is imperative otherwise existence of power shall be rendered meaningless. In the present case the order of the trial court is vitiated as apart from deciding the case on irrelevant consideration the most serious error of which he was guilty and which rendered the order infirm which could be set aside by the High Court was that he misread the evidence and indulged in conjectural inferences and surmises. Although the powers of the High Court in an appeal against acquittal are as extensive as in an appeal against conviction, it should, before reversing an acquittal pay due regard to the reasons given by the trial court in support of the order of acquittal and try to dispel the same in a general or specific way. It should also bear in mind that the initial presumption of innocence in favour of an accused person is in no way weakened, if not reinforced by his acquittal at the trial. Due weight must also be given to the opinion of the trial court as to the value of the oral evidence rendered by the oral witnesses because the trial court had the advantage of observing the demeanour of the witnesses appearing before it. If two conclusions can be reasonably reached on the same evidence, one of which supports the acquittal then the High Court should stay its hands from interfering with the order of the trial court. The present case is of this category. (Para 27). Bhagirath Singh v. State of Bihar, (1976) 1 SCC 614: 1976 SCC (Cri) 112: AIR 1976 SC 924: 1976 Cri LJ 685.

[5220] — Ss. 378 and 386 — High Court's interference with order of acquittal not open merely because on a reappraisal of evidence High Court preferred an alternative conclusion

The jurisdiction of the appellate court in dealing with an appeal against an order of acquittal is circumscribed by the limitation that no interference is to be made with the order of acquittal unless the approach made by the lower court to the consideration of the evidence in the case is vitiated by some manifest illegality or the conclusion recorded by the court below is such which could not have been possibly arrived at by any court acting reasonably and judiciously and is, therefore, liable to be characterised as perverse. Where two views are possible on an appraisal of the evidence adduced in the case and the court below has taken a view which is a plausible one, the appellate court cannot legally interfere with an order of acquittal even if it is of the opinion that the view taken by the court below on is consideration of the evidence is erroneous.

In the present case in absence of any independent corroboration of the testimony given by the alleged eyewitnesses the Sessions Judge who had seen them giving evidence in the box was not impressed by their evidence specially having regard to the fact that they had been appearing as prosecution witnesses in a large number of police cases. The testimony of the eyewitnesses having been found to be unworthy of belief, the Sessions Judge acquitted the accused-appellants. The High Court has not found in its judgment that the reasons given by the Sessions Judge for discarding the testimony of the eyewitnesses were either unreasonable or perverse. It made an independent reappraisal of the evidence on its own and set aside the acquittal merely on the ground that it was inclined to reach a conclusion different from the one recorded by the Sessions Judge. This approach of the High Court was vitiated by manifest illegality. Its interference with the order of acquittal was wholly unwarranted. Tota Singh v. State of Punjab, (1987) 2 SCC 529: 1987 SCC (Cri) 381: AIR 1987 SC 1083: 1987 Cri LJ 974.

(4) Comparison with S. 417 CrPC, 1898

[5223] — S. 378 — Appeal against acquittal — Scope and applicability — Scope of S. 378, 1973 Code and S. 417, 1898 Code, examined — Distinction between — S. 417 (1898 Code) and S. 378 (1973 Code), held, are not in pari materia

As noticed above, the words—"save as otherwise provided in sub-section (2)"—were added in the 1973 Code; Section 417 of the 1898 Code did not have these words. It is a familiar rule of construction that all changes in the wording and phrasing may be presumed to have been deliberate and with the purpose to limit, qualify or enlarge the pre-existing law as the changes of the words employ. Any construction that makes the exception (clause) with which the section opens unnecessary and redundant should be avoided. (Para 36)

If the legislature had intended to give the right of appeal under Section 378(1) to the State Government in all cases of acquittal including the classes of cases referred to in sub-section (2), it would not have been necessary to incorporate the exception (clause) in the opening words. This objective could have been achieved without the use of these words as the erstwhile Section 417 of the 1898 Code enabled the State Government to appeal from all cases of acquittal while in the two types of cases mentioned in sub-section (2) thereof, an appeal from the order of acquittal could be filed under the direction of the Central Government as well. (Para 37)

Parliament in the 1973 Code re-enacted the provision for appeal from an order of acquittal with certain modifications. It changed the language by addition of the words—"save as otherwise provided in sub-section (2)". The alteration in language by addition of these words gives rise to an inference that the legislature made conscious changes in Section 378 (the 1973 Code). The addition of words in Section 378(1) by way of exception (clause) cannot be set at naught by giving the same interpretation which has been given to Section 417 (the 1898 Code). The language used in Section 417 (the 1898 Code) and Section 378 (the 1973 Code) is not in pari materia. (Para 41)

One of the rules of construction of statutes is that the language of the statute should be read as it is and any construction that results in rejection of words has to be avoided; the effort should be made to give meaning to each and every word used by the legislature. However, such rule of construction of statutes is not without exceptions. (Para 43). Lalu Prasad Yadav v. State of Bihar, (2010) 5 SCC 1.

[5224] — S. 378 — Compared with S. 417 CrPC, 1898 — In S. 378(1) sub-section (6) should be read in place of sub-section (5) — It is an inadvertent mistake — CrPC, 1898, S. 417

Under Section 417 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1898 no application for special leave to appeal had to be made by the State Government or the Central Government, if they filed an appeal against acquittal. The period of 60 days provided in Section 417(4) did not apply to an appeal by the State Government or the Central Government. The period of limitation for the State Government or the Central Government was only under Article 114(a) of the Limitation Act. The right of the State Government to file an appeal under Section 417(1) was subject to sub-section (5) which provided that if special leave to appeal had been refused to a complainant then the State Government could not maintain an appeal. A comparison of Section 378 with the old Section 417 shows that whilst under the old section no application for leave to appeal had to be made by the State Government or the Central Government, now by virtue of Section 378(3) the State Government or the Central Government have to obtain leave of the High Court before their appeal could be entertained. Sub-section (4) of Section 378 is identical to sub-section (3) of Section 417. Thus a complainant desirous of filing an appeal against acquittal must still obtain special leave. Section 378 makes a distinction between an appeal filed by the State Government or the Central Government, who only need to obtain "leave", and an appeal by a complainant who needs to obtain "special leave". The limitation provided in sub-section (5) is only in respect of applications under sub-section (4) i.e. application for special leave to appeal by a complainant. A complainant may be either a public servant or a private party. If the complainant is a public servant then the period of limitation for an application for special leave is 6 months. If the complainant is a private party then the period of limitation for an application for special leave is 60 days. The periods of 6 months and/or 60 days do not apply to appeals by the State Government [under sub-section (1)] or the Central Government [under sub-section (2)]. Appeals by the State Government or the Central Government continue to be governed by Article 114(a) of the Limitation Act. (Paras 22, 23 and 25)

However the reference to sub-section (5) in sub-section (1) of Section 378 is clearly an inadvertent mistake. Sub-section (5) applies only to application for special leave by a complainant. It has no application to an appeal by the State Government or to an application for leave under sub-section (3). What the legislature clearly intended was to continue to provide that an appeal by the State Government would not be maintainable if special leave to appeal had been refused to a complainant. Thus sub-section (1) of Section 378 was to be subject to provisions of sub-section (6) and not sub-section (5) as inadvertently provided therein. Inadvertently the figure (5) in Section 417(1) was continued, without noticing that now under Section 378 the relevant provision was sub-section (6). The figure (5) in Section 378(1) is inadvertently retained. Thus in Section 378(1) the figure (6) will have to be read in place of the figure (5). The accused is presumed innocent until proven guilty. The trial court's acquittal bolsters the presumption that he is innocent. On proper analysis of the ratio and findings of this case, it is revealed that the findings of the trial court are based on the fundamental principles of the criminal jurisprudence. Presumption of innocence in favour of the accused further gets reinforced and strengthened by the acquittal of the trial court. [5227] — S. 378 — Appeal against acquittal — Proper mode of disposal — Held, High Court erred in allowing appeal on the ground that any lis between the parties should be decided on merits rather than on technicalities

The appeal preferred by the respondents was against a judgment of acquittal. The High Court should have, therefore, exercised its jurisdiction keeping in view the limited role it had to play in the matter. (Para 14)

The High Court itself had come to the finding that the respondents were not interested in getting the matter prosecuted. Despite the same, it allowed their appeal, opining that any lis between the parties should be decided on merits rather than on technicalities. On what basis such a statement of law was made is not known. No precedent was cited; no reason has been assigned. The High Court failed to take into consideration the fact that it was dealing with an order of acquittal and, thus, the principle of law which was required to be applied was that, if two views are possible, a judgment of acquittal should not ordinarily be interfered with. (Para 15)

The High Court therefore, misdirected itself in passing the impugned judgment. It cannot therefore be sustained. (Para 17). S. Rama Krishna v. S. Rami Reddy, (2008) 5 SCC 535: (2008) 2 SCC (Cri) 645: AIR 2008 SC 2066: 2008 Cri LJ 2625.

[5229] — S. 378 — High Court's power of review in appeal against acquittal — Principles to be followed

In an appeal under S. 417 of the Code of Criminal Procedure against acquittal, the High Court has full power to review at large the evidence on which the order of acquittal was founded and to reach the conclusion that upon the evidence the order of acquittal should be reversed. No limitation should be placed upon that power unless it be found expressly stated in the Code, but in exercising the power conferred by the Code and before reaching its conclusion upon fact the High Court should give proper weight and consideration to such matter as, (1) the view of the trial Judge as to the credibility of the witnesses; (2) the presumption of innocence in favour of the accused, a presumption certainly not weakened by the fact that he has been acquitted at his trial; (3) the right of the accused to the benefit of any real and reasonable doubt; and (4) the slowness of an appellate court in disturbing a finding of fact arrived at by a Judge who had the advantage of seeing the witnesses. The High Court should also take into account the reasons given by the Court below in support of its order of acquittal and must express its reasons in the judgment which lead it to hold that the acquittal is not justified. Further, if two conclusions can be based upon the evidence on record, the High Court should not disturb the finding of acquittal recorded by the trial court. Labh Singh v. State of

(5) Approach of appellate court in disposal of appeal against acquittal: considerations involved (contd.)

Country-made weapons had been used and the performance of these weapons being unpredictable and uncertain, the trajectory of the bullet alone would not be a safe basis for assessing the entire evidence, more particularly as the projectiles could have been deflected from their true path by the bones or tissues that came along the way. The question regarding the direction of fire, whether from right to left or from front to back is of medico-legal importance. To ascertain this, it is necessary to know the position of the victim at the time of the discharge of the bullet, when a straight line drawn between the entrance and exit wounds and prolonged in front generally indicates the line of direction. In some cases, it is difficult to determine the direction as the bullet is so often deflected by the tissues that its course is very irregular, also when the bullet wobbles. (Paras 23 to 27)

The appellate court (High Court) should deal with each one of the reasons which prompted the trial court to record the acquittal and should point out how, if at all, those reasons were wrong or incorrect. Without undertaking such exercise the High Court cannot reverse the acquittal.

In the present case the prosecution version was that the accused police officials had brought the deceased from his house in a tempo to the police station where they battered the deceased to death. On a cautious analysis of the entire material on record the trial court came to the conclusion that the prosecution story was highly improbable and that the evidence of the prosecution witnesses was unreliable. But the High Court reversed the acquittal without dealing with or discussing any of the reasons given by trial court for acquitting the accused appellants. The High Court was principally influenced by the nature of injuries that were noticed by the doctor on the dead body at the time of autopsy and in its view some of the injuries which were on the soles and buttocks of the deceased convinced it that the deceased was given a sound beating while he was in police custody. The High Court found that its conclusion was further strengthened by the fact that when the accused prepared the inquest report he made a deliberate effort to minimise the number of injuries sustained by the deceased.

The High Court ought to have granted leave, and thereafter, as a first court of appeal, reappreciated the entire evidence on the record independently and objectively as regards the guilt of the accused. The trial court on the facts of this case did not perform its duties, as was enjoined on it by law. The trial court was required to carefully appraise the entire evidence and then come to a conclusion. The questions involved were not trivial. The effect of the admission of the accused in the background of testimony of official witnesses and the documents exhibited needed adjudication in appeal. The High Court appears to have lost sight of the fact that in the statement recorded under Section 313 CrPC, the respondent specifically accepted that he has received a sum of Rs 2000 from the complainant for payment of certain outstanding dues, but such a plea was not taken in the course of the trap proceedings. If the trial court was at lapse in this regard, the High Court was obliged to undertake such an exercise by entertaining the appeal. The impugned order of the High Court is not sustainable, and is, therefore, remitted back to be disposed of in accordance with law. [5241] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Appeal against acquittal — Appellate court's approach while reversing order of acquittal — Non-compliance with rule laid down in Doshi case, (1996) 9 SCC 225 in this respect — Effect — Doshi case laying down that appellate court hearing appeal against acquittal must first record its conclusion on the question whether the findings of the trial court were palpably wrong, manifestly erroneous or demonstrably unsustainable, and then reappraise the evidence to arrive at its own conclusion — But not proceeding in this manner, held, would not necessarily entail setting aside of the appellate decision which considered all the contentions raised before it — In such a case the superior court hearing the appeal against judgment of the appellate court must satisfy itself that the approach of the trial court was patently illegal and its conclusions demonstrably unsustainable and that the decision of the appellate court is fee from such infirmities — In case judgment of trial court is found not to suffer from any such infirmity, interference by the appellate court has to be set aside in view of the rule that where two reasonable views are possible the one in favour of acquittal would stand — On facts, since the approach of the trial court was patently erroneous and the conclusions arrived at by it wholly untenable, reversal of acquittal by the High Court was justified — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 302 and 307/34 — Explosive Substances Act, 1908, S. 3

In the instant case the High Court has not strictly proceeded in the manner laid down by the Supreme Court in Doshi case viz. first recording its conclusion on the question whether the approach of the trial court in dealing with the evidence was patently illegal or the conclusions arrived at by it were wholly untenable, which alone will justify interference in an order of acquittal though the High Court has rendered a well-considered judgment duly meeting all the contentions raised before it. But this non-compliance will not per se justify setting aside the judgment under appeal. In such a case, the approach of the court which is considering the validity of the judgment of an appellate court which has reversed the order of acquittal passed by the trial court, should be to satisfy itself if the approach of the trial court in dealing with the evidence was patently illegal or conclusions arrived at by it are demonstrably unsustainable and whether the judgment of the appellate court is free from those infirmities; if so to hold that the trial court judgment warranted interference. In such a case, there is obviously no reason why the appellate court's judgment should be disturbed. But if on the other hand the court comes to the conclusion that the judgment of the trial court does not suffer from any infirmity, it cannot but be held that the interference by the appellate court in the order of acquittal was not justified; then in such a case the judgment of the appellate court has to be set aside as of the two reasonable views, the one in support of the acquittal alone has to stand.

Where on the basis of evidence on record two views are reasonably possible the appellate court cannot substitute its view in the place of that of the trial court. It is only when the approach of the trial court in acquitting an accused is found to be clearly erroneous in its consideration of evidence on record and in deducing conclusions therefrom that the appellate court can interfere with the order of acquittal.

In the present case the approach of the trial court was patently erroneous and the conclusions arrived at by it were wholly untenable. It is thus not the case where two reasonable views on examination of the evidence on record are possible and so the one which supports the accused, should be adopted. The view taken by the trial court can hardly be said to be a view on proper consideration of evidence much less a reasonable view. Therefore, interference by the High Court in the appeal against acquittal of the appellant and recording the finding of their conviction for offences under Sections 302, 307 read with Section 34 IPC and Section 3 of the Explosive Substances Act, 1908, on consideration of the evidence is justified. In order to appreciate the evidence, the court is required to bear in mind the set-up and the environment in which the crime is committed, the level of understanding of the witnesses, the overzealous- ness of some of the near relations to ensure that everyone even remotely connected with the crime be also convicted, and everyone's different way of narration of the same facts. These are only illustrative instances. Bearing in mind these broad principles, the evidence is required to be appreciated to find out what part out of the evidence represents the true and correct state of affairs. It is for the courts to separate the grain from the chaff. (Para 14)

The mere fact that a view other than the one taken by the trial court can be legitimately arrived at by the appellate court on reappraisal of the evidence cannot constitute a valid and sufficient ground to interfere with an order of acquittal unless the appellate court comes to the conclusion that the entire approach of the trial court in dealing with the evidence was patently illegal or the conclusions arrived at by it were wholly untenable. In the present case the High Court while reversing the order of acquittal kept in view these principles. (Para 13)

In the present case the murder of three persons (father and his two sons) had taken place in broad daylight at 7 o'clock in the morning in front of many members of the family of the deceased, some of whom also received various injuries. The presence of the acquitted accused there was deposed to by all material witnesses. The High Court was faced with the question that when his presence as a member of the unlawful assembly as also the fact that he with others shared the common object of doing away with the deceased and injuring others, had been established can he be acquitted as a result of some variations in the manner of his doing positive act to achieve the said object? The High Court rightly answered the question in the negative and convicted the acquitted accused. The fact that there were slight variations in the role attributed to him was held by the High Court to be of no consequence in the facts and circumstances of the case. In fact, he was the main person who had instigated the mob. What had weighed with the High Court in reversing the order of acquittal of that accused was that on the basis of the same evidence, other accused had been convicted and there was no justifiable reason for convicting other 11 accused and confirming their conviction while at the same time upholding the order of acquittal in the case of the said accused. The High Court, on due scrutiny and analysis of the evidence, came to the conclusion that the case of the acquitted accused cannot be meted out a different treatment than others who had been convicted. Under the circumstances, it cannot be said that the High Court in reversing the order of acquittal did not bear in mind the principles required to be kept in view while deciding an appeal against an order of acquittal. (5) Approach of appellate court in disposal of appeal against acquittal: considerations involved (contd.)

In the instant case the entire approach of the High Court in dealing with the appeal was patently wrong for it did not at all address itself to the question as to whether the reasons which weighed with the trial court for recording the order of acquittal were proper or not. Instead thereof the High Court made an independent reappraisal of the entire evidence to arrive at the conclusions. The mere fact that a view other than the one taken by the trial court can be legitimately arrived at by the appellate court on reappraisal of the evidence cannot constitute a valid and sufficient ground to interfere with an order of acquittal unless it comes to the conclusion that the entire approach of the trial court in dealing with the evidence was patently illegal or the conclusions arrived at by it were wholly untenable. While sitting in judgment over an acquittal the appellate court is first required to seek an answer to the question whether the findings of the trial court are palpably wrong, manifestly erroneous or demonstrably unsustainable. If the appellate court answers the above question in the negative the order of acquittal is not to be disturbed. Conversely, if the appellate court holds, for reasons to be recorded, that the order of acquittal cannot at all be sustained in view of any of the above infirmities it can then — and then only — reappraise the evidence to arrive at its own conclusions. Ramesh Babulal Doshi v. State of Gujarat, (1996) 9 SCC 225: 1996 SCC (Cri) 972: AIR 1996 SC 2035.

The High Court was dealing with an appeal against acquittal. It was required to deal with various grounds on which acquittal had been based and to dispel those grounds. It has not done so. If the appreciation of evidence by the trial court did not suffer from any flaw, as indeed none has been pointed out in the impugned judgment, the order of acquittal could not have been set aside. The view taken by the learned trial court was a reasonable view and even if by any stretch of imagination, it could be said that another view was possible, that was not a ground sound enough to set aside an order of acquittal. The High Court in this case acted in a very casual manner and reached certain findings which were perverse. (Para 19)

The doctor clearly opined that the cause of death was shock and haemorrhage due to stab injury on the chest. By characterising these injuries as not sufficient in the ordinary course to cause death, the High Court fell into a grave error and its appreciation of evidence borders on perversity. This was a glaring infirmity in the judgment of the High Court. (Para 22)

The other reason given by the High Court in affirming the order of acquittal was that only interested persons were the witnesses and no independent witness was examined. It has been repeatedly pointed out by the Supreme Court that just as the witnesses are related to the deceased, that is no ground to discard their evidence. In the instant case, there were three eyewitnesses and one of them was an injured witness. Their evidence cannot be discarded just on the ground that they were related to the deceased. It is settled law that if the evidence of the witnesses, who are related, is credible and cogent, the fact that they are related is not a ground for discarding such evidence. Related witnesses do not normally spare the guilty and implicate innocent persons. (Paras 23 and 25)

Another reason given by the High Court to support the judgment of acquittal of the trial court was that much time had elapsed between the occurrence and filing of complaint. About the delay in lodging the FIR, the Supreme Court finds that immediately after the occurrence, the deceased was taken to the hospital by the complainant and other relations where the deceased was declared dead. One GD was entered by 11.05 p.m. on the same night which was just after a gap of about two hours. Therefore, considering normal human conduct, this delay of about two hours between the occurrence and lodging of the complaint, was not a factor for discrediting the prosecution case. A finding of acquittal on the ground of this delay was not a reasonable exercise of jurisdiction by an appellate court. (Paras 23 and 26)

The High Court also came to the finding that the bloodstained clothes and weapons were not examined and this created a doubt about the veracity of the prosecution case. It appears from the record that the weapons of offence were examined to find out that they had stains of human blood, in Group B. (Paras 24 and 27)

Therefore, considering all these facts and circumstances of this case, the High Court did not exercise its jurisdiction properly, under Section 378 CrPC, in appreciating the material on record, while approving the order of acquittal of the trial court. Therefore, the High Court's judgment of acquittal cannot be sustained and is set aside. It will hear the State's appeal afresh and is at liberty to apply its mind to the evidence and materials available on record and come to its independent finding. [5256] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Appeal against acquittal — Approach — When trial court has failed to appreciate evidence properly, High Court, held, should reappreciate all evidence independently and objectively as regards the guilt of the accused

The High Court ought to have granted leave, and thereafter, as a first court of appeal, reappreciated the entire evidence on the record independently and objectively as regards the guilt of the accused. The trial court on the facts of this case did not perform its duties, as was enjoined on it by law. The trial court was required to carefully appraise the entire evidence and then come to a conclusion. The questions involved were not trivial. The effect of the admission of the accused in the background of testimony of official witnesses and the documents exhibited needed adjudication in appeal. The High Court appears to have lost sight of the fact that in the statement recorded under Section 313 CrPC, the respondent specifically accepted that he has received a sum of Rs 2000 from the complainant for payment of certain outstanding dues, but such a plea was not taken in the course of the trap proceedings. If the trial court was at lapse in this regard, the High Court was obliged to undertake such an

[5258] — S. 378 — Appeal against acquittal — Scope of consideration by appellate court — Perversity in findings of trial court — Held, entire evidence has to be considered to determine whether findings of trial court are perverse or otherwise unsustainable because burden of proof has incorrectly been placed on a party, or trial court has omitted to take into consideration relevant evidence, or trial court has taken into consideration evidence which has been brought on record contrary to law — High Court had adopted a completely erroneous approach herein while reversing acquittal — Hence acquittal restored (Paras 38, 40 and 59)

While dealing with a judgment of acquittal, an appellate court must consider the entire evidence on record, so as to arrive at a finding as to whether the views of the trial court were perverse or otherwise unsustainable. Even though the appellate court is entitled to consider, whether in arriving at a finding of fact, the trial court had placed the burden of proof incorrectly or failed to take into consideration any admissible evidence and/or had taken into consideration evidence brought on record contrary to law; the appellate court should not ordinarily set aside a judgment of acquittal in a case where two views are possible, though the view of the appellate court may be the more probable one. The trial court which has the benefit of watching the demeanour of the witnesses is the best judge of the credibility of the witnesses. (Para 38)

In exceptional cases where there are compelling circumstances, and the judgment under appeal is found to be perverse, the appellate court can interfere with the order of acquittal. The findings of fact recorded by a court can be held to be perverse if the findings have been arrived at by ignoring or excluding relevant material or by taking into consideration irrelevant/inadmissible material. A finding may also be said to be perverse if it is against the weight of evidence, or if the finding so outrageously defies logic as to suffer from the vice of irrationality. (Para 40)

The High Court did not dislodge the reasons given by the trial court for acquittal and dealt with the case very casually, adopting a very superficial approach to the whole matter. The High Court did not make any attempt to appreciate the evidence with accuracy and erroneously reversed the findings of the trial court which were based on the evidence on record and for which detailed reasons had been assigned. The appellate court has full power to review an order of acquittal and to come to its own conclusion in appeal against the acquittal. The only requirement which the appellate Court must observe is that while dealing with an order of acquittal, the appellate Court should not only consider every matter on record having a bearing on the questions of fact and the reasons given by the trial Court in support of its order of acquittal, but it should also express its reasons in its judgment which led it to hold that the order of acquittal is not justified. (Para 3).

The appellate court is also required to bear in mind that the trial court has had the opportunity of witnessing the demeanour of witnesses while in the witness-box and moreover the presumption of innocence is in any event not weakened by the order of acquittal and therefore if two reasonable conclusions can be reached on the basis of evidence on record, the appellate Court should not disturb the finding of the trial Court. Verghese Thomas v. State of Kerala, (1976) 4 SCC 348: 1976 SCC (Cri) 643: AIR 1977 SC 701: 1977 Cri LJ 343: 1976 Cri LJ 643.

[5263] — Ss. 378 & 386 — Before reversing the acquittal, the appellate court must give cogent reasons for rejecting the reasoning of the trial court

When a trial court, with full view of the witnesses, acquits an accused after disbelieving direct testimony, it will be essential for the High Court, in an appeal against acquittal, to clearly indicate firm and weighty grounds, from the record, for discarding the reasons of the trial court in order to be able to reach a contrary conclusion of guilt of accused. The High Court should be able to point out in its judgment that the trial court's reasons are palpably and unerringly shaky and its own reasons are demonstrably cogent. As a salutary rule of appreciation of evidence, in an appeal against acquittal, it is not legally sufficient that it is just possible for the High Court to take a contrary view about the credibility of witnesses but it is absolutely imperative that the High Court convincingly finds it well-nigh impossible for the trial court to reject their testimony. This is the quintessence of the jurisprudential aspect of criminal justice. Rajendra Prasad v. State of Bihar, (1977) 2 SCC 205: 1977 SCC (Cri) 308: AIR 1977 SC 1059: (1977) 3 SCR 68: 1977 Cri LJ 613.

(5) Approach of appellate court in disposal of appeal against acquittal: considerations involved (contd.)

The subject matter of the challenge is the refusal to grant leave to question acquittal in terms of Section 378(3) of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973.

The respondent (hereinafter referred to as "the accused") faced trial for alleged commission of offence punishable under Section 18 of the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985.

The trial court held that the prosecution version was entirely dependent upon the testimony of official witnesses and since no independent witness was involved, the prosecution version was vulnerable. The trial court therefore directed acquittal. The appellant State filed an appeal before the Punjab and Haryana High Court which refused to grant leave and disposed of the application for leave in the following manner:

"Heard. No merit.
Dismissed."

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

It was noted that the search and seizure was made at a thoroughfare and it is unbelievable that no independent witness was available. The trial court was required to carefully appraise the entire evidence and then come to a conclusion. If the trial court was at lapse in this regard the High Court was obliged to undertake such an exercise by entertaining the appeal. The trial court on the facts of this case did not perform its duties, as was enjoined on it by law. The questions involved were not trivial. The requirement of independent witnesses and discarding testimony of official witnesses even if it was reliable, cogent or trustworthy needed adjudication in appeal. The High Court ought to have in such circumstances granted leave and thereafter as a first court of appeal, reappreciated the entire evidence on the record independently and returned its findings objectively as regards guilt or otherwise of the accused. It has failed to do so. (Para 5)

Reasons introduce clarity in an order. Reasons substitute subjectivity by objectivity. The emphasis on recording reasons is that if the decision reveals the "inscrutable face of the sphinx", it can, by its silence, render it virtually impossible for the courts to perform their appellate function or exercise the power of judicial review in adjudging the validity of the decision. Right to reasons is an indispensable part of a sound judicial system, reasons at least sufficient to indicate an application of mind to the matter before court. Another rationale is that the affected party can know why the decision has gone against him. One of the salutary requirements of natural justice is spelling out reasons for the order made, in other words, a speaking-out. The "inscrutable face of a sphinx" is ordinarily incongruous with a judicial or quasi-judicial performance. (Para 6)

The High Court has not given any reasons for refusing to grant leave to file appeal against acquittal, and seems to have been completely oblivious to the fact that by such refusal, a close scrutiny of the order of acquittal by the appellate forum has been lost once and for all. The manner in which appeal against acquittal has been dealt with by the High Court leaves much to be desired. On plainest consideration of justice, the High Court ought to have set forth its reasons, howsoever brief, in its order indicative of an application of its mind, all the more when its order is amenable to further avenue of challenge. The absence of reasons has rendered the High Court order not sustainable. (Para 5)

The requirement of indicating reasons in such cases has been judicially recognized as imperative. (Para 5)

Impugned judgment of the High Court is unsustainable and is set aside. Leave granted to the State to file the appeal. The High Court shall entertain the appeal and after formal notice to the respondents hear the appeal and dispose of it in accordance with law. II/34 IPC by reversing acquittal and punishing them with 4 years' imprisonment and Rs 1000 fine in default of which to undergo imprisonment for one month — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 304/34*

On 17-2-1994, PW 5 lodged an FIR stating inter alia that on that date at about 2.00 p.m. while his elder brother PW 4 was returning home from the masjid, six accused persons named in the FIR, assaulted him. On hearing the screams and loud cries for the help of PW 4, another elder brother (the deceased informant) and one of his neighbours, PW 2, rushed to the spot and intervened, whereupon those two persons were also assaulted and they sustained injuries. The injured persons were taken to the hospital and deceased succumbed to injuries after fourteen days.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

The High Court justly convicted the appellant under Section 304 Part II IPC. While reversing the order of acquittal, the High Court took into consideration all relevant factors. It was not a case that the view taken by the trial court was a plausible or a possible view. The judgment of the trial court was wholly unsustainable. There was overwhelming evidence against the appellant. The appellant was named in the FIR. All the eyewitnesses including the injured eyewitnesses categorically named the appellant and attributed specific role to him. The statements of all eyewitnesses including the injured eyewitnesses are wholly consistent and are fully corroborated with the medical evidence. (Paras 23, 21 and 12 to 17)

The trial court gravely erred in ignoring the medical evidence which was the most important and material aspect of the prosecution version. In the opinion of the doctor, death was a result of head injury sustained by the deceased. According to him, all the injuries were ante-mortem in nature caused by blunt force impact, homicidal in nature. The medical evidence corroborates the evidence of five eyewitnesses including the statements of the injured eyewitnesses. (Para 13)

In the instant case, the High Court clearly came to the conclusion that the entire approach of the trial court cannot be sustained both on the law and the facts. According to the High Court, the conclusion arrived at by the trial court can only be termed as perverse because no court acting reasonably and judiciously can ever take such a view. The High Court observed that this was not a case where two views were possible and the court below has taken the one view. (Paras 14 to 17)

In a case where the trial court has recorded acquittal, the appellate court should be slow in interfering with the judgment of acquittal. On evaluation of the evidence, if two views are possible, the appellate court should not substitute its own view and discard the judgment of the trial court. The court must examine the entire case comprehensively. Even if some inconsistency or discrepancy is discovered, then its impact on the total prosecution version must be carefully examined. (Paras 15 and 12)

The sentence awarded by the High Court is just and appropriate in the facts and circumstances of the case. The High Court awarded imprisonment for a period of four years and to pay a fine of rupees one thousand each, in default, to undergo further imprisonment for a period of one month each. (Para 23)

[5274] — S. 378 — Appeal against acquittal — Competence of State Government to file appeal — Expression "save as otherwise provided in sub-section (2)" — How to be construed — State Government's appeal against order of acquittal passed by Special Judge, CBI — Case investigated by Delhi Special Police Establishment (CBI) — Maintainability — Held, legislature has maintained a mutually exclusive division for appeals from order of acquittal — Competent authority to appeal from order of acquittal in the two types of cases referred to in S. 378(2) is Central Government only — Authority of State Government in relation to such cases is excluded — Thus, State Government not competent to direct its Public Prosecutor to present appeal from judgment passed by Special Judge, CBI — High Court's order on maintainability of appeal set aside — State Government's appeal presented before High Court rejected as not maintainable

These appeals concerned the period when Lalu Prasad Yadav was the Chief Minister, Bihar and he was prosecuted for acquisition of assets—both movable and immovable—by corrupt or illegal means disproportionate to his known sources of income. A first information report (FIR) was lodged by the CBI against Lalu Prasad Yadav and his wife which was a sequel to direction by the Patna High Court to CBI to enquire and scrutinise all cases of excess drawals and expenditure in the Animal Husbandry Department, Government of Bihar during the period 1977-1978 to 1995-1996. CBI investigated into the matter and a charge-sheet was filed against Lalu Prasad Yadav and Rabri Devi in the Court of the Special Judge, CBI (AHD), Patna.

Charges were framed against Lalu Prasad Yadav under Section 13(1)(e) read with Section 13(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 (the PC Act) that during the said period, he acquired assets which were disproportionate to his known sources of income. Rabri Devi was charged under Section 109 of the Penal Code, 1860 (IPC) read with Sections 13(1)(e) and 13(2) of the PC Act for abetting her husband in the commission of the offence. The Court of the Special Judge, CBI (AHD), Patna, upon conclusion of trial, acquitted the accused holding that the prosecution had failed to prove the charges levelled against them.

The Central Government after considering the conclusions and findings of the trial court took a conscious and considered decision that no ground whatsoever was made for filing an appeal against the judgment of the trial court. The State Government, however, filed leave to appeal against the order of acquittal before the High Court. The Single Judge of the High Court issued notice to the respondents to show cause as to why leave to appeal be not granted. In response thereto, on behalf of Respondents 1 and 2, a preliminary objection was raised with regard to maintainability of appeal by the State Government. The preliminary objection about the maintainability of appeal raised by Respondents 1 and 2 was supported by Respondent 3 (CBI). The Single Judge heard the arguments on the question of maintainability of appeal and vide his order overruled the preliminary objection and held that the appeal preferred by the State Government was maintainable.

The appellants had thus filed the present appeal.

Allowing the appeals,

Held :

The opening words in Section 378(1)—"save as otherwise provided in sub-section (2)"—are in the nature of exception intended to exclude the classes of cases mentioned in sub-section (2) out of operation of the body of sub-section (1). These words have no other meaning in the context but to qualify the operation of sub-section (1) and take out of its purview the two types of cases referred in sub-section (2), namely, (i) the cases in which the offence has been investigated by the Delhi Special Police Establishment constituted under the 1946 Act, and (ii) the cases in which the offence has been investigated by any other agency empowered to make investigation into an offence under any Central Act other than the 1973 Code. By construing Section 378 in a manner that permits appeal from an order of acquittal by the State Government in every case, except the two classes of cases mentioned in sub-section (2), full effect would be given to the exception (clause) articulated in the opening words. (Paras 35 and 25)

(6) Authority that may file/direct filing/Standing to file appeal against acquittal (contd.)

As noticed above, the words—"save as otherwise provided in sub-section (2)"—were added in the 1973 Code; Section 417 of the 1898 Code did not have these words. It is a familiar rule of construction that all changes in the wording and phrasing may be presumed to have been deliberate and with the purpose to limit, qualify or enlarge the pre-existing law as the changes of the words employ. Any construction that makes the exception (clause) with which the section opens unnecessary and redundant should be avoided. (Para 36)

If the legislature had intended to give the right of appeal under Section 378(1) to the State Government in all cases of acquittal including the classes of cases referred to in sub-section (2), it would not have been necessary to incorporate the exception (clause) in the opening words. This objective could have been achieved without the use of these words as the erstwhile Section 417 of the 1898 Code enabled the State Government to appeal from all cases of acquittal while in the two types of cases mentioned in sub-section (2) thereof, an appeal from the order of acquittal could be filed under the direction of the Central Government as well. (Para 37)

Parliament in the 1973 Code re-enacted the provision for appeal from an order of acquittal with certain modifications. It changed the language by addition of the words—"save as otherwise provided in sub-section (2)". The alteration in language by addition of these words gives rise to an inference that the legislature made conscious changes in Section 378 (the 1973 Code). The addition of words in Section 378(1) by way of exception (clause) cannot be set at naught by giving the same interpretation which has been given to Section 417 (the 1898 Code). The language used in Section 417 (the 1898 Code) and Section 378 (the 1973 Code) is not in pari materia. (Para 41)

One of the rules of construction of statutes is that the language of the statute should be read as it is and any construction that results in rejection of words has to be avoided; the effort should be made to give meaning to each and every word used by the legislature. However, such rule of construction of statutes is not without exceptions. (Para 43)

The main object and legislative intent by the opening words—"save as otherwise provided in sub-section (2)"—in sub-section (1) of Section 378 being clear i.e. to fetter the general power given to the State Government in filing appeal from the order of acquittal in two types of cases stated in sub-section (2), the use of word "also" in sub-section (2) does not make any sense. The word "also" in sub-section (2), if construed in the manner suggested by the State Government, may result in reducing the opening words in sub-section (1) a nullity and will deny these words their full play. Since exception (clause) in the beginning of sub-section (1) has been expressly added in Section 378 and it is not possible to harmonise the word "also" occurring in sub-section (2) with that, it appears that no sensible meaning can be given to the word "also" and the said word has to be treated as immaterial. To declare "also" enacted in sub-section (2) immaterial or insensible is not very satisfactory, but it is much more unsatisfactory to deprive the words—"save as otherwise provided in sub-section (2)"—of their true and plain meaning. In order that the exception (clause) expressly stated in the opening words of sub-section (1) might be preserved, it is necessary that word "also" in sub-section (2) is treated as immaterial and is held accordingly. The phrase "in any case" in sub-section (1) of Section 378, without hesitation, means "in all cases", but the opening words in the said section put fetters on the State Government in directing appeal to be filed in the two types of cases mentioned in sub-section (2). (Para 45)

A close look at the provisions of the 1946 Act would show that investigation thereunder is a Central investigation and the officers concerned are under the superintendence of the officer appointed by the Central Government. It is the Central Government that has the superintendence over the Delhi Special Police Establishment. What is, therefore, important to notice is that it is the Central Government which is concerned with the investigation of the case by Delhi Special Police Establishment and its ultimate result. It is for this reason that sub-section (2) of Section 378 provides for appeal against acquittal in two types of cases mentioned therein on the direction of the Central Government by its Public Prosecutor. The opening words in sub-section (1), thus, qualify the general power given to the State Government in filing appeal from an order of acquittal so that the Central agency, which is solely and intimately connected with the investigation of cases referred to in sub-section (2), may approach the Central Government for direction to appeal in appropriate cases. (Para 48)

The legislature has maintained a mutually exclusive division in the matter of appeal from an order of acquittal inasmuch as the competent authority to appeal from an order of acquittal in two types of cases referred to in sub-section (2) is the Central Government and the authority of the State Government in relation to such cases has been excluded. As a necessary corollary, it has to be held, that the State Government (of Bihar) is not competent to direct its Public Prosecutor to present appeal from the judgment passed by the Special Judge, CBI. (Para 54)

The reasons given by the High Court are not correct and the impugned order cannot be sustained. The result is, both the appeals are allowed, the order passed by the High Court is set aside and the appeal presented before the High Court of Judicature at Patna is rejected as not maintainable. Whenever the Government seeks opinion it consults various agencies, namely, the Advocate-General, Public Prosecutor, Legal Remembrancer and others and thereafter the order is passed by the Government through the Secretary-in-charge. In the present case various agencies may have expressed different views but by and large the final decision taken by the Under-Secretary prevailed as a result of which the Public Prosecutor was authorised to file an appeal before the High Court against the acquitted accused. In such a situation, therefore, the High Court cannot go deeper into the matter by making a roving inquiry into what had happened when the matter was under consideration of the Government and how things shaped and hold that the appeal presented by the State was not properly presented as against the acquitted accused. Mohinder Singh v. State of Punjab, (1985) 1 SCC 342: 1985 SCC (Cri) 87: AIR 1985 SC 383.

About 20 persons died by reason of consumption of illicit country liquor. The Sessions Judge on appreciation of evidence convicted the seller and the vendor of the liquor under Section 302 read with Section 120-B IPC and sentenced them to life imprisonment and imposed a fine of Rs 10,000 on each of them but acquitted the other persons who were alleged to have supplied the same. Though the right of appeal against the acquittal was available to the State under Section 378 CrPC but the State did not choose to exercise the same and thereby abandoned that right. The two convicted accused moved the High Court against the order of conviction and sentence. In that appeal the High Court opined that prima facie acquittal of the remaining accused persons was not called for and that the matter required reconsideration. Accordingly, it directed the Advocate-General to file an application for leave to appeal against the acquittal. Being aggrieved the acquitted accused persons preferred appeal before the Supreme Court.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The High Court does not have authorisation by and under the existing legal system to exercise any advisory jurisdiction. The Government has its agencies to advise and in the event the Government feels it expedient to obtain the advice from such agency or agencies, it is for the Government to decide and not for the High Court to suggest. The State is otherwise capable of managing its own affairs in a manner conducive to the people at large and the State itself has got its own law officer/officers to advise in its legal affairs: the State Government in the contextual facts did not seek any opinion from the High Court as to the methodology of dealing with the matter. The methodology of filing an appeal lay with the State and the High Court has no authority or jurisdiction to issue such a directive. Direction to file appeal not only stands as an excessive user of jurisdiction but indicates exercise of advisory jurisdiction which the High Court does not possess and is unknown to law. (Paras 11 and 14)

Further, the criminal jurisprudence of the country proceeds on the basis that a person is innocent and the burden rests on the prosecution to prove beyond all reasonable doubts as regards the guilt of the accused persons. It is with this background that the Code of Criminal Procedure has conferred on to the hierarchy of the courts specific powers to deal with the matter as it seems just and proper. The words "just and proper" used herein do not however, mean and imply an arbitrary exercise of power — powers are circumscribed and have to be exercised in accordance with the provisions of law and not dehors the same. Even discretionary powers shall have to be exercised in a manner and in consonance with the known principles of law and not otherwise. The State Government has been directed to file an appeal much beyond the period of limitation: what about the rights of an accused for presentation of appeal beyond the period of limitation. While it is true an appeal barred by limitation does not confer a right but it amounts to extinguishment of a right. In criminal jurisprudence, however, extinguishment of right confers a benefit to an accused and it is in this perspective, it can be said that the High Court would not be within its jurisdiction to take away such a benefit as conferred by reason of extinguishment of right. (Para 13)

In this case, obviously the High Court was swayed by the nature of incident, namely, the deaths of about 20 people by reason of consumption of illicit country liquor. But it is not for the High Court but for the Government to decide as to whether there is any social evil. In the event of a positive reply it is the Government's responsibility to proceed with the matter further and it is not for the High Court to advise. The High Court has not only exceeded its jurisdiction but has transgressed all limits of jurisdiction. This is neither fair nor reasonable and thus cannot be sustained. (Paras 15 and 17)

The High Court would do well to deal with the pending appeal and decide the issue in accordance with the records available before the High Court expeditiously without however being inhibited by any observation of the High Court. [5279] — S. 378 — Filing of appeals by State against acquittal — Procedure to avoid delay — Liability of Public Prosecutor — Policy of State Government of Gujarat regarding obtaining opinion of DM of the district concerned on the proposal to file the appeal — With a view to ensure filing of appeals within a reasonable time, High Court in a case issuing directions not to route the proposals through DMs concerned henceforth and also attributing the liability for delay in filing appeals to Public Prosecutors and making some strong observations in that connection — Directions modified, observations deleted, being avoidable and proper procedure laid down by Supreme Court

Although the High Court's anxiety can be appreciated that the appeal should be presented within reasonable time and procedural wrangles should be avoided so that unnecessary and avoidable delay does not take place, some of the observations of the High Court are quite strong and should have been avoided. Therefore, the observations made by the High Court are modified by deleting the directions regarding the liability of the Public Prosecutor in the event of delay attributable to the Public Prosecutor. Such deletion is made by hoping that the Public Prosecutors will be alive to their duties and responsibilities and the State Government will not fail to take appropriate action against the erring Public Prosecutors. In modification of the observations of the High Court, it is also directed that the Public Prosecutor concerned will initiate the proposal for preferring appeal against the order of acquittal and send such proposal directly to the Law Department of the State of Gujarat. But a copy of the proposal should also be sent by the Public Prosecutor to the District Magistrate of the district concerned so that the opinion of the District Magistrate is obtained by the State Government before final decision is taken by the State Government to prefer the proposed appeal. The State Government should issue necessary instruction to the District Magistrates that the District Magistrate concerned would send his views on the proposal as expeditiously as practicable so that the proposed appeal may be filed within the period of limitation. If such opinion of the District Magistrate is not received by the appropriate Legal Department of the State within a reasonable time, the Legal Department concerned will not wait for the response of the District Magistrate on the proposal given by the Public Prosecutor and a final decision will be taken by the State Government even in the absence of opinion of the District Magistrate so that the proposed appeal is not barred by limitation. The State Government should take final decision within such time-frame so that some reasonable time is left with the government counsel to draw up the memorandum of appeal and to present appeal petition before the Court within the period of limitation. The State Government may issue appropriate directions consistent with the guideline indicated in this order. State of Gujarat v. Ratilal Laljibhai Tandol, (1997) 7 SCC 227: 1997 SCC (Cri) 1046.

A complainant may be either a public servant or a private party. If the complainant is a public servant then the period of limitation for an application for special leave is 6 months. If the complainant is a private party then the period of limitation for an application for special leave is 60 days. The periods of 6 months and/or 60 days do not apply to appeals by the State Government [under sub-section (1)] or the Central Government [under sub-section (2)]. Appeals by the State Government or the Central Government continue to be governed by Article 114(a) of the Limitation Act. In other words, those appeals must be filed within 90 days from the date of the order appealed from. Needless to state if there is a delay in filing an appeal by the State Government or Central Government it would be open to them to file an application under Section 5 of the Limitation Act for condonation of such delay. An application for grant of leave to appeal was made in terms of Section 378(3) CrPC, 1973. As there was delay in making the said application, an application for condonation of delay was filed. The impugned judgment was pronounced on 18-12-2002. The copy of the order was received by the department concerned on 15-1-2003. Without wasting any time on the same date the relevant documents and papers were put up for necessary action before the Deputy Inspector General of Police (Headquarters). On the next day, the said Deputy Inspector General considered the matter and forwarded the file for consideration to the Deputy Inspector General of Police (M&P). Unfortunately the whole file along with note-sheet was found missing from the office and could not be traced in spite of best efforts made by the department. Finally it was traced on 15-3-2003 and the file was put up for necessary action by the Additional Director General of Police (Headquarters). The said officer opined that an appeal was to be filed on 26-3-2003, and finally the appeal was filed after appointing a Special Public Prosecutor. When it was noticed that no appeal had been filed, the Secretary to the Department of Law and Justice of the State Government concerned got in touch with the Additional Advocate General of the High Court concerned regarding the filing of the appeal and in fact the appeal was filed on 14-5-2003. In the application for condonation of delay it was clearly noted that when directions were given to reconstruct the file, the missing file suddenly appeared in the office of the Director General of Police.

Thus, on the basis of the said facts, it was submitted in support of the application for condonation of delay that the authorities were acting bona fide. Various decisions of the Supreme Court were pressed into service to seek condonation of delay. The High Court, however, refused to condone the delay of 57 days on the ground that it was the duty of the litigant to file an appeal before the expiry of the limitation period. Merely because the Additional Advocate General did not file an appeal in spite of the instructions issued to him, that did not constitute sufficient cause and further the fact that the records were purportedly missing was not a valid ground. It held that merely asking the Additional Advocate General to file an appeal was not sufficient and the department should have pursued the matter and should have made enquiries as to whether the appeal had in fact, been filed or not.

Allowing the appeal and setting aside the impugned order of the High Court,

Held :

The government decisions are taken by officers/agencies proverbially at a slow pace and encumbered process of pushing the files from table to table and keeping it on the table for considerable time causing delay — intentional or otherwise — is a routine. Considerable delay of procedural red tape in the process of their making decision is a common feature. Therefore, certain amount of latitude is not impermissible. If the appeals brought by the State are lost for such default no person is individually affected but what in the ultimate analysis suffers, is public interest. The expression "sufficient cause" should, therefore, be considered with pragmatism in a justice-oriented approach rather than the technical detection of sufficient cause for explaining every day's delay. The factors which are peculiar to and characteristic of the functioning of the governmental conditions would be cognizant to and requires adoption of pragmatic approach in justice-oriented process. The court should decide the matters on merits unless the case is hopelessly without merit. No separate standards to determine the cause laid by the State vis-à-vis private litigant could be laid to prove strict standards of sufficient cause. The Government at appropriate level should constitute legal cells to examine the cases whether any legal principles are involved for decision by the courts or whether cases require adjustment and should authorise the officers to take a decision or give appropriate permission for settlement. In the event of decision to file appeal, needed prompt action should be pursued by the officer responsible to file the appeal and he should be made personally responsible for lapses, if any. Equally, the State cannot be put on the same footing as an individual. The individual would always be quick in taking the decision whether he would pursue the remedy by way of an appeal or application since he is a person legally injured while the State is an impersonal machinery working through its officers or servants. (Para 15)

Considering the legal principles, the inevitable conclusion is that the delay of 57 days deserved condonation. Therefore, the order of the High Court refusing to condone the delay is set aside. [5284] — S. 378(3) — Appeal against acquittal — Limitation — Not necessary to first obtain leave of the High Court and then file the appeal — A composite application can be made under S. 378(3) — Limitation Act, 1963, Art. 114

Some of the respondents were acquitted under Ss. 304, Part II, 323, 324, Indian Penal Code, the case not being instituted upon a complaint. The judgment of the trial Court was delivered on March 30, 1974 and on April 1, 1974 the new Criminal Procedure Code came into force. The State of Rajasthan preferred a petition for leave to appeal under S. 378(3) of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 on June 27, 1974, which was within the period of limitation prescribed under Art. 114*(b)* of the Limitation Act, 1963. It described it as a petition for leave to appeal under S. 378(3) of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, with a prayer "to accept this petition to file an appeal in the present case...". Although the application was described as one under S. 378(3) of the Code of Criminal Procedure, all the facts and other requisites for a memorandum of appeal, including the grounds on which the appeal was founded, were given in as great a detail as was necessary. The High Court after hearing the State granted leave to appeal on August 16, 1974. The State thereafter filed again a petition of appeal on September 10, 1974 which was beyond the period of limitation of ninety days under Art. 114*(a)*. The High Court therefore dismissed the appeal as time-barred. No application for condonation of delay had been filed.

Held :

Under the law it will be perfectly in order if a composite application is made giving the necessary facts and circumstances of the case along with the grounds which may be urged in the appeal with a prayer for leave to entertain the appeal. It is not necessary, as a matter of law, that an application for leave to entertain the appeal should be lodged first and only after grant of leave by the High Court an appeal may be preferred against the order of acquittal. The possibility that the High Court may always in such cases condone the delay on application filed before it does not, in law, solve the legal issue. The right conferred by S. 378(1), Criminal Procedure Code, upon the State to prefer an appeal against acquittal will be jeopardised if such a procedure is adopted, for in certain cases it may so happen that the High Court may refuse to exercise its discretion to condone the delay.

It is, therefore, not necessary to wait until the grant of leave by the High Court to present a memorandum of appeal against acquittal at the instance of the State. Thus, appeal can be filed by the State within ninety days from the date of the order of acquittal and a prayer may be included in that appeal for entertaining the appeal under sub-section (3) of S. 378, Criminal Procedure Code. If the leave sought for is not granted by the High Court, the appeal is not entertained and stands dismissed.

(7) Procedure re filing of appeals/Delay/Laches (contd.)

In the present case the application for leave to appeal, which was made by the State in this case, is equivalent to a memorandum of appeal under S. 378(1) read with sub-section (3) of that section of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973. The fact that the application mentioned S. 378(3) is not decisive of the true character of the application which to all intents and purposes was a memorandum of appeal. There was, therefore, no need for presentation of a second petition of appeal nor for an application for condonation of delay in this case. The petition of appeal was filed within time and the High Court committed an error of law in dismissing the same as time-barred. State of Rajasthan v. Ramdeen, (1977) 2 SCC 630: 1977 SCC (Cri) 393: AIR 1977 SC 1328: 1977 Cri LJ 997.

High Court Rules, R. 1(q)(ii), Chapter I, Part I*

The State Government of M.P. having decided to prefer an appeal under S. 378(1), CrPC, filed application for 'leave' to appeal under S. 378(3) setting out therein the grounds of appeal. The application was listed before a Single Judge of the High Court as per R. 1(q), Chapter I, Part I of the M.P. High Court Rules and the Single Judge refused to grant the leave. The State then made an application for grant of certificate under Art. 134(1)(c) of the Constitution. The application was heard by a Division Bench. The State contended that the leave application under sub-section (3) of S. 378 must be treated as a part of the appeal preferred by the State Government under sub-section (1) thereof, and therefore, should have been placed before a Bench of two Judges under R. 1(q)(ii), Chapter I, Part I of the aforesaid Rules and consequently the order of the Single Judge rejecting the application for grant of leave under sub-section (3) of S. 378 of the Code was a nullity. The Division Bench rejected the contention of the State.

Allowing the appeal,

Held:

The Code by enacting sub-section (3) of S. 378 brought about a change in that there is no longer an unrestricted right of appeal against the orders of acquittal passed in such cases. However, there is a difference in the procedure regulating entertainment of State appeals against acquittals under sub-section (1) or sub-section (2) of S. 378 and appeals against acquittals filed by a complainant under sub-section (3) of S. 378. The State Government or the Central Government may, while preferring an appeal against acquittal under sub-section (1) or sub-section (2) of S. 378, incorporate a prayer in the memorandum of appeal for grant of leave under sub-section (3) thereof, or make a separate application for grant of leave under sub-section (3) of S. 378, but the making of such an application is not a condition precedent for a State appeal.

Therefore, in the present case the Single Judge had no competence to entertain, hear or dispose of the question of grant of leave under sub-section (3) of S. 378, as it had virtually entailed dismissal of the appeal preferred by the State Government under sub-section (1) thereof. The matter should have been dealt with by a Bench of two Judges in terms of R. 1(q)(ii), Chapter I, Part I, of the Madhya Pradesh High Court Rules. State of M.P. v. Devadas, (1982) 1 SCC 552: 1982 SCC (Cri) 275: AIR 1982 SC 800: 1982 Cri LJ 614: 1982 MLJ (Cri) 341.

The complainant filed a written complaint with the police that the respondent had inflicted knife injuries on him whereas the respondent's version was that the complainant was flirting with the respondent's wife at the railway station, for which the complainant was beaten by his wife and other persons at the railway station. On the basis of a complaint, a police case was registered against the respondent. Trial was held against him but the trial court acquitted the respondent on the ground that prosecution failed to establish its case beyond reasonable doubt. The complainant filed revision petition and the State filed an application for leave to appeal in the High Court but the High Court dismissed both the petition as well as the application. Application for leave to appeal was dismissed on the ground that judgment of trial court could not be considered as perverse and therefore no interference was called for. The State challenged this order in the Supreme Court.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The case was instituted on the basis of first information report. It was thus a police case. The de facto complainant, therefore, has no right to file an appeal. He preferred revision. Revisional jurisdiction can however be exercised sparingly and only in exceptional cases. A Revisional Court cannot convert itself into a regular court of appeal. Powers of Revisional Court are limited. Rejection of revision application cannot affect powers of the State in invoking statutory remedy available under Section 378 CrPC. (Paras 16 and 17)

In terms of Section 378(3) CrPC, appeal can be registered and heard on merits by High Court only after leave has been granted. In deciding whether or not leave should be granted, the High Court must apply its mind, consider whether a prima facie case has been made out or arguable points have been raised and not whether the order of acquittal would or would not be set aside. It cannot be laid down as an abstract proposition of law of universal application that each and every petition seeking leave to prefer an appeal against an order of acquittal recorded by trial court must be allowed by the appellate court and every appeal must be admitted and decided on merits. But it cannot also be overlooked that at that stage, the court would not enter into minute details of the prosecution evidence and refuse leave observing that the judgment of acquittal recorded by trial court could not be said to be "perverse" and, hence, no leave should be granted. (Paras 19 to 21)

The principle of right to first appeal lies in the doctrine of human fallibility that "Men are fallible" and "Judges are also men". It is keeping in view the said object that the principles has to be understood and applied. (Para 22)

Every crime is considered as an offence against society as a whole and not only against an individual even though it is an individual who is the ultimate sufferer. It is therefore the duty of the State to take appropriate steps when an offence has been committed. This should not however be understood as an inviolable rule that no leave should be refused by the appellate court against an order of acquittal. In such cases, the appellate court must consider the relevant material, sworn testimonies of prosecution witnesses and record reasons why leave sought by the State should not be granted and the order of acquittal recorded by the trial court should not be disturbed. Where there is application of mind by the appellate court and reasons (may be in brief) in support of such view are recorded, the order of the court may not be said to be illegal or objectionable. At the same time, however, if arguable points have been raised, if the material on record discloses deeper scrutiny and reappreciation, review or reconsideration of evidence, the appellate court must grant leave as sought and decide the appeal on merits. In the present case, the High Court did neither. The High Court expressed an opinion that the case did not require grant of leave but it failed to record reasons for refusal of such leave. (Paras 23 and 24)

The High Court should not have refused grant of leave by passing a brief order. Moreover, the High Court observed that judgment of the trial court could not be said to be "perverse". So far as powers of the appellate court in appeal against acquittal are concerned, no restrictions have been imposed by CrPC on such powers while dealing with an order against acquittal. The High Court has full power to reappreciate, review and reweigh at large the evidence on which the order of acquittal is founded, and to reach its own conclusion on such evidence. Both questions of fact and of law are open to determination by the appellate court. (Paras 31 and 32)

(8) Leave to appeal — S. 378(3) (contd.)

In a case of acquittal, there is a double presumption in favour of the respondent-accused. Firstly, the presumption of innocence is available to him under the fundamental principle of criminal jurisprudence that every person should be presumed innocent unless he is proved guilty by a competent court of law. Secondly, the accused having secured his acquittal, the presumption of his innocence is further reinforced by the trial court (and certainly not weakened). Nonetheless, it is not correct to say that unless the appellate court in an appeal against acquittal under challenge is convinced that the finding of acquittal recorded by the trial court is "perverse", it cannot interfere. If the appellate court on reappreciation of evidence and keeping in view well-established principles, comes to a contrary conclusion and records conviction, such conviction cannot be said to be contrary to law. (Para 33)

The High Court was not right in rejecting the application for leave on the ground that judgment of the trial court could not be termed as "perverse". If, on the basis of entire evidence on record, the order of acquittal is illegal, unwarranted or contrary to law, such an order can be set aside by an appellate court. Various expressions, such as, "substantial and compelling reasons", "very strong circumstances", "distorted conclusions", "glaring mistakes", "judgment being perverse", etc. are more in the nature of "flourishes of language" than restricting the ambit and scope of powers of the appellate court. They do not curtail the authority of the appellate court in interfering with an order of acquittal recorded by the trial court. The judgment of the High Court falls short of the test laid down by the Supreme Court in various cases referred to in Chandrappa case, (2007) 4 SCC 415 : (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 325. The order of the High Court, therefore, cannot stand and must be set aside. It is undoubtedly true that sub-section (3) of Section 378 CrPC specifically provides that the appeal under sub-sections (1) and (2) cannot be entertained except with the leave of the High Court and, therefore, an application for leave in such appeal filed by the State Government is a must. The limitation for filing the appeal is 90 days from the date of the order while the same article provides for 30 days of limitation from the date of grant of special leave. Therefore, what was before the High Court was the appeal itself and the petitioner prayed the condonation of delay of 801 days in filing the appeal against acquittal. The trial court was required to carefully appraise the entire evidence and then come to a conclusion regarding applicability of a particular provision. If the trial court was at lapse in this regard the High Court was obliged to undertake such an exercise by entertaining the appeal. The High Court ought to have in such circumstances granted leave and thereafter as a first court of appeal, analysed entire evidence on the record independently and returned its findings objectively as regards guilt or otherwise of the accused and applicability of a particular provision. It has failed to do so. The questions involved were not trivial. The High Court has not given any reasons for refusing to grant leave to file appeal against acquittal, and seems to have been completely oblivious to the fact that by such refusal, a close scrutiny of the order of acquittal, by the appellate forum, has been lost once and for all. The manner in which appeal against acquittal has been dealt with by the High Court leaves much to be desired. Reasons introduce clarity in an order. On the plainest consideration of justice, the High Court ought to have set forth its reasons, howsoever brief, in its order indicative of an application of its mind, all the more when its order is amenable to further avenue of challenge. The absence of reasons has rendered the High Court order not sustainable. (Para 7). State of Haryana v. Surjit Singh, (2008) 17 SCC 196: AIR 2009 SC 1480: (2008) 72 AIC 100 (SC).

[5299] — S. 378(3) — Leave to appeal against acquittal — Need for reasons to be given in determination of — Duty to give reasons/Recording of reasons/Speaking order — Reasons, held, are the hallmark of a judgment and exercise of judicial power — Need for giving of reasons explained — Need all the more pronounced when refusal of leave to appeal has the effect of foreclosing scope for scrutiny of judgment of trial court at the hands of first appellate court

The hallmark of a judgment/order and exercise of judicial power by a judicial forum is to disclose the reasons for its decision and giving of reasons has been always insisted upon as one of the fundamentals of sound administration justice-delivery system, to make known that there had been proper and due application of mind to the issue before the Court and also as an essential requisite of principles of natural justice. (Para 3)

The giving of reasons for a decision is an essential attribute of judicial and judicious disposal of a matter before courts, and which is the only indication to know of the manner and quality of exercise undertaken, as also the fact that the court concerned had really applied its mind. All the more so, when refusal of leave to appeal has the effect of foreclosing once and for all a scope for scrutiny of the judgment of the trial court even at the instance and hands of the first appellate court. (Para 3)

The Supreme Court in Dhaniram Luhar case, (2004) 5 SCC 568, while reiterating the view expressed in the earlier cases for the past two decades emphasised the necessity, duty and obligation of the High Court to record reasons in disposing of appeals arising under Section 378 CrPC, 1973. The fact that the entertaining of an appeal at the instance of the State against an order of acquittal for an effective consideration of the same on merits is made subject to the preliminary exercise of obtaining of leave to appeal from the High Court, is no reason to consider it as an appeal of any inferior quality or grade, when it has been specifically and statutorily provided for, or sufficient to obviate and dispense with the obvious necessity to record reasons. The need for recording reasons for the conclusion arrived at by the High Court under Section 378 has nothing to do with the fact that the appeal envisaged under Section 378 CrPC is conditioned upon the seeking for and obtaining of leave from the court. [5300] — S. 378(3) — Leave to appeal against acquittal — Reasons for decision — Cardinality of recording of, especially since orders of High Court in this regard are amenable to further challenge before Supreme Court — Rationale for giving of reasons — On facts held, High Court remiss in not giving reasons for refusing leave to appeal, especially in not following rulings of Supreme Court in this regard, which had recognised such need as being imperative

Reasons introduce clarity in an order. Reason is the heartbeat of every conclusion, and without the same it becomes lifeless. Reasons substitute subjectivity by objectivity. The emphasis on recording reasons is that if the decision reveals the "inscrutable face of the sphinx", it can, by its silence, render it virtually impossible for the courts to perform their appellate function or exercise the power of judicial review in adjudging the validity of the decision. Right to reason is an indispensable part of a sound judicial system: reasons at least sufficient to indicate an application of mind to the matter before court. Another rationale is that the affected party can know why the decision has gone against him. One of the salutary requirements of natural justice is spelling out reasons for the order made; in other words, a speaking-out. The "inscrutable face of the sphinx" is ordinarily incongruous with a judicial or quasi-judicial performance. (Paras 6 to 8)

The requirement of indicating reasons in cases involving the grant of leave to appeal against acquittal under Section 378(3) CrPC, 1973 has been judicially recognised as imperative. (Para 6). State of Orissa v. Dhaniram Luhar, (2004) 5 SCC 568: AIR 2004 SC 1794: 2004 Cri LJ 1385.

[5308] — S. 378(3) — Appeal against acquittal — Leave to appeal — In limine dismissal of application by High Court, held, not justified when trial court's conclusion was not based on proper appraisal of entire evidence on the question of application of Ss. 302 and 149 IPC to the facts of the case — High Court should have granted leave and on reappreciation of evidence on record rendered its own findings — It should have at least given reasons for refusing to grant the leave, more so when its order is open to further challenge — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/149

The accused persons were alleged to have formed an unlawful assembly, trespassed into the house of the deceased and inflicted injuries on him and his son by deadly weapons as a result of which the deceased died. The trial court held that some of the accused persons did not inflict any injury and assault made by accused R was an individual act for which he must be convicted under Section 304 Part II IPC and the other two accused persons were to be convicted under Sections 452 and 323 r/w Section 34 IPC. Other accused persons were acquitted of the charges. The State filed an application under Section 378(3) CrPC taking the stand that for attracting Section 149 IPC it was not necessary to attribute any particular overt act and that merely because accused R had assaulted with the blunt side of the gandasa, it cannot mean that he did not have the requisite intention to commit the offence of murder. The trial court having noticed that the blow was given with such great force that it caused multiple fractures and laceration of the brain, the alteration of the conviction from Section 302 IPC to Section 304 Part II was not correct. The High Court dismissed the State's application under Section 378(3) with the following words:

"We find no good ground to interfere with the reasoned judgment of the trial court. Dismissed."

Before the Supreme Court the State questioned the legality of the order of the High Court.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The trial court was required to carefully appraise the entire evidence and then come to a conclusion. If the trial court was at lapse in this regard the High Court was obliged to undertake such an exercise by entertaining the appeal. The trial court on the facts of this case did not perform its duties, as was enjoined on it by law. The High Court ought to have in such circumstances granted leave and thereafter as a first court of appeal, reappreciated the entire evidence on the record independently and returned its findings objectively as regards guilt or otherwise of the accused. It has failed to do so. The questions involved were not trivial. The question regarding application of Sections 302 and 149 IPC as raised does require consideration, keeping in view the evidence adduced and conclusions of the trial court. The High Court has not given any reasons for refusing to grant leave to file appeal against acquittal, and seems to have been completely oblivious to the fact that by such refusal, a close scrutiny of the order of acquittal, by the appellate forum, has been lost once and for all. The manner in which appeal against acquittal has been dealt with by the High Court leaves much to be desired. Reasons introduce clarity in an order. On plainest consideration of justice, the High Court ought to have set forth its reasons, howsoever brief, in its order, indicative of an application of its mind; all the more when its order is amenable to further avenue of challenge. The absence of reasons has rendered the High Court order not sustainable. (Para 9). State of Haryana v. Ram Pal, (2005) 3 SCC 347: 2005 SCC (Cri) 731: AIR 2005 SC 1552: 2005 Cri LJ 1718.

The attempt to draw an analogy with the power of the Supreme Court under Article 136 of the Constitution and the practice of rejecting appeals at the SLP stage invariably without assigning reasons with the one to be exercised while dealing with an application for leave to appeal under Section 378 CrPC has no meaning and is illogical. First of all, the High Court is not the final court in the hierarchy and its orders are amenable to challenge before Supreme Court, unlike the obvious position that there is no scope for any further appeal from the order made declining to grant special leave to appeal. It has been on more than one occasion reiterated that Article 136 of the Constitution does not confer any right of appeal in favour of any party as such and it is not that any and every error is envisaged to be corrected in exercising powers under

(8) Leave to appeal — S. 378(3) (contd.)

Article 136. The powers of Supreme Court under Article 136 of the Constitution are special and extraordinary and the main object is to ensure that there has been no miscarriage of justice. That cannot be said to be the same with an appeal envisaged under Section 378 CrPC despite the fact that it is made subject to the obtaining of leave to file the appeal. The requirement to obtain leave does not render the nature, extent or the scope of the appeal under the Code a precarious one as sought to be assumed, on behalf of the appellant. Consequently, this appeal is allowed and the order of the High Court is set aside. (Para 4). State of Rajasthan v. Sohan Lal, (2004) 5 SCC 573.

The High Court has not given any reasons for refusing to grant leave to file appeal against acquittal, and seems to have been completely oblivious to the fact that by such refusal, a close scrutiny of the order of acquittal, by the appellate forum, has been lost once and for all. The manner in which appeal against acquittal has been dealt with by the High Court leaves much to be desired. Reasons introduce clarity in an order. On plainest consideration of justice, the High Court ought to have set forth its reasons, howsoever brief, in its order indicative of an application of its mind, all the more when its order is amenable to further avenue of challenge. The absence of reasons has rendered the High Court order not sustainable. [5319] — Ss. 378(3) & (4) — For filing appeal against acquittal, while a complainant is required to obtain "special leave" under sub-section (4), State/Central Government is only required to obtain "leave" under sub-section (3)

Under Section 417 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1898 no application for special leave to appeal had to be made by the State Government or the Central Government, if they filed an appeal against acquittal. The right of the State Government to file an appeal under Section 417(1) was subject to sub-section (5) which provided that if special leave to appeal had been refused to a complainant then the State Government could not maintain an appeal. A comparison of Section 378 with the old Section 417 shows that whilst under the old section no application for leave to appeal had to be made by the State Government or the Central Government, now by virtue of Section 378(3) the State Government or the Central Government have to obtain leave of the High Court before their appeal could be entertained. Sub-section (4) of Section 378 is identical to sub-section (3) of Section 417. Thus a complainant desirous of filing an appeal against acquittal must still obtain special leave. Section 378 makes a distinction between an appeal filed by the State Government or the Central Government, who only need to obtain "leave", and an appeal by a complainant who needs to obtain "special leave". The Division Bench in not allowing the condonation of delay has effectively dismissed the appeal in the sense that it has not allowed the State Government to proceed with the appeal for which there was a provision. This was a prosecution not based on a private complaint but on the police report. Therefore, the State Government had a right under Section 378(2) CrPC to file an appeal and very conspicuously the private party did not have that right. The private complainant, therefore, could only excite the general powers of revision by the High Court. (Para 20). K. Ramachandran v. *V.N. After the order of acquittal was recorded by the Magistrate, appeals were filed by the aggrieved respondents herein before the High Court under Section 378(4) CrPC which requires the grant of leave to appeal by the High Court before entertaining the appeals. When such an application for grant of leave came up before the Court, the Court having considered it necessary to hear the appellants herein (respondent before it) before granting leave, issued notice in this regard but the respondent-accused were not actually served with the court notice and the Court adjourned the matter to take out fresh notice. When the fact situation remained the same inasmuch as the respondents before the High Court were not properly served, the Judge proceeded to hear the petitioners before it and granted leave to appeal.

Held :

On facts of this case since at a preliminary stage the Court considered it necessary to hear the respondent-accused before granting leave and directed the issuance of notice, judicial propriety required the Court at a subsequent stage to see that the respondents were served with court notice and to hear them before granting leave. Had the Court not issued the notice earlier it might have been a different thing in law. The Court once having thought it necessary to hear the respondents before granting leave, ought not to have granted leave ex parte, more so in the background of the fact that the notices earlier directed to be issued were not served because of lack of steps taken by the petitioners before it. Therefore, it is appropriate that the impugned order granting leave should be set aside and the matter be remanded back to the High Court to hear the appellants on the question of grant of leave to appeal. A complaint case under Chapter 15 CrPC filed by the appellant complainant was dismissed by the Magistrate. The High Court, by the impugned order, dismissed the appeal preferred thereagainst, though leave had been granted under Section 378(4) CrPC.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held:

No interference is called for. The High Court has indicated several reasons as to why the complainant's version lacks credibility or cogency. The High Court referred to the various conclusions of the trial court and held that the accusations have not been established. The trial court with reference to the evidence of witnesses came to hold that the accusations were without substance and there was no material to show the alleged commission of offence. Since the order was passed in a complaint case, appeal was preferred by grant of leave under Section 378(4) CrPC. (Paras 6 and 4). M. Dhandapani v. R. Muthu Naliappan, (2008) 14 SCC 501.

Section 378(6) also envisages that if a case is instituted by the complainant and such leave is refused, even the State Government would be unable to pursue any appeal under sub-sections (1) or (2) against the impugned judgment of acquittal. If this is the effect of the finality attained by the judgment, even in case of an offence which was tried on the basis of a private complaint, then there would be no reason not to give the same effect to the finality attained by the judgment of acquittal by reason of the order passed in appeal filed by the State Government. [5331] — Ss. 378 and 374 — Appellate court to correct error in judgment and refrain from commenting on Judge — Constitution of India — Article 136

The higher courts in exercise of their appellate or original jurisdiction may find patent errors of law or fact on appreciation of evidence in the judgment which has been challenged before them. Despite this, what is of significance is that, the courts should correct the error in judgment and not normally comment upon the Judge. The possibility of taking a contrary view is part of the system. Judicial propriety and discipline demand that strictures or lacerating language should not be used by the higher courts in exercise of their appellate or supervisory jurisdiction. Judicial discipline requires that errors of judgments should be corrected by reasons of law, and the practice of passing comments against the lower courts needs to be deprecated in no uncertain terms. The individuals come and go but what actually stands forever is the institution. (Para 281)

In the present case the High Court in its judgment, on the one hand, explicitly referred to certain criticism/comments/remarks made by the trial Judge against the investigating agency, and observed that they were uncalled for and that they should have been avoided. But, on the other hand, the Division Bench itself while criticising the reasoning in the judgment under appeal made certain sweeping remarks against the trial Judge. It is also desirable, that the language which may imply an allegation of suspicion in the performance of function of the court should be carefully examined and unless it is absolutely established on record, comments should be avoided. (Paras 282 and 283)

The Division Bench could have avoided making such observations which directly or impliedly indicate impropriety in the functioning of the court, appreciation of evidence by the learned Judge and/or any other ancillary matter. The content and merit of the judgment would have remained unaffected even if such language or comments were not made against the trial Judge. The respect of judiciary and for the judiciary, is of paramount consideration. Every possible effort should be made and precaution taken which will help in preservation of public faith and individual dignity. A judicial consensus would require that the judgment should be set aside or affirmed as the case may be but preferably without offering any undesirable comments, disparaging remarks or indications which would impinge upon the dignity and respect of judicial system, actus curiae neminem gravabit. Despite exercise of such restraint, if, in a given case, the court finds compelling reasons for making any comments in that event it will be in consonance with the basic rule of law and adherence to the principles of natural justice that viewpoint of the Judge concerned should also be invited. Expunction of all remarks made by trial Judge against prosecution and by Division Bench against trial Judge is directed. The power of the High Court while hearing an appeal against acquittal is as wide and comprehensive as in an appeal against the conviction and it has full power to reappreciate the entire evidence, but if two views on the evidence are possible, one supporting the acquittal and the other indicating conviction, then, the High Court would not be justified in interfering with the acquittal, merely because it is of the view that sitting as a trial court, a different view could have been taken. But if the judgment of the trial court is admittedly perverse, legally erroneous and based on a wrong appreciation of the evidence, then it cannot but be just and proper for the High Court to reverse the judgment of acquittal recorded by the trial court as otherwise there would be gross miscarriage of justice. Allowing the appeal,

Held :

In FIR, it was alleged by PW 4 that his mother sold illicit liquor to maintain her children. In his evidence, however, he stated that his mother sold only two bottles of liquor occasionally. It brothers had nothing to do with sale of liquor, as rightly pointed out by trial court, motive must be held to have not been proved. Besides, PW 5 categorically denied that his mother sold any liquor or earned her livelihood by doing liquor work. (Para 8)

Further, there were some discrepancies with regard to the time of occurrence of the incident also. Whereas according to PW 4, the assailants of his brothers were identified in a torchlight, PW 5 stated that they had identified the accused in the daylight. Even PW 4, in his evidence, admitted that he did not have any torch in his possession and, therefore, he did not see the accused under the torchlight which was introduced for the first time in his supplementary evidence. However, in FIR it was stated, he produced a torch containing three cells. The same was neither seized nor produced. PW 4 furthermore denied that M had given any lalkara. He also accepted that M's right arm was amputated. (Para 11)

The place of occurrence was at a distance of about one km from their house. No evidence was brought on record as to how the parties were known to each other. There is, therefore, significant contradiction in the matter of the number of injuries, time of occurrence, place of occurrence, sequence of events, the manner of identification of the accused, lack of motive and false implication of M. PW 4 made vital contradictions in his FIR vis-à-vis the supplementary statement evidently keeping in view the physical condition of M. It is, therefore, difficult to rely upon his testimony. He furthermore denied to have made a statement before the police that the appellant had given a datar blow on PW 5. Also, he could not deny that M was an employee in private company and remained at his work place from morning to evening. (Paras 12 and 13)

In such circumstances, impugned judgment convicting the appellant cannot be maintained. The judgment of trial court acquitting appellant restored. (Para 14). Sucha Singh v. State of Punjab, (2009) 11 SCC 584: (2009) 3 SCC (Cri) 1498: 2009 Cri LJ 3444: (2009) 78 AIC 112 (SC).

[5344] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Conviction reversed — Political rivalry — Appellant, leader of political party alleged to have thrown bomb at deceased resulting in his instantaneous death, while other accused (sixteen in all), also armed with deadly weapons assaulted complainant party injuring them — Some more bombs also said to have been hurled during occurrence — Testimonies of PWs neither inspiring confidence nor corroborating each other and their version against appellant parrot-like — Most of them figuring as accused in counter-case — Even testimonies of police witnesses contradicting each other in matter of timings and also timing of complaint (Ext. P-1) — Discrepancy between medical and ocular evidence — Non-explanation of grievous injuries sustained by some accused — No traces of explosion found at place of occurrence — IO also failing to show places where explosions were alleged, in his sketch map — Significantly another report was lodged by A-14 on same day at 7.45 a.m. wherein hurling of bombs was attributed to complainants — Besides, when PWs 7 and 1 who had contested election against appellant were present at scene of occurrence, there was no reason for appellant to throw bomb at deceased who was a mere coolie — Even before complaint (Ext. P-1) was recorded at behest of PW 1, an MLA and legal advisors of the party had reached hospital which create doubt as regards its veracity as well as testimony of PW 1 — In such circumstances, held, High Court erred in interfering with well-reasoned judgment of acquittal of trial court and convicting appellant alone — Impugned judgment set aside — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302 and Ss. 147, 148, 324, 326, 307 and 302 r/w S. 149 (Paras 16 to 22 and 26 to 36)

Political rivalry between TDP and the Congress Party resulting in frequent faction clashes. One such incident had occurred on 13-12-1998 on account of passage used by both groups wherein PW 1 and his party members belonging to Congress Party were accused. On 16-12-1998, at about 7.30 a.m., when PW 1 along with others had gone to cart the paddy hay of one R, appellant (A-1) and 15 others came there armed with bombs and deadly weapons. Appellant alleged to have hurled a bomb on chest of deceased resulting in his instantaneous death, while other accused attacked prosecution party with their respective weapons. PW 9, who was the constable on bandobast duty came to the scene of offence and opened fire in air to disperse the mob. Accused thereafter ran away while injured were taken to the hospital. PW 1 gave a complaint Ext. P-1 there.

The trial court acquitted all accused finding that: (i) there was deliberate delay in filing FIR which was lodged after due deliberations with political leaders: (ii) evidence of PWs was not inspiring confidence; (iii) there was discrepancy between ocular and medical evidence; (iv) injuries on accused were not explained. The High Court by impugned judgment, in appeal filed thereagainst, while confirming acquittal of other accused, convicted appellant alone under Section 302 IPC. Hence, the present appeal.

[5354] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Reversal of acquittal merely because another view was possible, held, improper — Deceased chasing the accused with something like scissors or knife and threatening to kill them, besides shouting abusive and obscene words — Appellant picking up a stick and giving a blow on the left side of the neck near the ear as a result of which deceased falling down — Accused even thereafter continuing giving further blows resulting in his death — Accused acquitted by the trial court holding that right of private defence had been validly exercised — High Court though noticing that it was the deceased who had offered provocation by his words and acts and the three blows delivered by the appellant could not be said to be delivered in a cruel or unusual manner, yet convicting the appellant under S. 304 Pt. II IPC, merely observing that the appellant "overreacted perhaps under heat of passion" and it was a case of "overkill" — Held, High Court was not justified in doing so — It not only failed to give due importance and weight to the extenuating circumstances and advantages in favour of the appellant which inevitably go to show that he acted well within his reasonable limits but committed a grave error in interfering with his acquittal merely because there could also be another possible view — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302 and 96, 97 & 100

It could not have been possible, in the heat of passion for the appellant who himself was under the threat of his life having regard to the weapon which the deceased was having and also found to have been in an abusive and aggressive mood, to weigh in such a situation on the spur of the moment as to what injury the deceased is going to cause and what amount of force in retaliation would alone be sufficient to disarm his assailant. In moments of excitement or disturbed mental equilibrium it is often difficult to expect the parties to preserve composure and use only so much of force in retaliation commensurate with the danger apprehended to him. Where an assault is about to take place by use of force, it would be lawful to repel the force in self-defence and the right of private defence would commence as soon as the threat to him becomes imminent. Such situations have to be judged in the light of what happens on the spur of the moment on the spot and keeping in view the normal reaction in the ordinary course of human conduct as to how each person would react under such circumstances in a sudden manner with an instinct of self-preservation. A-4, an old man, his son (A-1) and two grandsons (A-3 and A-4), were tried for murder of their neighbour. Quarrel was said to have erupted on account of playing of obscene songs over a tape recorder by one of the grandsons, A-3 against which complaint was made to the Panchayat. According to the prosecution, A-3 inflicted three blows on the deceased with gandasi. A-3's grandfather i.e. A-4 inflicted a deep stab injury which proved fatal. At this stage, PW 2 and PW 1, father and the brother of the deceased arrived at the scene. They too were attacked by the assailants. It is said that when the injured party started counter-attacking the assailants, the latter vanished from the scene. The trial court acquitted A-4 but convicted others. The High Court while sustaining conviction of others, convicted A-4 also. The accused made a plea that the deceased and his kith and kin were the aggressors. Their further case was that A-4 was not at all present at the scene.

Allowing the appeal of A-4, and modifying the conviction of A-1 to A-3,

Held:

This is a case where both sides sustained injuries. (Para 7)

A strong reasoning was expected when the High Court chose to convict A-4 by reversing acquittal order of the lower court. PW 1 and PW 2 who attributed fatal injury to A-4 when they were examined in chief, have candidly admitted during cross-examination that they did not say that aspect when they were interrogated by the investigating officer. If so, the evidence of PW 1 and PW 2 could not be used against A-4. (Para 8)

It was submitted on behalf of the State that evidence of PW 3 being an independent witness was enough to show that A-4 had inflicted fatal blow. There is difficulty in accepting this contention. PW 3 said in the cross-examination that A-4 was not present at the scene at all as he was away. An attempt was made on behalf of the State to show that reference to Tarsem Singh in cross-examination was some other person but not A-4. This possibility is not ruled out but that is not enough to definitely conclude that PW 3 did not mean A-4 when he mentioned the name of Tarsem Singh in the said context. It has to be kept in view that A-4 secured an order of acquittal from the trial court. (Para 9)

Second reason is that PW 3's version regarding commencement of occurrence, runs counter to the version of PW 1 and PW 2. When PW 3 said that he saw the deceased as well as PW 1 and PW 2 standing at the scene of occurrence right from the beginning, PW 1 and PW 2 have said that they were inside the house during the beginning stage and they went out only after hearing the commotion and the cry made by the deceased for help. (Para 10)

For the above reasons, it is difficult to place absolute reliance on the testimony of PW 3 insofar as the involvement of A-4 is concerned. The High Court wrongly interfered with the order of acquittal of A-4. (Para 11). Resham Singh v. State of Punjab, (2002) 10 SCC 151: 2004 SCC (Cri) 452: AIR 2002 SC 2625.

II/34 IPC — Penal Code, 1860, Ss. 304 Pt. II/34*

In this case there was a delay of 18 hours in lodging the FIR, no ligature marks were found on the body of the deceased as against the prosecution story that the deceased was tied to a tree with a rope and that was the position throughout the night; no burn marks were found on the clothes of the deceased though there were several burn injuries on the body of the deceased as per the prosecution; the body was not identified by the husband of the deceased at the place of the occurrence or at inquest raising serious doubts about his presence itself. The doctor, in his evidence has stated that when he gave opinion the weapons stated to have been seized were not shown to him by the police; the weapons when produced were not sealed; on them the name of the accused, case number and name of the deceased were not mentioned. The deceased's husband, the sole eyewitness, in his evidence has stated that when the police went to the spot with him all these weapons were lying at the spot and were taken into possession. The investigating officer deposed that the weapons were recovered several days after the incident at the instance of one of the accused, who was not before the Court. The rope with which the deceased was alleged to have been tied to the tree was also not recovered. The trial court preferred not to convict the accused on the solitary testimony of the deceased's husband which suffered from infirmities and was not corroborated by independent circumstances in the shape of medical evidence and other evidence. In appeal the High Court opined that the findings recorded by the trial court were palpably erroneous. In the judgment of the High Court there was no reference to the statements of the witnesses at least on material aspects of the prosecution case. The judgment contained narration as to the prosecution story, arguments of the learned counsel and reproduction of injuries found on the deceased running into four pages, the reasons and discussion were only found in one paragraph. In the penultimate paragraph the High Court only stated that the case of murder was not spelt out as there was no intention on the part of the accused to cause death but they could be safely attributed with the knowledge that death could be caused in such a situation and as such convicted them for offence punishable under Section 304 Part II IPC.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The infirmities in the prosecution case gave rise to serious doubts as to the prosecution case and involvement of the appellants in the commission of the offence. When the material contradictions and omissions and improvements in the evidence of the deceased's husband were found and there was no corroboration to his evidence by other independent witnesses, it was fatal to the prosecution case. The trial court was right in not relying on his evidence. (Para 12)

The approach of the High Court and consideration of the case that too for reversal of the order of acquittal has been unsatisfactory and casual. The High Court did not consider the case before it, as it ought to have been by a court of first appeal on facts. The High Court did not dislodge the reasons given by the trial court for acquittal. Further the evidence was neither discussed nor scrutinized nor analysed to show how the trial court was wrong in appreciating the evidence, considering the probabilities of the case and recording findings. (Para 11)

No interference by the High Court in such an appeal was called for or warranted when the reasons given by the trial court for recording acquittal are good and sturdy. The trial court had the advantage and benefit of observing during the trial the demeanour and conduct of the witnesses from its commencement to completion and with that background on proper and objective appreciation of the evidence as a whole recorded a finding of acquittal supported by reasons. The High Court could not upset an order of acquittal as if it was another trial court to record conviction forgetting that it was sitting in first appeal against an order of acquittal. The High Court failed to keep in its mind the well-settled principles in the matter of reversing an order of acquittal. (Para 13)

Assuming one other view was possible to be taken by the High Court, that was not enough in the light of the well-settled position in law. In this case, having regard to the discussion made and reasons given by the trial court, it cannot be said that the appreciation of evidence was perverse or arbitrary or findings recorded were based on no evidence or material evidence was not considered. The High Court committed a grave error in convicting and sentencing the accused, reversing the order of acquittal merely because it could take a different view. In a case like this, it is the duty of the Supreme Court to interfere with the impugned judgment and order so as to do substantial justice. (Para 14)

In the result, for the reasons stated above the impugned judgment of the High Court is set aside, that of the trial court is restored and the appellants be set at liberty forthwith, if they are not required in any other case. The appellant was prosecuted for commission of offence under Sections 8/18 of the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 on the basis of a first information report lodged by the officer in charge of PS Kumbhraj alleging that while he was posted as SHO at the said police station, when he came out for arresting one S he found two persons coming at a fast speed in a scooter. They were stopped and on searching their person nothing was found, but, on search of the scooter, some black-coloured liquid substance contained in six big plastic bags and one small plastic bag was seen said to be containing opium. Allegedly, the SDOP of the place Raghogarh was informed and 5 kg 890 gm opium was recovered. They were arrested at the spot. The Sessions Judge recorded a judgment of acquittal, inter alia, holding that the search and seizure was vitiated in law as mandatory statutory requirements contained in Sections 50 and 42 of the NDPS Act were not complied with. The seizure witness did not support the prosecution case. The informant also did not comply with the requirements of Section 57 of the NDPS Act. Sealing of the contraband materials was not carried out in accordance with law as no responsible officer fixed seal on the seized samples. The State preferred an appeal before the High Court against the said judgment of acquittal. The High Court reversed the said judgment of the Sessions Judge. Hence this present appeal.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

It is now well settled that the offence committed under the Act is a grave one. Procedural safeguards provided therefor in terms of Sections 41, 42 and 50 of the NDPS Act should be complied with. (Para 6)

Before seizure of the contraband from the scooter, personal search of the appellants had been carried out and, admittedly, even at that time the provisions of Section 50 of the Act, although required in law, had not been complied with. The provisions of Section 50 might not have been required to be complied with so far as the search of scooter is concerned, but, keeping in view the fact that the person of the appellants was also searched, it was obligatory to comply with the said provisions. It was not done. (Paras 12 and 16)

The High Court could not have brushed aside the findings of the learned Sessions Judge without meeting the reasonings assigned by him as it was dealing with a judgment of acquittal. For the reasons aforementioned, the impugned judgment cannot be sustained which is set aside accordingly. The High Court was considering a judgment of acquittal; it set aside a part of the finding of the trial court. It could not have interfered with the judgment of acquittal if two views were possible. The judgment of the trial court cannot be said to be wholly unreasonable or otherwise perverse. Circumstances brought on record by the prosecution

The High Court had not exceeded its peripheral limits stated in various pronouncements for interfering with the order of acquittal passed by the trial court while dealing with the appeal against such order of acquittal. The reasons assigned by the trial Judge to disbelieve and totally reject the evidence of PWs 1 and 2 are not only too general but flimsy which cannot be sustained as tenable reasons in the eye of the law. The non-examination of the father whom the appellant could have also summoned as he did of others, the ill will both sides seem to have mutually carried for the other cannot by themselves be sufficient reasons when the whole episode was inside the house and in the presence of family and other related members. Perfunctory consideration and perversity of approach in unduly magnifying insignificant aspects appear to be patently on record in the judgment of the trial court. On the other hand the approach, process of reasoning and the ultimate conclusions and findings arrived at by the High Court to indict the appellant of the offence and convict him were justified. Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

In the instant case, the incident took place in front of MDO Office at V around 1.40 p.m. The finding of the trial court is to the effect that murder of the deceased took place at 1.40 p.m. at V and the same fact is not disputed by the accused persons. Between 2.40 and 2.45 p.m. the deceased and the injured were taken to the Government Hospital at P, which is also 12 km from the place of occurrence. The medical intimation is Ext. P-25 which was sent to the station-in-charge at 2.45 p.m. PW 1 (the de facto complainant) was examined by PW 22 (the doctor) at around 3.30 p.m. The Station-in-Charge, P, received information around that time. At 4.00 p.m. the statement of PW 1 was recorded by PW 25 (the Head Constable) in the presence of PW 22. (Para 15)

The statement of PW 1 (the de facto complainant) along with Ext. P-25 (medical intimation) was sent to V Police Station on the point of jurisdiction and the same was registered at V PS by PW 21. The inquest was held at around 9 p.m. to 12 midnight and copy of FIR was received by the Ilaqa Magistrate. It is to be noted that since the Magistrate at P was on leave and the Magistrate at another place was not the in-charge, it was sent to another court which is at a distance of 60 km as is evident from the evidence of PW 21. Therefore, there is no delay in sending the FIR to the Magistrate. The allegation that the FIR was ante-timed is without any foundation. (Para 16)

The impugned judgment cannot be said to be suffering from infirmity to warrant interference. (Para 17). Perla Somasekhara Reddy v. State of A.P., (2009) 16 SCC 98.

[5413] — Ss. 378 and 386(a) — Appeal against acquittal — Acquittal reversed — Murder trial — Approach of trial court — Held, entire approach of trial court in appreciating evidence of eyewitnesses perverse and grossly improper — Hence, acquittal rightly set aside by High Court — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/149 and 148

The appellants contended that the statement of PW 4 (eyewitness) was recorded by the investigating officer after about 7-8 days from the date of occurrence which proves that PW 4 was not present on the spot as projected by the prosecution. (Para 22)

It is the evidence of PW 4 that in the early morning of the following day of occurrence, he had gone to Hamirpur for doing work and stayed there for about 7-8 days. The trial court disbelieved the testimony of this witness on the ground that the witness could not disclose the name of the shopkeeper from whom he purchased blade for his randdha at Sumerpur market on the day of occurrence. The approach of the trial court in appreciating the evidence of the eyewitness was wholly unwarranted and uncalled for. The presence of PW 4 at the time of the incident has been fully proved on record and his evidence is consistent and trustworthy to prove that the accused persons had fired gunshots at J (the deceased) on the day of occurrence when he along with deceased, his father PW 1, and other co-villagers were returning from the railway station to their village. (Para 23)

The trial court observed that as per the post-mortem report deceased was a young man of 35 years of age and of good built and, therefore, there was no need for PW 1 (father of the deceased), to go to the railway station to take a bag of khalli from his son (the deceased) and carry the same from the railway station to the village. It has come in the evidence of PW 1 that his son was a patient of asthma and therefore he used to be vigilant that his son should not take much physical strain and because of that reason he went to the railway station to share with his son the burden of the load of one bag containing 15 kg of khalli. There is nothing wrong if PW 1 had gone to the railway station for extending some help to his son. Thus, the entire approach of the trial court in appreciating the evidence of the eyewitnesses is perverse and grossly improper. [5429] — Ss. 378 and 379 — In an appeal against acquittal, High Court relying on circumstantial evidence and convicting accused under S. 302 IPC — Sustainability — Circumstances relied on by the High Court were:- (i) Existence of bad relationship between the accused and his wife and that he used to beat her; (ii) accused last seen with the deceased; and (iii) he had set up false plea of alibi — PWs who were examined to prove that the accused used to beat his deceased wife, in spite of being available, not questioned by the IO within a reasonable time i.e. while one of them was questioned after 20-22 days, the other was questioned after 8 days of the incident — Hence held, there was every possibility that they were planted witnesses — Apart from their evidence, no other evidence to show that there was bad relationship between the accused and the deceased — Moreover, prosecution failing to throw light on complicity or otherwise of the other inmates of the house — Setting up of false alibi not indicative that the accused was positively responsible for murder — Under these circumstances held, High Court was not justified in reversing the acquittal of the accused — However, since the accused had participated in the cremation of the dead body, knowledge that the deceased had died of multiple injuries could be attributed to him — Even if the appellant had not participated in the commission of murder, he was certainly aware that a criminal offence had been committed and instead of informing the police about the incident, he hastily made preparation for cremating the dead body of the deceased — Hence, accused guilty of offence punishable under S. 201 IPC — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302

There is no case that the two PWs were not available in the locality during the time of the incident so that the police could have ascertained the facts from these neighbours. There is every possibility that these witnesses could have been planted witnesses just to help the prosecution. This fact should have been taken note of by the High Court, especially when the High Court was considering a case of an appeal against acquittal. Apart from the evidence of these PWs there is no other evidence to show the bad relationship between the appellant and the deceased. Of course, the evidence adduced by the appellant to prove his alibi was not very convincing but merely because he had set up a false alibi, it cannot be held that he was positively responsible for the murder. Apart from the accused, there were 5 other inmates in the house. The prosecution evidence is not able to throw any light on the complicity or otherwise of any one of the inmates of the house in this case. There is no evidence to point out that the appellant alone was responsible for causing death of the deceased. Under these circumstances, the High Court was not justified in reversing the acquittal of the appellant for the charge of murder punishable under Section 302 IPC. (Paras 5 to 7)

However, even as per the statement of the appellant and the prosecution evidence it is clinchingly proved that the appellant had actually participated in cremation of the dead body of the deceased, the appellant can certainly be attributed with the knowledge that the deceased died of multiple injuries as there were series of serious injuries on her body. Even if the appellant had not participated in the commission of murder, he was certainly aware that a criminal offence had been committed and instead of informing the police about the incident, he hastily made preparation for cremating the dead body of the deceased. The act committed by the appellant thus proves that the appellant committed the offence punishable under Section 201 IPC. Already a charge against the appellant was there and he faced trial and defended his case and hence no prejudice is caused to him. He is found guilty of offence punishable under Section 201 IPC. The words uttered just before killing the deceased and the manner in which he was killed immediately thereafter, leave no manner of doubt that all those four accused had gone there with a view to eliminate him. This aspect having not been considered by the High Court, the finding recorded by it with respect to these two respondents stands vitiated and this non-consideration has led to failure of justice. It is not a question of mere reappreciation of evidence but determining the guilt of the accused on the basis of the findings recorded by the High Court. (12) Reversal of acquittal justified/Acquittal not justified (contd.)

Trial court's view confirmed and acquittal recorded by High Court set aside — But in the circumstances sentence of death awarded by trial court altered to that of life imprisonment — Constitution of India — Art.134 — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302

Two situations could be visualised in the context of the suicide theory. First, that the deceased was contemplating suicide since long and on the night of the occurrence she effectuated her resolve. Second, that something happened on that night which so upset her that she yielded to an irrepressible impulse to snap her life. Having regard to the frame of mind of the deceased and other circumstances it is clear that neither of these situations was reasonably possible. Taking an overall view of the circumstances, it must be held that it is established beyond reasonable doubt that the death of the deceased was not accidental or suicidal but it was homicidal.

Having held so, the identity of the assassin is not difficult. The evidence is conclusive on the point that there was no other inmate in the flat except the deceased, her husband and her sister-in-law. If, therefore, the deceased died a homicidal death none but her husband could have been the assassin in this case. Insofar as he is concerned, the crime is established beyond reasonable doubt. Insofar as his sister is concerned, the possibility of her not having been a party to the crime proper but having associated with her brother after the crime was committed, cannot be excluded beyond reasonable doubt. Since the High Court has acquitted her, its finding of acquittal as regards her need not be interfered with.

But the finding of acquittal recorded by the High Court in favour of the accused-husband of the deceased is set aside and he is convicted under S. 302. As regards the sentence, taking into account the relevant circumstances a sentence of imprisonment for life, instead of death sentence awarded by the trial court, will meet the ends of justice. Subedar Tewari v. State of U.P., 1989 Supp (1) SCC 91: 1989 SCC (Cri) 218: AIR 1989 SC 733.

Appellant-accused alleged to have raped one V (PW 1), a pregnant woman, after felling her to the ground when she had gone to a "jungle"/"kokad" (meaning land covered with bushes) to collect cow dung along with PW 2 and PW 8. The trial court acquitted the appellant finding that: (i) It was not possible to commit rape in an open field with a "rasta" nearby; (ii) No blood or broken bangles were found at the place of occurrence; (iii) Medical evidence did not support the prosecution case; (iv) Absence of any stains of semen on the clothes of the prosecutrix or the appellant; (v) Testimony of PW 2 and PW 8 (eyewitnesses) not inspiring confidence; and (vi) It was a consensual sexual course.

The High Court by the impugned judgment reversed the findings of the trial court and held the appellant guilty, and sentenced him to undergo 10 years' rigorous imprisonment and to pay a fine of Rs 1000 with default stipulation. Hence, the present appeal by the appellant-accused.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

No interference is called for with the reasoning of the High Court. (Para 5)

The trial court was unduly influenced by the fact that the occurrence took place in an open field and there was a "rasta" nearby and hence it was not possible to commit rape at such a location. The finding of the trial court is not supported by any evidence on record because the consistent evidence of the prosecution witnesses is that the place where the occurrence took place was a forest or at least a place where bushes were growing and, therefore, the trial court was not justified in jumping to the conclusion that it was an open field where the offence was committed. (Para 6)

The prosecutrix has fully supported the case of the prosecution. The fact that there was no bleeding or no broken bangles were found at the place of occurrence has been unduly exaggerated by the trial court to disbelieve the witness. There is no good reason to disbelieve the prosecutrix when she has fully supported the case against the appellant. It is not suggested that she had any enmity with the appellant or there was any particular reason for her to involve the appellant in this offence. Some far-fetched disputes were sought to be highlighted, but there is nothing on record to suggest that the prosecutrix or her husband had any motive to falsely implicate the appellant. (Para 7)

Further, the trial court was also impressed by the fact that the medical evidence does not support the case of the prosecution. This is also a finding contrary to the record. Some simple injuries were caused to the prosecutrix when she was felled on the ground and raped. The abrasions found on her person certainly corroborate the case of the prosecution. The fact that abrasions may also be caused by self-infliction is no ground for holding that in this case they were so caused, when there is direct evidence to the effect that she was pushed on the ground and rape was committed. The fact that in his cross-examination the doctor admitted that such injuries may be self-inflicted, is no basis for holding that the injuries were in fact self-inflicted, in the absence of any evidence to prove that. This is particularly so when the case of the prosecution is clear and categorical that the appellant caught the prosecutrix by her neck and felled her on the ground and committed rape. Therefore, the medical evidence does support the case of the prosecution. The absence of any stains of semen on the clothes of the prosecutrix or the appellant is of no consequence in this case since the clothes of the appellant were seized and examined after four days of the occurrence. (Para 8)

The trial court has really not recorded any convincing reason for not accepting the testimonies of PW 2 and PW 8. Their evidence appears to be natural having a ring of truth. Much was sought to be made of minor discrepancies in the evidence of the two eyewitnesses, which have been described as glaring contradictions. Some variation in matters of detail is but natural, and much depends on the capacity of a witness to observe and remember events, particularly in matters of minor details. Moreover, the two witnesses came from two different directions, and they may have observed the incident at different stages, though in quick succession. However, such minor discrepancies do not warrant rejection of their evidence. Their deposition is natural and consistent with the case of the prosecution and there is no reason to disbelieve them. (Para 9)

Lastly, there was no justification for the trial court to have concluded that it was sexual intercourse by consent. This finding is based solely on conjectures and suspicion. The medical evidence discloses that the internal wall of the vagina of the prosecutrix was congested, having reddish colour. In his cross-examination, the doctor did state that this could be caused by sexual intercourse in ordinary course. From this, the trial court jumped to the conclusion that since the prosecutrix, who was pregnant did not abort and gave birth to a normal healthy child after three months, this was a case in which it must be held that the prosecutrix was a consenting party. Such reasoning of the trial court is perverse. (Para 10)

(12) Reversal of acquittal justified/Acquittal not justified (contd.)

The findings of the trial court are not such as could possibly be reached on the basis of the evidence on record, much less can they be said to be a possible reasonable view of the evidence on record. The High Court was, therefore, fully justified in setting aside the judgment and order of the trial court. The circumstance that the accused voluntarily accepted the risk of being identified in a parade but was denied that opportunity was an important point in his favour. It is correct to say that no rule of law requires that the oral testimony of a witness should be corroborated by evidence of identification. In fact, evidence of identification is itself a weak type of evidence. But the point of the matter is that the Court which acquitted the appellant was justifiably influenced by the consideration that though at the earliest stage he had asked that an identification parade be held, the demand was opposed by the prosecution and the parade was therefore not held.

Moreover there is serious infirmity in the testimony of the eyewitnesses who deposed against the appellant. The testimony of the person who filed the FIR was also not impressive. In such circumstances the reversal of acquittal by the High Court was not justified. Shri Ram v. State of U.P., (1975) 3 SCC 495: 1975 SCC (Cri) 87: AIR 1975 SC 175: 1975 Cri LJ 240: 1976 MLJ (Cri) 78.

[5473] — Ss. 378(1) and (3) — Appeal against acquittal — Reversal of acquittal — Proper approach, restated

The High Court before reaching its conclusion upon facts in exercise of its power under Sections 378(1) and (3) CrPC, should always give proper weight and consideration to such matters as: (1) the view of the trial Judge as to the credibility of the witnesses; (2) the presumption of innocence in favour of the accused, a presumption certainly not weakened by the fact that they have been acquitted at trial; (3) the right of the accused to the benefit of any doubt. (Para 11)

The High Court in the present case did not discuss and reappreciate the evidence of PW 1 (mother of the deceased) who is stated to be the only eyewitness to the incident but merely observed that the evidence of PW 1 is very natural and credible. Surely, this is not reappraisal or reappreciation of the evidence of PW 1. The High Court did not even notice the nature of injuries on the body of the deceased. No discussion was made about: (1) the medical evidence, (2) as to how all the accused could be convicted with the aid of Section 34 IPC, (3) the conclusion that the accused would be guilty of offence under Section 304 Part II and not for the offence under Section 302 read with Section 34 IPC, (4) the setting aside of the trial court finding that presence of PW 1 at the scene of offence was highly doubtful, and (5) any recoveries in the impugned judgment. (Paras 12 and 9)

The trial court discarded the evidence of PW 1 not only because she was an interested witness. The trial court after an elaborate consideration of the matter refused to place any reliance on the evidence of PW 1. The impugned order of the High Court is therefore, set aside and remitted back to High Court for fresh consideration on merits and disposal in accordance with law. It is made clear that no opinion has been expressed on the merits of the case. (Paras 8 and 14). Sangappa v. State of Karnataka, (2010) 3 SCC 686.

(13) Interference by Supreme Court (contd.)

Miscarriage of justice may arise from the acquittal of the guilty no less than from conviction of the innocent Although ordinarily Supreme Court should not interfere with judgments of acquittal on a mere appreciation of evidence, but if there are glaring infirmities in the judgment of the High Court resulting in a gross miscarriage of justice, it is the duty of the Supreme Court to interfere. On a consideration of the entire mass of evidence adduced in the present case it is clear that the prosecution had established beyond reasonable doubt that the respondent had committed the murder of the deceased. State of U.P. v. Pussu, (1983) 3 SCC 502: 1983 SCC (Cri) 713: AIR 1983 SC 867: 1983 Cri LJ 1356.

It is trite that while dealing with an appeal against an acquittal recorded by the High Court the Supreme Court does not ordinarily interfere with it but if it is found that relevant and reliable evidence on record has been lost sight of, ignored or brushed aside for reasons which are wholly unsustainable the Supreme Court will not only be justified — but it will be its duty — to interfere with the acquittal to make amends for the failure of justice. The fact that the judgments of the courts below were rendered concurrently cannot dissuade the Supreme Court from interfering in a case like this where such findings and conviction have been recorded on mere conjectures and erratic evaluation of the evidence on record. Consistency for the mere sake of it is no virtue. It is an obligation of judicial conscience to correct errors, where the same are manifest. If the trial court's answer to the question as to whether the appellants had caused the death of the person in question by beating him with axes on his neck, forearm and head and then by stabbing indiscriminately with knives, is found to be based on a reasonable view of the evidence, the impugned judgment of the High Court has got to be set aside, for law is now well settled that if two reasonable conclusions can be reached on the basis of the evidence, the appellate court should not disturb the order of acquittal. If, however, it is found that the finding of acquittal is manifestly wrong leading to miscarriage of justice — as has been found by the High Court — the convictions of the appellants have got to be upheld.

In view the evidence of the four eyewitnesses, the FIR and the medical evidence which fully corroborates the ocular version, it has to be held that the prosecution has been able to prove its case beyond all reasonable doubts. The well-settled rule of practice in a case of an appeal against an acquittal is that the appellate court should not interfere with the acquittal merely because it can take one of the two reasonably possible views which favours conviction. But, if the view of the trial court is not reasonably sustainable, on the evidence on record, the appellate court will interfere with an acquittal. If the appellate court sets aside an acquittal and convicts, the Supreme Court has to be satisfied, after examining the prosecution and defence cases and the crucial points emerging for decision from the facts of the case, that the view taken by the trial court, on evidence on record, is at least as acceptable as the one taken by the High Court before it can interfere with the High Court's judgment. Ram Kumar Pandey v. State of M.P., (1975) 3 SCC 815: 1975 SCC (Cri) 225: AIR 1975 SC 1026: (1975) 3 SCR 519: 1975 Cri LJ 870.

[5495] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Supreme Court's interference with acquittal recorded by High Court when called for — Constitution of India — Art. 136

Ordinarily Supreme Court does not interfere with the acquittal recorded by High Court but when incriminating evidence of a satisfactory character is brushed aside mainly by relying upon a few circumstances which do not go to detract from the value of such incriminating evidence it becomes the duty of Supreme Court to interfere with the acquittal in order to redeem the course of justice.

In the present case the High Court reversed the trial court's conviction and death sentence recorded on proper appreciation of evidence and acquitted the accused. In doing so the Court adopted a hyper-technical approach to the entire prosecution case, disbelieved the direct ocular evidence furnished by the injured witnesses whose presence at the scene of occurrence could not be doubted and relied upon some of the circumstances which were of inferential nature while some others were innocuous or immaterial and in any case none was of such a nature as would detract from the probative value of strong and consistent ocular evidence of the injured witnesses. In such a situation Supreme Court's interference under Art. 136 with the High Court's order of acquittal is called for.

The trial court had correctly appreciated evidence and its approach was preferable to that of the High Court in this case. Therefore, acquittal of the accused-respondent must be set aside and convictions and sentences imposed by the trial court under Ss. 436/149, 302 read with 149 and 307/149 IPC on all counts are restored. State of U.P. v. Gokaran, 1984 Supp SCC 482: 1985 SCC (Cri) 41: AIR 1985 SC 131.

[5496] — Ss. 378 and 386 — When Supreme Court's interference with High Court's order of acquittal called for — Constitution of India — Art. 136

Though there is need for exercising care and restraint in the exercise of the Court's powers under Art. 136 in the matter of setting aside a judgment of acquittal but where the ends of justice require the exercise of such powers, the Court will be failing in its duty if it does not do so. The present case is eminently one such where the interests of justice call for the Court's intervention. In this case the entire premises on which the High Court had based its judgment for setting aside the well reasoned judgment of the Sessions Judge are totally in disregard of the clinching evidence in the case. The conclusions of the High Court have been drawn on assumptions and surmises without any foundation in evidence for them. The prosecution evidence, is of an unimpeachable nature and affords no scope for two views being taken, and one of them being more plausible than the other. As an abstract proposition of argument it may be stated that every case affords potential for two views being taken but it has to be realised that the alternate view must have some content of plausibility in it and without the same, the said view cannot be countenanced in law as a plausible alternative. State of U.P. v. Chet Ram, (1989) 2 SCC 425: 1989 SCC (Cri) 388: AIR 1989 SC 1543: 1989 Cri LJ 1785.

(13) Interference by Supreme Court (contd.)

The occurrence in the present case took place about 22 years before and the trial commenced about 7 years after the occurrence. The main victim, who was the material witness, died much earlier to commencement of the investigation. The case was, therefore, based on circumstances and mainly on the evidence of the victim's wife and his daughter. There was no Test identification parade for these two witnesses to identify the accused who had said to have gone to the victim's house. The main accused also died during pendency of the trial and as such the charges against him abated. The SLP filed against acquittal of another accused had been dismissed by the Supreme Court. The present appeals are against the acquittal of the remaining accused persons by the High Court setting aside the conviction recorded by the trial court. Dismissing the appeals:

Held :

From the evidence on record it appears that the prosecution has failed to establish the case against the accused. No finding can be rendered either on mere surmise or conjecture and every finding should be based on satisfactory and acceptable evidence. Bearing in mind this principle as well as the principle regarding power of the Supreme Court under Art. 136 to interfere with the order of acquittal as laid down in several of its decisions, it must be held that the impugned order of acquittal passed by the High Court is neither erroneous nor perverse nor improper and unreasonable resulting in miscarriage of justice and this is not a fit case for interference in exercise of the powers under Art. 136. Non-consideration of few pieces of non-material evidence by High Court would not compel the Supreme Court to interfere under Art. 136. State of U.P. v. Pheru Singh, 1989 Supp (1) SCC 288: 1989 SCC (Cri) 420: AIR 1989 SC 1205: 1989 Cri LJ 1135.

[5500] — Ss. 378 and 386 — Appeal against acquittal — Appellate court can review the evidence and interfere for compelling reasons such as where admissible evidence has been unreasonably and unjustifiably ignored — Primary concern of the court is to prevent miscarriage of justice — If two views are possible, the one favourable to the accused, held, should be preferred — Constitution of India — Art. 136

There is no embargo on the appellate court reviewing the evidence upon which an order of acquittal is based. Generally, the order of acquittal shall not be interfered with because the presumption of innocence of the accused is further strengthened by acquittal. The golden thread which runs through the web of administration of justice in criminal cases is that if two views are possible on the evidence adduced in the case, one pointing to the guilt of the accused and the other to his innocence, the view which is favourable to the accused should be adopted. The paramount consideration of the Court is to ensure that miscarriage of justice is prevented. A miscarriage of justice which may arise from acquittal of the guilty is no less than from the conviction of an innocent. In a case where admissible evidence is ignored, a duty is cast upon the appellate court to reappreciate the evidence where the accused has been acquitted, for the purpose of ascertaining as to whether any of the accused really committed any offence or not. The principle to be followed by the appellate court considering the appeal against the judgment of acquittal is to interfere only when there are compelling and substantial reasons for doing so. If the impugned judgment is clearly unreasonable and relevant and convincing materials have been unjustifiably eliminated in the process, it is a compelling reason for interference. Ordinarily the Supreme Court does not interfere with an order of acquittal recorded by the High Court; but if the High Court arrives at its findings overlooking important facts and relying upon few circumstances which do not in any way impair the probative value of the evidence adduced during trial, the Supreme Court would be failing in its duty to do complete justice if it does not interfere with such order of acquittal. Satbir v. Surat Singh, (1997) 4 SCC 192: 1997 SCC (Cri) 538: AIR 1997 SC 1160.

Held:

The evidence of the two children who claimed to be the eyewitnesses does not inspire confidence. The judgment of the High Court is sketchy and slipshod. There was no critical evaluation of the evidence of the two child witnesses and there was no consideration of material aspects bearing on the veracity of the version given by the two child witnesses. The scope of interference under Article 136 in appeals against acquittal is rather limited. It is the settled legal position which has been crystallised in a number of judgments that if the view taken by the High Court is plausible or possible, then it would not be proper to interfere with an order of acquittal. The following are some of the circumstances where interference with the judgment of the High Court may be justified, but these are illustrative and not exhaustive: (i) the High Court's decision is based on totally erroneous view of law by ignoring the settled legal position; (ii) the High Court's conclusions are contrary to evidence and documents on record; (iii) the entire approach of the High Court in dealing with the evidence was patently illegal leading to grave miscarriage of justice; (iv) the High Court's judgment is manifestly unjust and unreasonable based on erroneous law and facts on the record of the case. Proper weight and consideration to the findings of the High Court must be given and extreme reluctance must be shown in interfering with a case when both the Sessions Court and the High Court have recorded an order of acquittal. [5525] — S. 379 — Appeal against reversal of acquittal by High Court — Conviction upheld — FIR immediately lodged — Strong motive to commit murder, established — Nothing to prove false implication — High Court properly appreciating evidence without any manifest error — Simply because there are some minor discrepancies in the evidence of witnesses A*, RP and *SA with regard to time of incident, held, are not sufficient grounds to believe that appellant had been booked in a false case — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302

The appellant-accused was in love with the deceased, SU. In spite of appellant-accused's warning, SA (PW 8) married SU. After the marriage, SA and SU had gone to the house of N (mother of SU). On 28-3-1988, when after an evening walk, SA, SU, N, A (PW 4, niece of SU) and RP (PW 16, son of maternal uncle of SU) were returning to the house of N, the appellant-accused armed with a gun and knife, fired a shot in the back of SA, who, as a result of bleeding injury, uttered "are bapre" and then lay down on the roadside. SU and N both tried to extend help to injured SA, but the appellant came near them, pulled SU's hair and stabbed her on the vital parts of her head, neck and back. SU collapsed on receipt of severe injuries. N tried to save her daughter SU, but the appellant struck knife-blows to N also. The appellant, on seeing the gathering of people, ran away leaving all the three injured persons on the spot.

P (PW 1, complainant), a private medical practitioner, who lived nearby the place of occurrence, on hearing shouting of the people, went to the spot. He spotted SU lying with bleeding injuries on the roadside. He also spotted N and SA lying in injured condition at a little distance away from SU. P lifted SA, SU and N into a rickshaw and took them to government hospital, where they were admitted by LX (PW 10, Medical Officer). SU could not survive and succumbed to the injuries in the evening around 7.15 p.m. LX sent a memo to police station regarding admission of the injured persons. P at about 7.30 p.m. lodged a written complaint (Ext. 28) in the police station on the basis of which an FIR was registered by the IO (PW 18) under Sections 302 and 307 IPC.

The Sessions Court, after trial, acquitted the appellant-accused. The Sessions Court disbelieved the uncorroborated witness of interested injured relatives. The Sessions Court also based its acquittal on the facts that important witnesses turned hostile and recovery of weapons was not supported by panch witnesses. The High Court by the impugned order in appeal, convicted the appellant-accused under Section 302 IPC for murder of SU. The High Court by the impugned order, partly reversed the order of acquittal and convicted the appellant-accused under Section 302 IPC and sentenced him to imprisonment of life and fine and acquitted the appellant-accused for offences under Sections 307 and 324 IPC and Sections 25 and 27 of the Arms Act by giving benefit of doubt as the gunshot injuries on SA were not established.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

In an appeal against acquittal, it is for the appellate court to keep in view the relevant principles of law, to reappreciate and reweigh the evidence as a whole and to come to its own conclusion on such evidence in consonance with the principles of criminal jurisprudence. In the light of the evidence discussed and tested in the light of the principles of law highlighted, it must be held that the interference by the High Court with the order of acquittal passed by the Sessions Court, was wholly justified and warranted. The appellant was not framed on suspicion. Immediately after the occurrence, an FIR was lodged at the police station against the appellant who was identified by SA (an injured eyewitness). Further the appellant had strong motive to commit the murder of SU with malice towards SA, her husband, as well as her deceased mother N. Simply because there are some minor discrepancies in the evidence of witnesses A, RP and SA with regard to time of incident and preparation of memo by IO, which are of no consequence to the true genesis of the case and that some evidence had not been adduced by the prosecution, though might have been available, would not be sufficient grounds to believe that the appellant has been booked in a false case. There is nothing on record brought by the appellant to show that it was quite possible that the witnesses would spare the real culprit and implicate him in a false case. All the contentions, raised for the appellant, do not merit acceptance. The evaluation of the findings recorded by the High Court do not suffer from any manifest error and improper and misappreciation of evidence on record. The appellant is the real culprit and he has been rightly held guilty of the offence punishable under Section 302 IPC. (Paras 25, 77 and 76). Mahesh v. State of Maharashtra, (2008) 13 SCC 271: (2008) 67 AIC 219 (SC): 2008 Cri LJ 3602.

Per Kailasam and Koshal, JJ.:

The Rule does not offend Art. 21. Procedure established by law means the ordinary well-established Criminal Procedure, that is those settled usages and normal modes of procedure sanctioned by the Criminal Procedure Code which are the general law of criminal procedure in our country. The impugned procedure being the procedure prescribed under the Criminal Procedure Code cannot be assailed. Nor can it be said that the procedure prescribed by the Criminal Procedure Code is no procedure at all.

In fact Art. 21 cannot be invoked since a person convicted of an offence has no right of appeal unless such a right is conferred by the statute. Sita Ram v. State of U.P., (1979) 2 SCC 656: 1979 SCC (Cri) 576: AIR 1979 SC 745: 1979 Cri LJ 659.

The power of a summary rejection of a criminal first appeal, even though it is exercisable under the provisions of S. 421, Criminal Procedure Code, should be only exercised when the court is satisfied, from a perusal of the judgment as well as the record, that there is absolutely no reasonable possibility of its success for the reasons mentioned in the order. The appellate court's power under S. 384, CrPC to dismiss an appeal in limine must be exercised sparingly and with great circumspection. Serious matters, such as a conviction for murder and a sentence of life imprisonment warrants 'admission' of the appeal and fair and independent consideration of the evidence by the High Court. Summary rejection of the appeal involving such matters with the laconic expression 'dismissed' is a drastic step amounting to denial of the right of appeal. The order of the appellate court should be a speaking order recording reasons for summary dismissal, however, concise. There must be some indication that the court addressed itself to the question at issue and had the record before it. In absence of such an indication in the present case, the High Court's one word order of dismissal must be set aside under Art. 136 and it must be directed to admit the appeal and dispose it of in accordance with law. Shivaji Narayan Bachhav v. State of Maharashtra, (1983) 4 SCC 129: 1983 SCC (Cri) 786: AIR 1983 SC 1014: 1983 Cri LJ 1497.

[5548] — S. 384 — Summary dismissal of criminal appeal — When permissible — Illustrative cases discussed

Though a full-dressed hearing of an appeal is an integral part of fundamental fairness or procedure in a criminal matter, a few illustrative cases to which ex parte summary procedure will still apply in criminal appeals are where the only ground urged is a point of law which has been squarely covered by a ruling of the Supreme Court, for to keep the appeal lingering longer is survival after death. Where the accused has pleaded guilty of murder and the High Court, on the evidence, is satisfied with the pleas and has awarded the lesser penalty, a mere appeal ex misericordia is an exercise in futility. Where a minor procedural irregularity, clearly curable under CrPC, is all that the appellant has to urge, the full panoply of an appellate hearing is an act of supererogation. Where the grounds, taken at their face value, are frivolous, vexatious, malicious, wholly dilatory or blatantly mendacious, the prolongation of an appeal is a premium on abuse of the process of court. However the preceding list is not exhaustive. (Para 19). Bolin Chetia v. Jogadish Bhuyan, (2005) 6 SCC 81: AIR 2005 SC 1872.

[5551] — Ss. 384, 374, 382 and 383 — Summary dismissal of appeal against conviction for non-appearance of the appellant or his counsel — Held, illegal — Appellate court must examine the petition of appeal and the judgment under challenge and consider the case on merits — If the appellant has been sentenced to imprisonment and is not in custody the appellate court can require him to surrender and on his failure to obey the direction can dismiss the appeal without consideration of the merits — Position of a criminal appeal is not the same as in a civil appeal governed by the CPC — CPC, 1908, Or. 41 Rr. 11, 17 and 19

The duty of the appellate court to examine the petition of appeal and the judgment under challenge and to consider the merits of the case before dismissing the appeal summarily is not dependent on the appellant or his counsel appearing before the Court to press the appeal. As soon as a petition of appeal is presented under Section 382 or 383 it becomes the duty of the appellate court to consider the same on merits, even in the absence of the appellant and his counsel before dismissing the same summarily. In a case where the appellant has been sentenced to imprisonment and he is not in custody when the appeal is taken up for preliminary hearing, the appellate court can require him to surrender, and if the appellant fails to obey the direction, other considerations may arise, which may render the appeal liable to be dismissed without consideration of the merits. In the present case the High Court should have either examined the appellant's petition of appeal and the judgment under challenge itself or appointed a counsel to assist the Court, but could not have proceeded to dismiss the same on the ground that the advocate for the appellant was not present. The position of a criminal appeal is not the same as in a civil appeal governed by the Civil Procedure Code. A comparison of the provisions of Section 384 with those of Order 41, Rules 11 and 17 of the Civil Procedure Code clearly brings out the difference. Rule 17, Order 41 of the Civil Procedure Code in express terms provides that an appeal may be dismissed on the ground of absence of the appellant when the appeal is called out, and Rule 19 provides for its restoration on the appellant offering sufficient cause for his non-appearance. In the case of a criminal appeal the corresponding provisions are not to be found in the Code of Criminal Procedure. On the other hand the Code in express terms requires the matter to be considered on merits. Thus a criminal appeal cannot be dismissed for non-prosecution, and this is the reason as to why the Criminal Procedure does not contain any special provision like Order 41, Rule 19. Kishan Singh v. State of U.P., (1996) 9 SCC 372.

Dismissing the appeal,

Held :

The complainant did not examine herself as a witness. She was sought to be summoned again for cross-examination. The said prayer had not yet been allowed. But, that would not mean that on that ground the court would exercise its discretionary jurisdiction under Section 256 CrPC at that stage or the defence would not examine his witnesses. When the prosecution has closed its case and the accused has been examined under Section 311 CrPC, the court was required to pass a judgment on merit of the matter. (Paras 14 and 15)

Before passing the impugned order of acquittal, the High Court did not choose to serve notice upon the appellant opining that no useful purpose would be served in keeping the appeal pending and appointed a legal aid counsel. Although, the manner in which the appeal had been disposed of by the High Court was not approved, it is not a fit case for exercise of jurisdiction under Article 136 of the Constitution of India. It is no doubt true that it is open to the court to dispose of an appeal on merits even in the absence of the counsel appearing for the parties when the case is set down for hearing and the advocate or the party concerned does not appear. However, when the counsel could not appear before the court not on account of the fault either of the appellant or the advocates themselves, but on account of mistake committed by the Registry of the High Court in not showing the names of the counsel in the cause list properly and the counsel not being aware of the listing of the case before the court in such a matter the principle cannot be extended.

In the present case the case was set down for hearing on different dates without notifying the names of the advocates appearing for the appellant, but showing the name of the advocate who had retired from the case. Therefore, it could not be stated that the appellant or his advocate had notice of hearing of the case on the dates set down for hearing. Hence the decision in the case without hearing the appellants or their advocate has resulted in miscarriage of justice and the principle stated in the decision in Bani Singh case would not apply. *G. At the time of hearing of the appeal, the appellants were already enlarged on bail. Only after the judgment was delivered by the High Court, was the bail cancelled and they were directed to surrender before the appropriate authority. Having examined the provisions under Sections 385 and 386 of the Code and applying the principles laid down by the Supreme Court in Bani Singh case, (1996) 4 SCC 720 would clearly show that when the accused does not appear, it is the bounden duty of the High Court to look into the records and the other materials on record, including the judgment of the trial court and thereafter, decide the appeal on merits which would be due compliance with Sections 385 and 386 of the Code in disposing of criminal appeals. While dealing with the procedure for disposing of a criminal appeal, the Supreme Court in Bani Singh case has clearly laid down that the dismissal of an appeal for default or non-prosecution without going into the merits of the case is clearly illegal and that the appellate court must dispose of the appeal on merits after perusal and scrutiny of record and after giving a hearing to the parties, if present, before disposal of the appeal on merits. Further held that the appellate court must dispose of the appeal after perusal of the record and judgment of the trial court even if the appellant or his counsel was not present at the time of hearing of the appeal. The only exception, as we find from the aforesaid decision of the Supreme Court, is that if the appellant is in jail and his counsel is not present, the court should adjourn the case to facilitate the appearance of the appellant. (Paras 10, 12 and 13)

There is yet another exception to this rule, namely, that in an appropriate case, the court can appoint a lawyer at the State's expense to assist the court. Therefore, the High Court was justified in taking the assistance of the Assistant Government Advocate and after taking such assistance and considering the entire evidence on record, the High Court passed the judgment holding that the appellants were guilty of the offence, not under Sections 302/34 IPC but under Section 304 Part II IPC and directed them to undergo 7 years' rigorous imprisonment. In doing so, the High Court affirmed the findings of the trial court but differed on the point of the offence committed by the appellants and the corresponding punishment to be awarded to them. (Para 14)

It is abundantly clear that the High Court had arrived at a well-merited judgment after a careful consideration of the materials on record. The position, of course, would have been different if the High Court had simply dismissed the appeal without going into the merits. However, nothing of this sort has been done in the present case. The judgment of the High Court clearly shows that evidence before the trial court has been carefully deliberated upon and weighed and it is only then that the conclusions have been arrived at. That being the position, it cannot be said that the High Court had ignored the basic principles of criminal justice while disposing of the appeal ex parte. There has been substantial compliance with the guidelines made in Bani Singh case. Under S. 385 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, it was obligatory for the High Court to fix a date for the hearing of the appeal and then send for the records of the Court of Session and hear the parties on merits. There was no warrant for the procedure adopted by the learned Judges in disposing of the appeal in this cavalier manner. It does no credit to any branch of administration of justice that an appeal against conviction should be allowed without the appellate court having the records before it and without perusing the evidence adduced by the prosecution. To say the least, there has been a flagrant miscarriage of justice. It may be as the High Court records in its order, that the Public Prosecutor conceded that there was no evidence but then the High Court had to satisfy itself upon perusal of the records that there was no reliable and credible evidence to warrant the conviction of the accused. The High Court is directed to admit the appeal and dispose it of on merits after issue of notice afresh. Biswanath Ghosh v. State of W.B., (1987) 2 SCC 55: 1987 SCC (Cri) 259: AIR 1987 SC 1155: 1987 Cri LJ 1052.

Once the appellate court, on an examination of the grounds of appeal and the impugned judgment, decides to admit the appeal for hearing, it must send for the record and then decide the appeal finally, unless the appeal is restricted to the extent and legality of the sentence. Obviously, the requirement to send for the record is provided for to enable the appellate court to peruse the record before finally deciding the appeal. It is not an idle formality but casts an obligation on the court to decide the appeal only after it has perused the record. This is not to say that it cannot be waived even where the parties consent to its waiver. This becomes clear from the opening words of Section 386 which say that "after perusing such record" the court may dispose of the appeal. However, this section imposes a further requirement of hearing the appellant or his pleader, if he appears, and the public prosecutor, if he appears. This is an extension of the requirement of Section 385(1) which requires the court to cause notice to issue as to the time and place of hearing of the appeal. Once such a notice is issued the accused or his pleader, if he appears, must be heard. Bani Singh v. State of U.P., (1996) 4 SCC 720: 1996 SCC (Cri) 848: AIR 1996 SC 2439.

A question of seminal importance arose in these appeals as to whether in exercise of power under Section 386 CrPC, the appellate court would be justified in directing acquittal, where the records of the trial court are not placed before it on some ground or the other.

The accused-respondents in the instant case were found guilty of the offence punishable under Section 302 IPC by the trial court. Two criminal appeals against the judgment of the trial court were preferred before the High Court by the accused persons. After admission of the appeal, Registry of the High Court sent for the records from the trial court. By letter dated 27-6-1984 the Office-in-charge (Record Room), Judges Court, Bareilly informed the High Court that the records of the case were not available as the same got destroyed in the fire that broke out in the night between 18-11-1979/19-11-1979. By order dated 1-11-1993 i.e. more than nine years after the letter was received from the lower court, three months' time was allowed for reconstruction of the record at the Sessions Judge level. The High Court while disposing of Criminal Appeal No. 1970 of 1979 on 25-2-1994 noted that no communication had been received about the reconstruction of the record and, therefore, it inferred that it was not possible for the Sessions Judge to reconstruct the record. Thus in this background, the High Court held that the mandate of law contained in Sections 385 and 386 of the Code could not be complied with and, therefore, directed acquittal of the accused persons. The appellant State challenged the said judgment of the High Court by filing the instant appeals.

Setting aside the order of the High Court and remitting the matter back for fresh consideration,

Held :

While dealing with an appeal against conviction, the appellate court is empowered by Section 386 to reverse the finding and sentence and acquit. The appellate court is also empowered to discharge the accused. The third category which seems to be applicable to the present case is where the appellate court can order the accused to be retried by a court of competent jurisdiction subordinate to the appellate court or committed for trial. (Para 6)

For exercise of the powers in cases of first two categories, obviously a finding on merits after consideration of the materials on record is imperative. Where that is not possible because of circumstances like the case at hand i.e. destruction of the records, the proper course for the appellate court would be to direct retrial after reconstruction of the records if in spite of positive and constructive efforts to reconstruct the records the same was impossible. If on the other hand, from the copies available with the prosecuting agency or the defence and/or their respective counsel, reconstruction is possible, the said course should be adopted and the appeal can be disposed of as it deserved under course indicated in clause (b) of Section 386. (Para 6)

The High Court did not keep the relevant aspects and considerations in view and came to the abrupt conclusion that reconstruction was not possible merely because there was no response from the Sessions Judge. It is not clear as to why the High Court did not require the Sessions Court to furnish the information about reconstruction of records; and/or itself take initiative by issuing positive directions as to the manner, method and nature of attempts, efforts and exercise to be undertaken to effectively achieve the purpose in the best interests of justice and to avoid ultimately any miscarriage of justice resulting from any lapse, inaction or inappropriate or perfunctory action, in this regard; particularly when no action was taken by the High Court to pass necessary orders for about a decade when it received information about destruction of record. The course adopted by the High Court, if approved, would encourage dubious persons and detractors of justice by allowing undeserved premium to violators of law by acting hand in glove with those anti-social elements coming to hold sway, behind the screen, in the ordinary and normal course of justice. (Para 9)

Hence, the order of the High Court is set aside and the matter is remitted back for fresh consideration. The High Court shall direct reconstruction of the records within a period of six months from the date of receipt of this judgment from all available or possible sources with the assistance of the prosecuting agency as well as the defending parties and their respective counsel. If it is possible to have the records reconstructed to enable the High Court itself to hear and dispose of the appeals in the manner envisaged under Section 386 of the Code, rehear the appeals and dispose of the same, on their own merits and in accordance with law. If it finds that reconstruction is not practicable but by ordering retrial interest of justice could be better served — adopt that course and direct retrial — and from that stage law shall take its normal course. If only reconstruction is not possible to facilitate the High Court to hear and dispose of the appeals and the further course of retrial and fresh adjudication by the Sessions Court is also rendered impossible due to loss of vitally important basic records — in that case and situation only, the direction given in the impugned judgment shall operate and the matter shall stand closed. [5565] — Ss. 386, 401 and 247 — Distinction between appeal and revision — Appellate court competent to review the evidence but powers of revisional court are confined to legality and propriety of the findings — Acquittal of accused by trial court on ground of non-appearance of the complainant — Appellate court, held, competent to reach a fresh decision as to whether in the situation the trial court was justified in acquitting the accused Appellate jurisdiction is coextensive with original court's jurisdiction as for appraisal and appreciation of evidence and reaching findings on facts and the appellate court is free to reach its own conclusion on evidence untrammelled by any finding entered by the trial court. Revisional powers on the other hand belong to supervisory jurisdiction of a superior court. While exercising revisional powers the court has to confine itself to the legality and propriety of the findings and also whether the subordinate court has kept itself within the bounds of its jurisdiction including the question whether the court has failed to exercise the jurisdiction vested in it. Though the difference between the two jurisdictions is subtle, it is quite real and has now become well recognised in legal provinces.

When a trial court had acquitted an accused due to non-appearance of the complainant the appellate court has the same powers as the trial court to reach a fresh decision as to whether in the particular situation the Magistrate should have acquitted the accused. What the trial court did not then ascertain and consider could, perhaps, be known to the appellate court and a decision different from the trial court can be taken by the appellate court, whether the order of acquittal should have been passed in the particular situation. *Associated Cement Co. It is well settled that creature of any statute cannot consider the vires of a particular provision in that statute or any other statute as well. While exercising appellate or revisional jurisdiction under the Code it is impermissible for any court to decide on the vires of the provision. That is precisely what the Sessions Judge and the High Court have done in the present case. The vires of a provision can only be questioned in a writ proceeding before the Constitutional Court. It is a well-settled principle in law that though the first appellate court like the High Court in this case sits as a court of appeal on facts also while considering an appeal from the judgment of the trial court and in that process it can reappreciate the evidence on record to arrive at a just conclusion, the Supreme Court in more than one case has held that while so reappreciating the evidence, the appellate court should first analyse the findings of the trial court and then for valid reasons to be recorded the appellate court can reverse such finding of the trial court. The said decisions also hold that the appellate court while sitting as a court of appeal should not substitute the finding of the trial court merely because another view is possible to be taken on the same sets of facts. The High Court has full power to reappreciate the evidence and come to a conclusion independently but the High Court should be very slow in reversing the decision of the trial court because the trial court has the occasion to watch the demeanour of the witnesses very closely. The conclusion which is arrived at by the High Court should be rational and proper appreciation of the testimony of the witnesses. In the present case, the High Court has not examined the statement of the witnesses and just on a bald statement that when the prosecution version has been accepted in full and the witnesses have tendency to overimplicate, then what is the guarantee that other part is also true, the High Court disbelieved the entire prosecution evidence. This approach of the High Court, is not correct. There should be proper appreciation of evidence and finding has to be recorded against each witness as to why the said witness is not being believed when he was believed by the trial court. Merely because a different view of the evidence is possible a finding against guilt cannot be cancelled. But the appellate Court is untrammelled in its power to re-evaluate the evidence bearing in mind the seriousness of overthrowing an acquittal once recorded. There is no error of law in the High Court reconsidering the probative value of the oral and circumstantial evidence in the case. Nor the appellate Court has failed to observe the built-in restraints on exercise of power while upsetting an acquittal. On the other hand, the Court has made the correct approach that only those accused against whom there was additional probative reinforcement could be convicted. Khem Karan v. State of U.P., (1974) 4 SCC 603: 1974 SCC (Cri) 639: AIR 1974 SC 1567: (1974) 3 SCR 863: 1974 Cri LJ 1033: (1974) 2 ACC 307.

There is no embargo on the appellate court reviewing the evidence upon which an order of acquittal is based. Generally, the order of acquittal shall not be interfered with because the presumption of innocence of the accused is further strengthened by acquittal. The golden thread which runs through the web of administration of justice in criminal cases is that if two views are possible on the evidence adduced in the case, one pointing to the guilt of the accused and the other to his innocence, the view which is favourable to the accused should be adopted. The paramount consideration of the court is to ensure that miscarriage of justice is prevented. A miscarriage of justice which may arise from acquittal of the guilty is no less than from the conviction of an innocent. In a case where admissible evidence is ignored, a duty is cast upon the appellate court to reappreciate the evidence where the accused has been acquitted, for the purpose of ascertaining as to whether any of the accused really committed any offence or not. The principle to be followed by the appellate court considering the appeal against the judgment of acquittal is to interfere only when there are compelling and substantial reasons for doing so. If the impugned judgment is clearly unreasonable and relevant and convincing materials have been unjustifiably eliminated in the process, it is a compelling reason for interference. The appellant-accused along with others attacked a couple (PWs 1 and 3) and their coolie (PW 2) with stones and wooden sticks. The complainant also threatened to kill the husband (PW 1, complainant). The prosecution examined two doctors (PWs 4 and 5). The Magistrate acquitted all the accused along with the appellant-accused by finding discrepancies in medical and ocular evidence and contradictions in the deposition of witnesses. The High Court allowed the appeal under Section 378 CrPC by relying on medical certificate, past hostility (due to long standing civil dispute), and by observing that the inconsistencies and contradictions were minor and that it was a case of extenuating circumstance and not a case where benefit of doubt could have been given. By the impugned order the High Court upheld the acquittal for offences under Sections 341, 326, 504 and 506 read with Section 34 IPC and set aside the acquittal and recorded conviction for offences under Sections 324 and 325 read with Section 34 IPC without assigning any reason.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

In a brief order, the High Court partly allowed the appeal, but there was no reasoning or basis as to what weighed with the High Court in confirming the order of acquittal recorded in favour of the appellant-accused for offences (under Sections 341, 326, 504 and 506 read with Section 34 IPC) and for setting aside the order of acquittal and ordering conviction of the accused for the offences punishable under Sections 324 and 325 read with Section 34 IPC. The High Court was exercising appellate power as the first appellate court. It was, therefore, expected of the High Court to consider the evidence of the prosecution witnesses, particularly because the three eyewitnesses (PWs 1 to 3) were also injured witnesses. The High Court failed to discharge its duty of exercising appellate power as a regular court of appeal. The order passed by the High Court, therefore, deserves to be set aside by remitting the matter for fresh disposal in accordance with law. [5590] — Ss. 386 and 378 — Appeal against acquittal — Interference by High Court — Scope and power — Generally, order of acquittal not to be interfered with because presumption of innocence of accused further strengthened by acquittal — But, held, appellate court can review the evidence and interfere for compelling reasons such as where admissible evidence has been unreasonably and unjustifiably ignored — Primary concern of the court is to prevent miscarriage of justice — If two views are possible, one which is favourable to the accused should be adopted — On facts held, where the judgment of the trial court was practically unreasoned without any attempt to critically and objectively analyse the evidence, High Court was justified in reappreciating the evidence and reversing the acquittal — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 302 r/w S. 34 — Arms Act, 1959, Ss. 25 and 27

Deceased H (son of PW 2) was earlier married to one M, sister of the two accused-appellants. But M had committed suicide sometime earlier and so the relationship between H and the appellants had become strained. On 15-11-1993 at about 5 to 5.50 p.m. when PW 1 (relative of H) was returning to his village on foot, he met H and PW 2. A short while later, the two appellants came from behind on a motorcycle and one sitting on the pillion fired a shot from his country-made pistol at H as a result of which he died. The trial court acquitted the appellants by holding that (i) the prosecution failed to establish any plausible motive, (ii) the conduct of PW 2, who ran away from the spot on account of fear, was unnatural, and (iii) the presence of PW 1 was doubtful. The High Court, after reappreciating the evidence, convicted the appellants. Before the Supreme Court, the appellants challenged the judgment of the High Court by contending that the High Court in an appeal against acquittal erred in substituting its view in place of that expressed by the trial court. They further contended that the doctor's evidence indicated that the firing was done from a higher level and, therefore, since both the deceased and the accused who allegedly fired the gun were almost of the same height, the version given by PWs 1 and 2 was clearly negatived by the medical evidence. It was also argued that only relatives were made witnesses to the alleged recoveries, the pellets and wads allegedly recovered were not sent to the Forensic Science Laboratory and no firearms expert was examined.

Dismissing the appeals,

Held :

There is no embargo on the appellate court reviewing the evidence upon which an order of acquittal is based. As a matter of fact, in an appeal against acquittal, the High Court as the court of first appeal is obligated to go into greater detail of the evidence to see whether any miscarriage has resulted from the order of acquittal, though it has to act with great circumspection and utmost care before ordering the reversal of an acquittal. Generally, the order of acquittal shall not be interfered with because the presumption of innocence of the accused is further strengthened by acquittal. The golden thread which runs through the web of administration of justice in criminal cases is that if two views are possible on the evidence adduced in the case, one pointing to the guilt of the accused and the other to his innocence, the view which is favourable to the accused should be adopted. (Para 12)

The paramount consideration of the court is to ensure that miscarriage of justice is prevented. A miscarriage of justice which may arise from acquittal of the guilty is no less than from the conviction of an innocent. In a case where admissible evidence is ignored, a duty is cast upon the appellate court to reappreciate the evidence where the accused has been acquitted, for the purpose of ascertaining as to whether any of the accused really committed any offence or not. The principle to be followed by the appellate court considering the appeal against the judgment of acquittal is to interfere only when there are compelling and substantial reasons for doing so. If the impugned judgment is clearly unreasonable and relevant and convincing materials have been unjustifiably eliminated in the process, it is a compelling reason for interference. (Para 12)

In the present case, the judgment of the trial court was practically unreasoned without any attempt to critically and objectively analyse the evidence. The High Court was justified in undertaking a reappreciation of the evidence and it has taken into account all the relevant aspects of the case to hold the accused persons guilty. An order of acquittal should not be lightly interfered with. Though the appellate court has full power to review the evidence upon which the order of acquittal is founded, still while exercising such an appellate power in a case of acquittal, the appellate court should not only consider every matter on record having a bearing on the question of fact and the reasons given by the courts below in support of its order of acquittal, it must express its reasons in the judgment which led it to hold that the acquittal is not justified. (Para 18)

Thus, it is obligatory on the High Court while reversing an order of acquittal to consider and discuss each of the reasons given by the trial court to acquit the accused and then to dislodge those reasons. In the instant case, the High Court has discharged the aforesaid obligation as required and by careful analysis demolished each one of the fundamentally weak reasonings given by the trial court. [5593] — Ss. 386 and 378 — Appeal against acquittal — Power of appellate court in, to reappreciate and reweigh the evidence and come to its own conclusion

In an appeal against acquittal the appellate court has every power to reappreciate, review and reconsider the evidence as a whole before it. It is, no doubt, true that there is presumption of innocence in favour of the accused and that presumption is reinforced by an order of acquittal recorded by the trial court. But that is not the end of the matter. It is for the appellate court to keep in view the relevant principles of law, to reappreciate and reweigh the evidence as a whole and to come to its own conclusion on such evidence in consonance with the principles of criminal jurisprudence. (Para 28)

In the present case, the High Court was justified in setting aside the order of acquittal and in convicting the accused for the offences with which he was charged. (Para 31). Girja Prasad v. State of M.P., (2007) 7 SCC 625: (2007) 3 SCC (Cri) 475: (2007) 4 KLT 99: (2007) 58 AIC 230 (SC).

While exercising the powers in an appeal against the order of acquittal the court of appeal would not ordinarily interfere with the order of acquittal unless the approach of the lower court is vitiated by some manifest illegality and the conclusion arrived at would not be arrived at by any reasonable person and, therefore, the decision is to be characterised as perverse. Merely because two views are possible, the court of appeal would not take the view which would upset the judgment delivered by the court below. However, the appellate court has a power to review the evidence if it is of the view that the view arrived at by the court below is perverse and the court has committed a manifest error of law and ignored the material evidence on record. But, when there is perverse finding based on erroneous appreciation of evidence and a serious miscarriage was caused, the High Court has ample power to reverse that finding. (Para 7)

There is convincing and satisfactory evidence to prove that the appellant was responsible for the murder of the deceased. The Sessions Judge disbelieved the dying declaration on flimsy grounds based on irrelevant considerations. (Paras 9 and 11)

[5606] — Ss. 386 and 378 — Reversal of acquittal by High Court — Propriety of — Held, where two views are possible, the view in favour of the accused has to be preferred — But, where the relevant materials are not considered to arrive at a view by the trial court, the High Court has a duty to arrive at a correct conclusion taking a view different from the one adopted by the trial court — On facts, reversal of acquittal by High Court, held, was proper

Coming to the case of the four appellants who were acquitted by the trial court but convicted by the High Court, it is to be noticed that the trial court placed reliance on the evidence of PW 18 for the purpose of convicting accused R, but so far as the other four accused are concerned, it was not held to be reliable. There was no cogent reason indicated as to why the same was termed to be unreliable. Additionally, recoveries were made pursuant to the disclosure made by them. Though arguments were advanced that due procedure was not followed, in view of the evidence of the witnesses examined by the prosecution in that regard, there is nothing illegal ruling out its acceptance. There are certain additional features also. Further, even if the evidence of PW 7 was held to be not reliable, the evidence relating to recovery established by the evidence of PW 18 cannot be lost sight of. Evidence of PWs 8 and 9 has been analysed in great detail by the High Court and has been held to be reliable. (Paras 28 and 29)

There can be no dispute with the proposition that when two views are possible, the one in favour of the accused has to be preferred. But where the relevant materials have not been considered to arrive at a view by the trial court, certainly the High Court has a duty to arrive at a correct conclusion taking a view different from the one adopted by the trial court. In the case at hand, the course adopted by the High Court is proper. (Para 29). Bodhraj v. State of J&K, (2002) 8 SCC 45: AIR 2002 SC 3164.

In an appeal against the order of acquittal, the High Court has same powers which the trial court has in examining the evidence and if it comes to the conclusion that the view taken by the trial court was unreasonable or against the weight of evidence, it could reject the finding recorded by the trial court. It is not a case where the High Court has interfered with the order of acquittal merely because it could take a different view. [5608] — Ss. 386 and 378 — Powers of High Court to reverse acquittal in appeal — Held, the High Court should refrain from disturbing the finding of fact arrived at by the trial court, particularly when the interference is sought on mere possibility of an alternative view in respect of the evidence adduced in the case — Having regard to the variance between the FIR and the depositions made in the court, held, High Court erred in setting aside the acquittal of appellants merely on possibility of an alternative view — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302, 307, 147, 148 read with Ss. 149 and 120-B

The High Court reversed the trial court's order of acquittal by taking a different possible view. Restating the powers of the High Court in an appeal against acquittal, the Supreme Court set aside the impugned judgment of the High Court, and

Held :

The settled position of law on the powers to be exercised by the High Court in an appeal against an order of acquittal is that though the High Court has full powers to review the evidence upon which an order of acquittal is passed, the principle of presumption of innocence of the accused persons is also equally well settled. Normally the views of the trial court, as to the credibility of the witnesses, must be given proper weight and consideration because the trial court is supposed to have watched the demeanour and conduct of the witnesses and is in a better position to appreciate their testimony. The High Court should be slow in disturbing a finding of fact arrived at by the trial court. (Para 8)

The prosecution had failed to prove the case beyond reasonable doubt and the sequence of circumstances narrated by the witnesses in the court was totally different from the occurrence detailed in the first information report. The incident stated in the FIR, being the first version of the occurrence has to be given due weight. The trial court does not appear to have committed any glaring irregularity in disbelieving the alleged eyewitnesses whose testimony was concededly contrary to the case of the prosecution as projected in the FIR. The case of the prosecution, as sought to be proved at the trial, appears to be different than the one as narrated in the FIR. When the testimony of eyewitnesses is totally different from the story set out in the FIR, the trial court cannot be held to have taken a view which was not at all possible. The view taken by the trial court could have been disturbed only if there were compelling reasons. Even if another view regarding the occurrence was possible, as taken by the High Court, the same could not be made a basis for setting aside the order of the trial court in view of the settled position of law on the point. (Paras 15 and 18)

In view of the facts and circumstances of the case, particularly the variance between the FIR and the depositions made in the court, the mention of gunshot injuries in the panchnama and their absence in the FIR, the conflict between the statements of eyewitnesses and the medical evidence and major contradictions and improvements in the depositions of the eyewitnesses, it is held that the prosecution failed to prove their case against the appellants beyond all shadow of doubt. The appellants are, therefore, held entitled to the benefit of reasonable doubt. (Para 19). Kalyan v. State of U.P., (2001) 9 SCC 632: AIR 2001 SC 3976.

The order of acquittal cannot be lightly reversed merely because the High Court could take a different view. But in this case having regard to the evidence, the view taken by the trial court was not a reasonable but an untenable one. The appreciation of the evidence by the trial court was not objective and appropriate keeping in view the broad probabilities of the case and nature of the evidence. The High Court in a case like this was fully justified in setting aside the order of acquittal recorded by the trial court by dislodging the reasons given by the trial court for acquittal. (Para 9)

The enmity between the deceased and the appellants was not disputed. The High Court has taken pains to say that merely because PW 8 is the brother of the deceased and PW 13 was the servant of another brother of the deceased, their evidence could not be discarded when their evidence was corroborated and supported by the evidence of other witnesses. (Para 9)

Merely because one of the eyewitnesses was not examined, that itself could not be put against the prosecution when two eyewitnesses were examined, who fully supported the prosecution case. (Para 9)

The High Court was also right in saying that there was nothing unnatural when PW 8 did not make efforts to save the deceased as there were six accused persons who armed with lathis attacked the deceased and it was neither safe nor desirable for the witness to endanger his life. (Para 9)

The High Court was right in saying that the trial court was wrong in observing that PW 8 could not witness the incident from the place where he was standing. The High Court correctly held that the accused were known to the witnesses and could be identified even in faint darkness. (Para 9)

The trial court also committed an error in giving undue importance to minor discrepancies that too in regard to the subsequent events and not relating to the actual incident. (Para 9). Bharosi v. State of M.P., (2002) 7 SCC 239: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1686: AIR 2002 SC 3299.

The powers of the appellate court, in an appeal from an order of acquittal, are enumerated in Section 386(a) CrPC. Those powers do not contemplate that an appellate court, after recording conviction, can remit the matter to the trial court for passing appropriate order of sentence. The judicial function of imposing appropriate sentence can be performed only by the appellate court when it reverses the order of acquittal and not by any other court. Having regard to the scheme of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 after finding the appellant guilty under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, the judicial discretion of imposing appropriate sentence could not have been abdicated by the Single Judge of the High Court, in favour of the Magistrate. Having found the appellant guilty under Section 138 of the Act it was the bounden duty of the High Court to impose appropriate sentence commensurate with the facts of the case. [5614] — Ss. 386, 374 and 378 — Appeal against conviction — Scope of appellate court's power — Appellate court must itself appreciate the evidence on record and arrive at an independent finding based on the appraisal of such evidence — If two views possible, benefit of doubt must be given to the accused — Though powers are equally wide while dealing with appeal against conviction or acquittal but presumption of innocence of accused which gets strengthened on his acquittal, is not available in an appeal against conviction

In an appeal against conviction, the appellate court has the duty to itself appreciate the evidence on the record and if two views are possible on the appraisal of the evidence, the benefit of reasonable doubt has to be given to the accused. It is not correct to suggest that the "Appellate Court cannot legally interfere with" the order of conviction where the trial court has found the evidence as reliable and that it cannot substitute the findings of the Sessions Judge by its own, if it arrives at a different conclusion on reassessment of the evidence. Though, the powers of an appellate court, while dealing with an appeal against acquittal and an appeal against conviction are equally wide but the considerations which weigh with it while dealing with an appeal against an order of acquittal and in an appeal against conviction are distinct and separate. The presumption of innocence of an accused which gets strengthened on his acquittal is not available on his conviction. An appellate court may give every reasonable weight to the conclusions arrived at by the trial court but it must be remembered that an appellate court is duty-bound, in the same way as the trial court, to test the evidence extrinsically as well as intrinsically and to consider as thoroughly as the trial court, all the circumstances available on the record so as to arrive at an independent finding regarding guilt or innocence of the convict. An appellate court fails in the discharge of one of its essential duties, if it fails to itself appreciate the evidence on the record and arrive at an independent finding based on the appraisal of such evidence. [5615] — Ss. 386 and 374 — Appeal before High Court from conviction — Scope of High Court's power under S. 386 to interfere with the finding and sentence of trial court — High Court can reappraise the evidence — When Supreme Court's interference under Art. 136 with High Court's findings called for

The High Court, exercising power under S. 386, CrPC, in an appeal from a conviction may reverse the finding and sentence and acquit the accused or alter the finding maintaining the sentence or with or without altering the finding alter the nature or the extent or the nature and extent of the sentence but not so as to enhance the same. The powers of the High Court in dealing with the evidence are as wide as that of the trial court. As the final court of facts, the High Court has also duty to examine the evidence and arrive at its own conclusion on the entire material on record as to the guilt or otherwise of the appellants before it. Thus the High Court is entitled to reappraise the evidence in the case.

Though the Supreme Court under Art. 136 does not ordinarily reappraise the evidence for itself for determining whether or not the High Court has come to a correct conclusion on facts but where the High Court has completely missed the real point requiring determination and has also on erroneous grounds discredited the evidence and has further failed to consider the fact that on account of long standing enmity between the parties, there is a tendency to involve innocent persons and to exaggerate and lead pre-judged evidence in regard to the occurrence, the Supreme Court would be justified in going into the evidence for the purpose of satisfying itself that grave injustice has not resulted in the case.

In the present case respondents along with five others had been found guilty by the trial court accepting the testimony of two eyewitnesses and other material evidence on record and had been convicted and sentenced under S. 302 and Ss. 323, 325 read with S. 149 IPC. But the High Court by its cryptic order, acquitted respondents of the major charge under S. 302, IPC, and recorded their conviction under S. 304 Part I reducing the sentence of life imprisonment to a term of imprisonment already undergone while enhancing the sentence of fine. There was no discussion of the evidence much less any reasoning. The line of approach adopted by the High Court was wholly wrong. In the circumstances the Supreme Court would interfere under Art. 136 to prevent failure of justice. Sham Sunder v. Puran, (1990) 4 SCC 731: 1991 SCC (Cri) 38: AIR 1991 SC 8.

It is mandatory for the appellate court to peruse the record which will necessarily mean the statement of the witnesses. In a case based upon direct eyewitness account, the testimony of the eyewitnesses is of paramount importance and if the appellate court reverses the finding recorded by the trial court and acquits the accused without considering or examining the testimony of the eyewitnesses, it will be a clear infraction of Section 386 CrPC. In this case, the Sessions Judge after placing reliance on the testimony of the eyewitnesses and the medical evidence on record was of the opinion that the case of the prosecution was fully established. But the High Court did not at all consider the testimony of the eyewitnesses and completely ignored the same. However, on reappraisal of evidence of the injured eyewitnesses it is clear that the evidence on record fully establishes the case of the prosecution. In the matter of appreciation of the evidence the powers of the appellate court are as wide as that of the trial court. It has full power to review the whole evidence. It is entitled to go into the entire evidence and all relevant circumstances to arrive at its own conclusion about the guilt or innocence of the accused. The provisions of S. 386(b) do not create a bar against the appellate court considering indirectly and incidentally a case against the person who was acquitted, if that becomes necessary when dealing with the case in the appeal presented on behalf of the other accused who are convicted. In considering the evidence as a whole, the appellate court may come to the conclusion that the evidence against the person acquitted was also good and need not have been discarded. When several persons are alleged to have committed an offence in furtherance of the common intention and all except one are acquitted, it is open to the appellate court to find out on a reappraisal of the evidence that some of the accused persons have been wrongly acquitted, although it could not interfere with such acquittal in the absence of an appeal by the State Government. The effect of such a finding is not to reverse the order of acquittal into one of conviction or visit the acquitted person with criminal liability. The Special Judge convicted and sentenced the appellant under Section 5(1)(e) read with Section 5(2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947. In an appeal by the accused against the said conviction and sentence, the High Court neither modified the finding of guilt under Section 5(1)(e) nor the sentence under Section 5(2). All that it has done is while affirming the finding of guilt recorded by the Special Judge in regard to the disproportionate wealth, to recalculate the exact amount of disproportionate wealth with reference to the evidence, which is permissible under Section 386(b)(ii) which provides that the appellate court may, in an appeal from a conviction, alter the finding, maintaining the sentence. If an appellate court may alter the finding of guilt of the accused from one section to another, while maintaining the sentence, there is no reason why the extent of the offence should not be changed in an appeal against conviction. No sympathy or leniency is called for. It is an unpardonable act. If the protector becomes the violator, the offence assumes a greater degree of vulnerability. Charged of raping his own daughter under his refuge and fortress is worse than the gamekeeper becoming a poacher and treasury guard becoming a robber. He not only delicts the law but, it is a betrayal of trust. The accused's lustful acts have indelible scar not only physically but also emotionally on the victim. I enhanced to life imprisonment — Held, decision of the High Court is not sustainable — Sentence of seven years' RI as imposed by the trial Judge restored*

Acquittal of the accused under Section 302 IPC read with Section 34 IPC has stood confirmed. The Sessions Judge had imposed on him for the offence under Section 304 Pt. I a sentence to suffer rigorous imprisonment for seven years. In his appeal, however, pursuant to the notice of enhancement, the High Court enhanced his sentence to life imprisonment. To that extent the decision of the High Court seems to be inconsistent. When the High Court held that accused had not committed offence of murder and, therefore, as a logical corollary he was not liable to be sentenced to life imprisonment, it is difficult to appreciate how the same sentence of life imprisonment could be imposed on him by enhancing his sentence under Section 304 Part I. It is now well settled that imposing of sentence is in the realm of discretion of the court and unless this sentence is found to be grossly inadequate the appellate court would not be justified in interfering with the discretionary order of sentence. On the facts of the present case, it may not be said that the sentence of seven years' rigorous imprisonment as imposed by the trial court was grossly inadequate. While maintaining his conviction for an offence under Section 304 Part I, his sentence of life imprisonment as enhanced by the High Court will stand set aside and instead the sentence of seven years' rigorous imprisonment as imposed by the learned trial Judge will stand restored. Ram Sanjiwan Singh v. State of Bihar, (1996) 8 SCC 552: 1996 SCC (Cri) 701: AIR 1996 SC 3265.

whimsical — It is controlled by law and to some extent by judicial discretion, applicable to the facts of the case — Penal Code, 1860 — S. 304 Pt. I and Pt. II

It has been noticed by the Supreme Court that the appellate or revisional courts reduce the sentence while maintaining the conviction to sentence already undergone without even noticing what is the period already undergone. There is a need for the courts to apply its mind while imposing sentence. The courts should bear in mind that there is a requirement in law that every conviction should be followed by an appropriate sentence within the period stipulated in law. Discretion in this regard is not absolute or whimsical. It is controlled by law and to some extent by judicial discretion, applicable to the facts of the case. (Para 18)

In the instant case, the High Court while convicting the respondent for an offence punishable under Section 304 Part II IPC which has maximum sentence up to ten years thought it fit to impose the sentence already undergone without even applying its mind as to why it should be less than ten years or for that matter, what is the sentence already undergone. Such misplaced generosity on the part of the courts while imposing sentence is seriously deprecated. On the police receiving information about the place of hiding of notorious criminal Veerappan and his gang, a police party headed by the Superintendent of Police, proceeded to nab them. The party comprising of police personnel, forest watchers and informants went in two buses. As a result of blasting of landmines that had been laid, the bus which was in front exploded. The explosion resulted in injuries to many and death of twenty-two persons. After the explosion of the landmines, there was exchange of fire also. The Special Judge, TADA convicted the appellants for offences under Sections 3, 4, 5 of the TADA Act, Sections 143, 148, 307, 302, 332, 333, 324, 120-B and 149 of the Indian Penal Code, Section 3 of the Explosive Substances Act and Section 25 of the Indian Arms Act. In respect of the main offences, the appellants have been sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for life besides fine and further imprisonment in default of payment of fine. The lesser punishment had been inflicted for offences under the Arms Act and the Explosive Substances Act. The trial court held that though it was a rarest of the rare case for imposing capital punishment but at the same time that punishment need not be imposed as it was not the case of the prosecution that the accused had started their career as criminals and developed such notoriety; and that it was Accused 1 Veerappan, who alone started his criminal activity which reached such notoriety that by creating terror in the mind of the people he took inhabitants from surrounding areas to his assistance and compelled them to fall into line.

Held:

The grant of life imprisonment is the rule and death penalty an exception in the rarest of rare cases by stating "special reasons" for awarding it, but at the same time the punishment awarded must be commensurate with the crime committed by the accused. Ordinarily the sentence is not enhanced by the appellate court unless it is such a gross case that nothing but maximum sentence stipulated in law deserves to be awarded. The power to enhance death sentence from life should be very rarely exercised and only for strongest-possible reasons and not only because the appellate court is of that view. The question of enhancement of sentence to award death penalty can, however, be considered where the facts are such that to award any punishment less than the maximum would shock the conscience of the court. (Paras 21 and 22)

The court has to consider the nature of the crime as well as the accused. What is the relative weight to be given to the aggravating and mitigating factors, depends on the facts and circumstances of the particular case. More often than not these two aspects are so intertwined that it is difficult to give a separate treatment to each of them. In many cases the extremely cruel or beastly manner of the commission of murder is itself a demonstrated index of the depraved character of the perpetrator. That is why it is not desirable to consider the circumstances of the crime and the circumstances of the criminal in two separate watertight compartments. The circumstance of duress or domination of another person is required to be taken into consideration as a relevant circumstance but that has to be considered on the facts of a particular case while considering and balancing all other aggravating and mitigating circumstances. That alone is not the determining factor. (Paras 23, 29 and 32)

In the present case there was no administration in the area and it had totally collapsed and at that time no police officer could have proceeded beyond Hanur towards MM Hills without police escorts and as many as eight vehicles were required to escort one vehicle and further each escort party consisted of minimum three platoons; each platoon containing thirty-three persons; no summons could be served in many villages; no government official could move freely in that area, are all factors which, are aggravating circumstances against the appellants instead of being mitigating circumstances in their favour. The factors show the nature of crime and the criminals. There is nothing to show that the appellants joined Veerappan on account of these factors. It is evident that the aforesaid factors cannot be the handiwork of one person. In absence of any evidence, it cannot be said that persons/accused responsible for the aforesaid state of affairs in the area because of these criminal activities, joined and continued the said criminal activity on account of any duress, domination or compulsion. Further, it may be one of the mitigating factors but had to be considered in the light of all circumstances. The accused are responsible for such a situation. In a premeditated, planned manner landmines were laid en route the police party. There was firing also after the blast of landmines. The appellants are members of a notorious gang. Their prime target is police personnel of the State and the Special Task Force constituted to stop their activities with a view to terrorise the people. The appellants are members of the gang led by Veerappan (A-1). They do not deserve any sympathetic consideration. There is no evidence or foundation for the conclusion that the appellants were compelled to fall in line with the criminal activity of Accused 1 or that they joined his group on account of any duress or compulsion. The manner in which the crime was committed clearly shows that any person can contemplate the disastrous effect of blasting of landmines. It is evident that the crime was diabolically planned. The appellants are a threat and grave danger to society at large. They must have anticipated that their activity would result in elimination of a large number of lives. As a result of criminal activities, the normal life of those living in the area has been totally shattered. It would be a mockery of justice if extreme punishment is not imposed. Thus, having given anxious consideration to all the circumstances aggravating and mitigating, there can hardly be a more appropriate case than the present one to award maximum sentence. The Court has to perform this onerous duty for self-preservation i.e. preservation of persons who are living and working in the area where the appellants and their group operate. (Paras 36 and 37)

Therefore, while dismissing the appeals, confirming the conviction of the appellants, the sentence of each of them is enhanced from life imprisonment to death penalty. (Para 38). Simon v. State of Karnataka, (2004) 2 SCC 694: 2004 SCC (Cri) 646.

The respondent was a Constable of Indo-Tibetan Border Police and was governed by the CRPF Act (for short "the Act"). Once, in overdrunk condition he entered the house of the Commandant of the Battalion and thus committed an offence punishable under Section 16(2) of the Act. He was convicted under Section 10(n) of the Act and sentenced to three months' imprisonment. The appellate court, while upholding the conviction, reduced the sentence to the extent of till the rising of the court and further directed that that order would not adversely affect the service career of the respondent. Relying on Section 386(e) CrPC, the High Court upheld the said further direction. Before the Supreme Court, the appellant challenged the jurisdiction of the appellate and revisional courts to give such a direction. The respondent solicited for applying Section 3 of the Probation of Offenders Act, 1958. Allowing the appeal but granting the respondent the benefit of the 1958 Act,

Held:

Orders contemplated under Section 386(e) CrPC for amendment of the impugned order or consequential or incidental orders are only such orders which are permissible under CrPC or any other law in force. Such a power does not confer a jurisdiction upon the appellate court to pass orders which tend to interfere with the service career of the convict or affect the rights of a party not before it. The consequential or incidental orders contemplated under Section 386(e) are orders which follow as a matter of course being necessary complements to the main orders without which the latter would be incomplete and ineffective. Therefore, after passing the order of conviction and sentence, the criminal court should not have issued any direction relating to the service career of the respondent which is governed by the Act, rules made thereunder and the service rules governing his conditions of service. (Para 5)

The Probation of Offenders Act, 1958 has been enacted in view of the increasing emphasis on the reformation and rehabilitation of the offenders as useful and self-reliant members of society without subjecting them to deleterious effects of jail life. (Para 7)

For an offence punishable under Section 10 of the Act, the sentence provided is one year with fine entitling the respondent to claim the benefit of Section 3 of the Probation of Offenders Act. Both the courts below have thought it expedient to take a lenient view and instead of sending him to jail opted to pass a sentence till the rising of the court and in this context directed that the order of conviction and sentence would not adversely affect the service career of the accused. It is true that nobody can claim the benefit of Sections 3 and 4 of the Probation of Offenders Act as a matter of right and the court has to pass appropriate orders in the facts and circumstances of each case having regard to the nature of the offence, its general effect on the society and the character of the offender, etc. A case of a trivial nature as the respondent is stated to have committed and keeping in view its peculiar circumstances, is a fit case where powers under Section 3 of the Probation of Offenders Act can be exercised. (Para 9)

Therefore, it is directed that despite the confirmation of conviction by the appellate court, the respondent be given the benefit of the Probation of Offenders Act. It is further held that the respondent is entitled to the benefit of Section 12 of the Probation of Offenders Act. The High Court which is the first court of appeal did not even carefully appreciate the facts of the case. It mentions that the FIR was lodged by PWs 5 and 6 whereas the fact is that the FIR was lodged by PW 4, the Forest Officer. Without subjecting the evidence on record to a critical scrutiny, the High Court was content with saying that the three eyewitnesses having deposed against the appellant, the prosecution had proved its case beyond reasonable doubt. The High Court had not approached the evidence in the manner it should have done being the first court of appeal. The mere fact that the witnesses are consistent in what they say is not a sure guarantee of their truthfulness. The witnesses are subjected to cross-examination to bring out facts which may persuade a court to hold, that though consistent, their evidence is not acceptable for any other reason. If the court comes to the conclusion that the conduct of the witnesses is such that it renders the case of the prosecution doubtful or incredible or that their presence at the place of occurrence as eyewitnesses is suspect, the court may reject their evidence. That is why it is necessary for the High Court to critically scrutinize the evidence in some detail, it being the final court of fact. Appellant 2 was held guilty principally on the basis of the evidence of PWs 10 and 12 who deposed that deceased D was assaulted by farsis and ballams. However, medical evidence showed no cut or pointed injuries. PW 1 denied even lodging of FIR. Further, the High Court had stated that there was an attempt on the part of PWs 10 and 12 to implicate majority of the accused; that evidence of PWs 1, 6 and 7 did not inspire confidence; that there appeared to be a free fight between the parties and it was not shown that a particular accused caused the injuries to have recourse to Section 149 IPC. In these circumstances, the impugned order convicting and sentencing Appellant 2 cannot be sustained as the High Court did not analyse and appreciate the evidence objectively as it ought to be by the court of first appeal. The deceased along with PW 1, PW 2 and one D left his house for his fields to start the diesel engine of his pumping set in order to irrigate his field. The said three persons were following the deceased and were about 15-20 paces behind him. While the deceased was proceeding towards his field, seven accused persons suddenly emerged from behind the noonars (tilas i.e. big mounds of earth). They were all armed with weapons. The accused fired gunshots at the deceased who on receiving the injuries fell down. The accused severed the head of the deceased and threw his dead body into a river. PW 1, PW 2 and D, on the basis of the trail of blood, reached the place wherefrom the dead body of the deceased was thrown into the river. PWs 1 and 2 were examined as eyewitnesses to the incident. The trial court convicted all the accused persons under Ss. 148, 302/149 and 201 IPC. In appeal, the High Court disbelieved the presence of the eyewitnesses to the incident at the scene, rejected their evidence and acquitted all the accused on an extraneous ground, which was based on no evidence and was raised before the High Court for the first time.

[5653] — Ss. 386 and 374(2) — Appellate court's approach — High Court as a court of first appeal — Duty of — High Court not analysing the evidence — Arriving at conclusions on surmises and conjectures — Present one not a case where two reasonable views possible — No cogent or sufficient reasons assigned for disagreeing with findings of trial court — Findings of High Court contrary to materials on record — Great miscarriage of justice — Reviewing the evidence, held, acquittal liable to be set aside — Conviction by trial court restored — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/34 — Constitution of India — Art. 136

The High Court being a court of first appeal was required to consider and reappreciate the evidence but it failed to do so and proceeded to dispose of the appeal on general observations which is impermissible. The High Court acquitted the accused persons without analysing the evidence on record and in that view of the matter, the impugned judgment cannot be sustained. (Paras 32 and 27)

The High Court has not assigned any cogent or sufficient reasons for disagreeing with the findings of the learned Sessions Judge. The judgment of the High Court is based on surmises and conjectures. (Para 26)

(9) Proper mode of disposal of appeal (contd.)

Further, it is not a case where two reasonable views are possible. It is also not a case where findings recorded by the High Court are fully supported by the evidences on record. The High Court proceeded absolutely on a wrong premise that there had been only one injury during the firing which is contrary to records. (Para 31)

Thus, by reason of the judgment of the High Court, a great miscarriage of justice has taken place. It is well settled that when reasoning of the High Court is perverse, the Supreme Court may set aside the judgment of acquittal and restore the judgment of conviction and sentence upon the accused. (Paras 29 and 33)

It is also well settled that there is no embargo on the appellate court to review evidence upon which an order of acquittal is based. (Para 33)

Hence, the judgment of acquittal passed by the High Court is set aside and that of the learned Sessions Judge is restored. (Para 35). State of U.P. v. Nawab Singh, (2005) 9 SCC 84: 2005 SCC (Cri) 33: AIR 2004 SC 1511: 2004 Cri LJ 1367.

The fact that the gun from which shots had been fired at the deceased did belong to the accused was not adverted to by the High Court at all. A different theory which was sought to be set up by the defence, by stating that the death of the victims had occurred due to shots fired by S with the gun belonging to one P, was disbelieved by the Sessions Judge for good reasons. However, that aspect was totally ignored by the High Court. If the gunshot injuries had been sustained by the two deceased from the licensed gun belonging to the accused, the circumstances in which the injuries were sustained by them ought to have been explained satisfactorily by the defence. It is not unnatural or improbable that in villages particularly in the month of July when there is hardly any agricultural operation going on, to leisurely spend time even after last rites ceremony of K. (Paras 12, 10 and 11)

There was no justification for the High Court to hold that there was delay in lodging the FIR because the incident took place at the end of the night intervening 19-7-1984 and 20-7-1984 and the eyewitnesses who lodged the FIR had to go to the police station by at least covering a distance of 25 km partly by foot and partly by travelling in a bus. Further, waiting for a bus and reaching the appropriate police station to lodge the complaint does take time. More so, delay in lodging the complaint would assume significance in cases where the accused persons are being unnecessarily implicated while some others may have been responsible for the crime or to lug in those who were not present at the time of occurrence of the incident. On 20-7-1984, fairly early in the morning at about 7.15 a.m., PW 3 left for the police station to lodge the complaint about the incident which is neither unnatural or improbable. (Para 11)

Much significance could not have been attached by the High Court to the fact that one of the deceased having walked a few yards from the cot had not been mentioned in the FIR. Broad features of the case had been mentioned as to the manner in which the incident took place and who shot dead the two deceased. In fact, if there is some omission in a matter of detail that, by itself, may not be sufficient to rebut the prosecution case. There is criticism that the eyewitnesses instead of staying in their houses had been moving about in the streets but as they were mentally disturbed if they did not stay inside their houses they did not act in any abnormal manner. There is nothing unusual in their not alarming everyone in the village at that odd hour. Thus, the reasoning of the High Court cannot be accepted, particularly when the abovestated material facts of the case had been totally ignored by it. (Paras 11 and 12). State of Haryana v. Ram Sarup, (2002) 7 SCC 250: 2002 SCC (Cri) 1691: AIR 2002 SC 3114.

As per the deceased's wife (PW 1), on the day of occurrence the deceased accompanied by the accused left her house in the village. According to PW 2, who was a friend of the proprietor of a lodge, while he was at the counter of the lodge, the accused and the deceased came there at about 1.30 p.m. and hired a room (Room No. 7) in the lodge. Cash receipt was filled up by the deceased and it was issued by PW 2 who last saw the deceased along with the accused going to Room No. 7. According to PW 2, at about 4.15 p.m. when he was sitting at the counter along with the room boy, the accused came and told him that he had killed the deceased and he should telephone the police. At that time he was wearing only a pant and his body was stained with blood. Then, PW 2 sent the room boy along with the accused to the room to see what had happened. The room boy came back leaving the accused in the room and closing it from outside. He reported to PW 2 about the murder of the deceased. PW 2 then contacted the proprietor's father PW 3 over telephone and informed him that some galata (untoward incident) had taken place in the lodge and requested him to come down to the lodge. PW 3 came to the lodge immediately and got a feedback of the event from PW 2. PW 3 then contacted the police and informed them that a murder had taken place in Room No. 7 without naming the victim or the assailant. Then, the Police Sub-Inspector, PW 12 accompanied by other police personnel reached the lodge. He entered Room No. 7 on the second floor by opening the bolt. He found the accused sitting on the cot. A dead body was lying by the side of the cot in a pool of blood. There were injuries on the neck and the face and a bloodstained chopper was found on the table. He arrested the accused. The trial court relied upon the following circumstances for coming to the conclusion that the accused committed the murder: (1) Deceased's leaving the village home along with the accused (as per evidence of the deceased's wife) and the deceased having been last seen by PW 2 with the accused going to Room No. 7 of the lodge. (2) The deceased was found murdered in the room by 4.15 p.m. (3) When the door of Room No. 7 was opened by the police, the accused was sitting on the cot by the side of the dead body, as seen from the evidence of PWs 2 and 10. (4) In the room the bloodstained chopper by which the injuries could have been inflicted (as per the medical evidence) was found. The bloodstained clothes of the accused were seized. The chemical analysis report revealed that they contained human blood. (5) The trial court referred to the fact that the room boy whose statement was treated as FIR could not be examined as his whereabouts were not known, as disclosed in the evidence of PW 10. The deceased's wife stated in somewhat vague terms that "due to land dispute, there was ill will between my husband and the accused". The trial court concluded that the circumstances form a complete chain and rule out reasonable likelihood of innocence of the accused. But the High Court set aside the judgment of the trial court and acquitted the accused-respondent of the charge under Section 302 IPC on the following reasons: 1. There is no clinching material where exactly the incident took place — whether on the first floor or the second floor. 2. The extra-judicial confession was not communicated to the police or to the proprietor of the lodge at the earliest point of time. The telephonic message was only to the effect that an untoward incident had happened. 3. Having regard to the variation in the evidence of PWs 2 and 3 the confession becomes doubtful. 4. The hotel register was not produced in court to establish that the accused and deceased stayed together in the room. Hence, the last-seen evidence cannot be given any weight. 5. Though the accused was injured and sent to the hospital, the injuries were not explained nor the doctor examined. 6. The chopper found on the table was not sent to the fingerprint expert. 7. None spoke about the wearing of the seized shirt and baniyan by the accused. 8. No motive is established.

(9) Proper mode of disposal of appeal (contd.)

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

None of the reasons given by the High Court in upsetting the findings of the trial court are tenable. On the basis of the evidence on record it was not reasonably possible to take the view which the High Court did. (Para 10)

As regards the place of incident prosecution evidence is consistent that the murder took place in Room No. 7 of the lodge. Whether it be on the first floor or the second floor is not really material. The alleged discrepancy as to the location of the room does not throw an iota of doubt on the prosecution case. PW 2 who was giving evidence after more than two years may not have recollected whether Room No. 7 was on the first floor or the second floor, especially when he is not the proprietor or manager of the lodge. (Para 11)

The non-mention of the confessional statement by PW 2 when he telephoned PW 3 or PW 3 when he contacted the police over the phone is not at all a factor which casts a reasonable doubt on the version of PW 2. Having regard to the fact that they were expected to reach the lodge within a few minutes, such details could be more appropriately narrated in person rather than wasting time on the phone. Such conduct is quite consistent with ordinary human conduct. The time-lag between the telephonic contact and the arrival of PW 3 and the police is less than half an hour, as the evidence on record reveals. It is too much to think that PW 2 entertained the idea of concocting an extra-judicial confession within those few minutes. (Para 12)

The testimony of PW 2 as regards the confession made by the accused at the earliest point of time is such as to inspire confidence in the mind of the Court. PW 2 may be a stranger to the accused but it should also be noted that there is absolutely no reason why he should unnecessarily implicate the accused. Without any loss of time he brought to the notice of PW 3 and the police the factum of confession made by the accused soon after the crime. His version in this regard is supported by PW 3 who, being the father of the proprietor of the lodge, came to the lodge immediately after receiving the phone call from PW 2. The conduct of the accused in committing the murder and immediately revealing this fact to a stranger like PW 2 may not be consistent with ordinary human conduct. It may be difficult to speculate as to what prompted the accused to confess the commission of the crime before PW 2 and to remain in the lodge after the incident. But, on that account, there need not be astute reluctance on the part of the Court to accept the extra-judicial confession. The unnatural conduct on the part of the accused will not necessarily shake the veracity of PW 2's testimony but it will put the Court on guard to get the assurance of truth in the prosecution case by corroborative evidence including circumstantial factors. That apart, the circumstances referred to by the trial court are almost clinching and lend assurance to the correctness of the version of PW 2. (Para 8)

The last-seen evidence cannot be discredited on the basis that the hotel register was not produced in order to establish that the accused and the deceased hired a room in the hotel. In the face of the undeniable fact that the name entered in the cash receipt and the hotel register was a fictitious name, the production of hotel register could not have made any difference. The fact remains that PW 2 identified the accused and the deceased as the persons who took the room a few hours before the incident and to whom the receipt was passed on. The handwriting of the deceased on the receipt was identified by his wife PW 1 — an educated lady. Then there is the clear evidence to the effect that the accused was found in the room by the side of the dead body. All these relevant facts were overlooked by the High Court. (Para 13)

It is doubtful whether blood-soaked chopper, if analysed by the fingerprint expert, could have given any clues as to fingerprints. Be that as it may, even if it is considered a lapse in the investigation, that will not cast a cloud of doubt on the prosecution case. (Para 15)

The panch witness, PW 7 spoke to the seizure of the bloodstained clothes which the accused was wearing at the police station. The bloodstained clothes were sent for chemical analysis. (Para 16)

As regards the motive, it is true, as contended that the prosecution evidence is not quite satisfactory. A bald statement that there was a land dispute between the deceased and the accused was made by PW 1, the wife of the deceased. The fact that the prosecution did not adduce satisfactory evidence on the motive aspect, is not sufficient to throw out the prosecution case as unreliable. When there is abundant evidence to show that the accused and the accused alone would have committed the murder, the absence of proof of motive does not vitiate the prosecution case. (Para 17)

Thus the approach of the High Court is perverse as it has set aside the conviction recorded by the trial court on untenable and irrelevant grounds. It is not reasonably possible to give benefit of doubt to the accused, as the evidence is so clinching. (Para 18). State of Karnataka v. *M.N. [5657] — Ss. 386 and 374(2) — Reversal of conviction by High Court based on probabilities of the case rather than the evidence of the eyewitnesses — Propriety of — Conviction — Seventeen accused charged for having committed the murder of one N, his wife and his two-year-old son and causing injuries to PWs 2, 3, 11 and one R — No dispute about the motive and the place of incident — Doubt raised about the time of incident — Trial court relying on the evidence of the eyewitnesses, which was corroborated by medical evidence and other circumstantial evidence, and holding that the incident occurred at about 9.30 a.m. — Conviction of fifteen accused by trial court — High Court rejecting the acceptable evidence of eyewitnesses and entering into the exercise of calculations based on probabilities, which had no foundation in evidence, and holding that the incident could not have occurred at about 9.30 a.m. — On reappraisal of evidence, held, no reason to disbelieve the prosecution evidence relating to the time of incident, particularly in view of the evidence of the independent and injured witnesses in that regard — On facts, held, prosecution case proved against accused A-1 to A-5 and A-8 — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/149, 452, 307/149

The trial court in regard to the time of the incident relying on the oral evidence of PWs 2, 3, 4, 11 and 12 held that it was possible to conclude that the incident in question had occurred at about 9.30 a.m. It also found corroboration from the medical evidence as also from certain circumstantial evidence adduced by the prosecution. But the High Court did not accept this evidence as to the time of occurrence and accepted the defence suggestion that the incident in question must have occurred sometime prior to daybreak. The High Court primarily relied upon its own assessment of the time that might have been taken by PW 2 in covering a distance of 31/2 miles to reach the police station, having to stop for some time at Hargaon for getting the complaint written down by one L as also the time that the constable at the police station would have taken to register the complaint. The High Court in this process also placed reliance on that piece of medical evidence which showed that the stomach of the deceased husband and wife contained semi-digested food which also, according to it, probabilises the fact that the incident in question must have occurred very early in the morning. (Paras 15 and 11)

Thus, the High Court proceeded on the basis of probabilities of the case rather than the evidence of eyewitnesses to come to the conclusion that the incident in question could not have taken place at 9.30 a.m. But when there is acceptable oral evidence of eyewitnesses regarding the time of incident, the High Court erred in entering into the exercise of calculation based on probabilities which has no foundation in evidence. However exact a calculation of this nature could be, the same cannot be a substitute for the evidence of acceptable eyewitnesses. Such exercise of calculating the time of incident based on probabilities can only be resorted to in the absence of acceptable oral evidence. (Para 16)

On reappraisal of the evidence on record, it is held that the prosecution in this case has established by oral evidence that the incident had actually occurred at about 9.30 a.m. and there is no reason to disbelieve the oral evidence in this regard, especially because of the evidence of the independent injured witnesses like PW 11 and other two independent witnesses PWs 4 and 12 in regard to the timing of the incident. (Para 16)

Out of the seventeen accused persons, nine of them remained outside the house of PW 2 while A-1 to A-8 entered the house carrying various weapons. So far as the identity of the nine accused persons who stayed outside is concerned, there is considerable discrepancy in the prosecution evidence. As a matter of fact, it has come in evidence that those witnesses who were inside the house could not even have seen these accused who were outside the house, therefore, it is not safe to accept this evidence to base a conviction of those accused who were standing outside the house. The only person who could have possibly noticed all these accused who were outside the house is PW 12, but from his evidence alone it is not safe to hold these accused persons guilty of the offence alleged against them. So far as accused A-6 and A-7 are concerned, the learned Sessions Judge himself found some difficulty in accepting the evidence of PW 2 because of some confusion in his evidence. (Para 17)

But the PWs have very clearly and consistently spoken about the overt acts of A-4, A-5 and A-8 along with A-1, A-2 and A-3 which is supported by medical evidence also. Hence, the prosecution case is accepted in respect of the said accused persons. (Para 26). State of U.P. v. Rasid, (2003) 9 SCC 449: AIR 2003 SC 1243: 2003 All LJ 1152: 2003 Cri LJ 2011.

[5660] — S. 386 — Recording of reasons by the appellate court for disagreeing with the trial court — Held, has to be given only in respect of relevant aspects and not necessarily on every aspect

In a criminal trial as also in civil suits, the trial court and the appellate court should marshal the facts and reach conclusion, on facts. In a criminal case, the prosecution has to prove the guilt beyond doubt. The concept of benefit of doubt is not a charter for acquittal. Doubt of a doubting Thomas or of a weak mind is not the road to reach the result. If a Judge on objective evaluation of evidence and after applying relevant tests reaches a finding that the prosecution has not proved its case beyond reasonable doubt, then the accused is entitled to the benefit of doubt for acquittal. On scanning the evidence and going through the reasoning of the Single Judge it has to be held that the Single Judge was right in accepting the confessional statement of the appellant to be a voluntary one and that it could form the basis for conviction. The Magistrate had dwelt upon the controversy, no doubt on appreciation of the evidence but not in proper or right perspective. Therefore, it was not necessary for the Single Judge to wade through every reasoning and give his reasons for his disagreement with the conclusion reached by the Magistrate. On relevant aspects, the Single Judge dwelt upon in detail and recorded the disagreement with the Magistrate and reached his conclusions. Therefore, there is no illegality in the approach adopted by the Single Judge. Therefore, the Single Judge was right in his findings that the prosecution has proved the case. *K.I. Though as a self-made rule of practice the Supreme Court does not interfere with the findings of fact reached by the High Court, but such findings of fact must not be vitiated by serious errors of assumption and inference. The powers of the appellate court, in an appeal against the acquittal, are not different from or inconsistent with, those that the appellate court has in an appeal against a conviction; the difference is more in the manner of approach and the perspective rather than in the content of the power. The plenitude of the power of the appellate court to review and reappreciate the evidence cannot be limited under the supposed rule that unless there are "substantial" or "compelling" reasons or "very substantial reasons" or "strong reasons", the findings in a judgment of acquittal should not be interfered with. There is thus no immunity to an erroneous order from a strict appellate scrutiny. But the appellate court wherever it finds justification to reverse an acquittal must record reasons why it finds the lower court wrong. State of U.P. v. Krishna Gopal, (1988) 4 SCC 302: 1988 SCC (Cri) 928: AIR 1988 SC 2154.

When the appellate court concurs with the views of the trial court the necessity for elaborately dealing with various aspects may not always be necessary. But when a view contrary to that of the lower court is expressed, it is imperative that reasons therefor should be clearly indicated. There is no scope for any departure from this basic requirement. Therefore, the plea of the accused-respondents that even though the judgment of the High Court is not very elaborately reasoned, yet it can be supplemented by arguments, is a fallacious one. The State Government has been directed to file an appeal much beyond the period of limitation: what about the rights of an accused for presentation of appeal beyond the period of limitation. While it is true an appeal barred by limitation does not confer a right but it amounts to extinguishment of a right. In criminal jurisprudence, however, extinguishment of right confers a benefit to an accused and it is in this perspective, it can be said that the High Court would not be within its jurisdiction to take away such a benefit as conferred by reason of extinguishment of right. (11) Practice and procedure re disposal of appeal

[5680] — Ss. 386, 385 and 384 — Dismissal of appeal for default or non-prosecution without going into merits of the case is illegal — Appellate court must dispose of the appeal on merits after perusal and scrutiny of the record — Appellate court must give a hearing to the parties, if present, before disposal of the appeal on merits — Notice of appeal under S. 385 and hearing under S. 386 must be given either to the appellant or his pleader and not to both — Appellate court not obliged to adjourn the matter if the appellant and his counsel are absent — It can dispose of the appeal after perusal of the record and judgment of the trial court — But if the appellant is in jail and his counsel is not present the court should adjourn the case to facilitate the appearance of the appellant — In an appropriate case the court can appoint a lawyer at State expense to assist it — This would apply equally if the accused is the respondent

The plain language of Section 385 makes it clear that if the appellate court does not consider the appeal fit for summary dismissal, it 'must' call for the record and Section 386 mandates that after the record is received, the appellate court may dispose of the appeal after hearing the accused or his counsel. Therefore, the plain language of Sections 385-386 does not contemplate dismissal of the appeal for non-prosecution simpliciter. On the contrary, the Code envisages disposal of the appeal on merits after perusal and scrutiny of the record. The law clearly expects the appellate court to dispose of the appeal on merits, not merely by perusing the reasoning of the trial court in the judgment, but by cross-checking the reasoning with the evidence on record with a view to satisfying itself that the reasoning and findings recorded by the trial court are consistent with the material on record. The law, therefore, does not envisage the dismissal of the appeal for default or non-prosecution but only contemplates disposal on merits after perusal of the record.

The law expects the appellate court to give a hearing to the appellant or his counsel, if he is present, and to the public prosecutor, if he is present, before disposal of the appeal on merits. Section 385 posits that if the appeal is not dismissed summarily, the appellate court shall cause notice of the time and place at which the appeal will be heard to be given to the appellant or his pleader. Section 386 then provides that the appellate court shall, after perusing the record, hear the appellant or his pleader, if he appears. It will be noticed that Section 385 provides for a notice of the time and place of hearing of the appeal to be given to either the appellant or his pleader and not to both presumably because notice to the pleader was also considered sufficient since he was representing the appellant. So also Section 386 provides for a hearing to be given to the appellant or his lawyer, if he is present, and both need not be heard. It is the duty of the appellant and his lawyer to remain present on the appointed day, time and place when the appeal is posted for hearing. This is the requirement of the Code on a plain reading of Sections 385-386 of the Code. The law does not enjoin that the court shall adjourn the case if both the appellant and his lawyer are absent. If the court does so as a matter of prudence or indulgence, it is a different matter, but it is not bound to adjourn the matter. It can dispose of the appeal after perusing the record and the judgment of the trial court. If the accused is in jail and cannot, on his own, come to court, it would be advisable to adjourn the case and fix another date to facilitate the appearance of the accused/appellant if his lawyer is not present. If the lawyer is absent, and the court deems it appropriate to appoint a lawyer at State expense to assist it, there is nothing in the law to preclude it from doing so.

Even if a case is decided on merits in the absence of the appellant, the higher court can remedy the situation if there has been a failure of justice. This would apply equally if the accused is the respondent for the obvious reason that if the appeal cannot be disposed of without hearing the respondent or his lawyer, the progress of the appeal would be halted. Bani Singh v. State of U.P., (1996) 4 SCC 720: 1996 SCC (Cri) 848: AIR 1996 SC 2439.

In the instant case, several pleas raised before the Supreme Court were not pressed into service before the High Court. In the present case the High Court has shown a lack of judicial restraint and decreed in adverting to and influenced by matters which were extraneous. The fact is that the advocates were on strike justifiably or otherwise. Why should the Court embark on the reason for the strike which was not the issue before it? A judge must be of sterner stuff. His mental equipoise must always remain firm and undeflected. It is essential that a judge should not allow his personal prejudice to go into the decision-making.

A closed mind is antithetical to fair hearing. Prejudice tends to corrupt the ability to exercise independent judgment. It has a tendency to intrude upon a free mind and may influence the outcome.

Should the judge take cognizance of the newspaper report and the reasons which prompted the advocates to seek transfer of the then Chief Justice? The learned Judge should not have let out his bile against the advocates who are free to hold any opinion as to the lapses committed by the then Chief Justice. Holding of such opinions can hardly be characterised as an unruly attitude on the part of the advocates. Such holding of opinions, nor again, would either obstruct or disturb the judiciary. If the learned Judge had the slightest compunction he should have recused himself. Mangilal v. State of M.P., (1994) 4 SCC 564: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1308.

All the twelve appellants were convicted by the Sessions Court under Section 395 of the Penal Code and sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for 10 years each. They filed an appeal before the High Court. On the date of hearing their counsel did not turn up and, therefore, the High Court heard the counsel for the State alone and dismissed the appeal on merits.

Allowing the instant appeal, the Supreme Court,

Held :

When the counsel engaged by the appellants in a criminal appeal does not turn up there is no obligation on the court of appeal to wait for him or even to adjourn the case awaiting his presence. However, if the counsel is absent there is nothing in law which precludes the court of appeal from appointing another counsel at the State's expense to assist the court. It is a matter of prudence that the court may, in an appropriate case, appoint a counsel at the State's expense to argue for the cause of the accused. Of course it is for the court to determine, on a consideration of the conspectus of the case, whether it does or does not require such legal assistance. There can be appeals which could be disposed of unassisted by counsel to put forth the favourable features for the accused. But if the sentence imposed by the judgment impugned in the appeal is of a substantial range it is advisable to seek the assistance of a legal talent. (Paras 4, 5 and 9)

On the fact situation of the instant case it has to be held that there was miscarriage of justice as the High Court proceeded to decide the appeal unaided by the arguments of an advocate or an amicus curiae. The stake involved in the appeal for the large number of convicted persons is obviously very high, particularly in view of the sentence of rigorous imprisonment for 10 years imposed on each of them. Hence any supercilious dealing of their case will be at the risk of a serious miscarriage of justice. (Paras 6 and 8)

The High Court has taken into account a set of legally forbidden materials in reaching the conclusion. It is trite that whatever a witness had stated to the investigating officer cannot be used as evidence. Section 162 CrPC, which incorporated the aforesaid prohibition, permits such statements to be used only for the limited purpose of contradicting the witness in certain circumstances. Moreover, in the instant case the investigating officer has not been examined. If a counsel was appointed to argue for the accused (when the counsel engaged by the accused did not turn up) the High Court might have averted such a legal infirmity. appeal on general observations which is impermissible. The High Court acquitted the accused persons without analysing the evidence on record and in that view of the matter, the impugned judgment cannot be sustained. (Paras 32 and 27)

The High Court has not assigned any cogent or sufficient reasons for disagreeing with the findings of the learned Sessions Judge. The judgment of the High Court is based on surmises and conjectures. (Para 26)

Further, it is not a case where two reasonable views are possible. It is also not a case where findings recorded by the High Court are fully supported by the evidences on record. The High Court proceeded absolutely on a wrong premise that there had been only one injury during the firing which is contrary to records. (Para 31)

Thus, by reason of the judgment of the High Court, a great miscarriage of justice has taken place. It is well settled that when reasoning of the High Court is perverse, the Supreme Court may set aside the judgment of acquittal and restore the judgment of conviction and sentence upon the accused. (Paras 29 and 33)

It is also well settled that there is no embargo on the appellate court to review evidence upon which an order of acquittal is based. (Para 33)

It is well settled that in an appeal under Article 136 of the Constitution, the Supreme Court will not interfere with the judgment of the High Court unless the same is clearly unreasonable or perverse or manifestly illegal or grossly unjust. The mere fact that the Supreme Court would have taken a different view of evidence is not a ground for reversing an order of acquittal. If the view taken by the High Court is reasonable or possible, the Supreme Court would be loath to interfere with an order of acquittal while exercising powers under Article 136 of the Constitution. (Para 7)

There is no legal infirmity in the judgment of the High Court. It is not a case where some material evidence may have been either ignored or misread. It is also not a case where legally admissibleevidence may have been discarded as inadmissible. The judgment of the High Court is based upon appreciation of evidence with which there is no infirmity. Hence, it is not a proper case where the Supreme Court in exercise of the jurisdiction under Article 136 of the Constitution would be justified in interfering with the order of acquittal passed by the High Court. [5701] — Ss. 386 and 374(2) — Acquittal recorded by High Court, held on facts, was proper — Appreciation of evidence — Several infirmities in prosecution case — Interpolations made in hospital records — Delay in recording FIR sought to be explained on lame excuses — Presence of eyewitnesses at the alleged date and time of incident highly doubtful — Appellant A-2 not having any motive to commit the murder of the deceased — He alleged to have caused one simple injury — Defence plea taken by A-2 appearing to be plausible — Further, defence set up by Appellant A-1, held, could not be discarded as wholly improbable — Version of alleged eyewitnesses, evidence of extra-judicial confession and recoveries of weapons, held, untrustworthy — Thus, prosecution failed to prove its case — Weighing the total evidence on record, held, acquittal of A-1 and A-2 by High Court was justified — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/34 and 324

At some places, in the impugned judgment of acquittal the reasoning of the High Court may not be sound but on weighing the total evidence on record, the High Court committed no error in acquitting both the accused. (Para 23)

There are several infirmities in the prosecution case. The version of the alleged eyewitnesses is that at about 8 o'clock in the night, they were following the deceased on the way to the village. Their subsequent conduct in not intervening in the attack or rushing to the village for help is unnatural. The entry in the register of the Outdoor Patients Department of the hospital has been found to have been tampered which supports the defence case that only in order to prove the presence of the two eyewitnesses, interpolations were made in the hospital records. The prosecution is guilty of fabricating false evidence of extra-judicial confession and recovery of the weapons used by the accused. Further, the delay in recording of FIR has been explained on lame excuses such as the Head Constable carrying the report to the Magistrate was held up because of the breakdown of his motorcycle and the Magistrate was asleep when he contacted him at his residence. These circumstances clearly indicate that there was no prompt lodging of the report of the incident by the two witnesses PW 6 and PW 7. Hence their presence at the alleged date and time of incident is highly doubtful. (Paras 23 and 24)

Appellant A-2 had no motive of committing murder of the deceased. He is alleged to have caused one simple injury to the deceased. The defence plea taken by him that he was falsely implicated because of some pending civil dispute with PW 7 concerning use of a path, appears to be plausible. (Para 24)

The statement made in defence by the accused under Section 313 CrPC can certainly be taken aid of to lend credence to the evidence led by the prosecution, but only a part of such statement under Section 313 CrPC cannot be made the sole basis of his conviction. The law on the subject is almost settled that statement under Section 313 CrPC of the accused can either be relied on in whole or in part. It may also be possible to rely on the inculpatory part of the statement of the accused if the exculpatory part is found to be false on the basis of the evidence led by the prosecution. The statement of the accused under Section 313 CrPC is not a substantive piece of evidence. It can be used for appreciating evidence led by the prosecution to accept or reject it. It is, however, not a substitute for the evidence of the prosecution. If the exculpatory part of the statement of the accused is found to be false and the evidence led by the prosecution is reliable, the inculpatory part of his statement can be taken aid of to lend assurance to the evidence of the prosecution. If the prosecution evidence does not inspire confidence to sustain the conviction of the accused, the inculpatory part of his statement under Section 313 CrPC cannot be made the sole basis of his conviction. In the present case, the exculpatory part of the statement of the accused A-1 under Section 313 CrPC in which he stated that he was attacked by the deceased and his associate, whereupon the villagers rushed for his help and inflicted injuries on the deceased, cannot be outright rejected as false. The inculpatory part of his statement under Section 313 CrPC, therefore, to the extent of admission of his presence in the compound of A when the deceased was attacked, cannot form the sole basis of his conviction. (Paras 27, 30 and 31)

The alternative submission of the complainant that on the basis of the statement of the accused A-1 under Section 313 CrPC, he is liable to be convicted for exceeding his right of private defence under Section 304 IPC, cannot be accepted for the reasons mentioned above. (Para 32)

So far as case against the co-accused A-2 is concerned, since the evidence of the prosecution that the two co-accused had made a joint assault on the deceased, is not reliable, he cannot be convicted under Section 302 with the aid of Section 34 IPC for his alleged common intention with A-1. [5702] — Ss. 386 and 374(2) — Appeal against conviction — Acquittal by High Court — Propriety of — Though the High Court failed to address itself to certain crucial aspects of evidence and gave undue importance to certain inconsequential matters, held on facts, conclusion of High Court regarding the acquittal was justified

There can be no doubt that some of the reasons given by the High Court are not such as to discredit the evidence of PW 1 who is the only eyewitness in the case. But, on carefully scanning her evidence, the ultimate view of the High Court that it is not safe to convict the accused on the basis of testimony of PW 1, cannot be said to be ill founded. There are certain additional factors and reasons which lead to the conclusion that on the question of reliability of the evidence of PW 1, two views are not ruled out and, therefore, there is no perversity in the ultimate conclusion reached by the High Court. (Para 11)

The facts and circumstances would give rise to a reasonable doubt whether the incident had taken place in the manner as narrated by PW 1. Added to this, the conduct of PW 1 in implicating all the family members, imputing them with certain overt acts which were found to be unbelievable by the trial court would cast a serious doubt on the reliability of PW 1's evidence. She went to the police station leaving the victim who was unconscious but still alive and reported against all the family members en bloc excepting the mother of the deceased who is said to be mentally unsound. Her vindictiveness and tendency to implicate innocent persons as well is apparent from this conduct. (Para 17)

It is true that the conduct of the accused persons after the incident had taken place is very unnatural and creates a strong suspicion against them, but, that by itself is not sufficient to convict the accused, especially when no strong motive to put an end to the life of a son/brother is made out. [5703] — Ss. 386 and 374(2) — Appeal against conviction — Interference by High Court, held on facts, was justified — Murder — High Court reversing conviction recorded by trial court — Propriety of — On the fateful day, PW 4 (father of deceased S) was present in his fields and was engaged in a discussion with PW 5 whose land was stated to be at a distance of about 2 killas from the land of PW 4 — At that time, S came there on a scooter and on being asked by PW 4 as to where he was going, S told that he was going to bring medicines for his mother — Thereafter when S covered about 15/20 karams on his scooter, he was attacked by accused persons as a result of which he sustained as many as 24 injuries — Presence of PWs 4 and 5 at the place of occurrence doubtful — Discrepancy between ocular testimony and medical evidence with regard to the injuries sustained by S — No attempt by PW 4 to intervene or to save S — Conduct of PW 5 quite unnatural — Presence of motive, held on facts, was of no help to the prosecution case — Acquittal recorded by High Court, held on facts, not liable to be interfered with — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/34

PW 5 claimed that he was present at the place of occurrence and had seen the occurrence. He stated that at the time of occurrence he was present in his fields. He, however, stated in his cross-examination that he did not own any land in village L where the occurrence had taken place. This shift in stand of PW 5 would clearly show that he is an unreliable witness and not creditworthy. No reliance can be placed on such testimony to establish the presence of PW 5 at the place of occurrence. (Para 5)

Further, PW 4 has stated that the distance between his land and the land of PW 5 is about two killas. Even if this statement is accepted, in normal circumstances, no one would travel from a distance of two killas, that too, at 6.45 a.m. to meet a friend without a purpose. The prosecution has not been able to establish the circumstances leading to PW 5 going to the field of PW 4 at that time. (Para 7)

The evidence shows that the deceased S travelled on a scooter to village C for purchase of medicines for his mother all of a sudden. Even PW 4, father of the deceased did not know about the illness of his wife, which led him to inquire from his son as to where he was going. If the father of the deceased himself did not know the programme of the deceased going to village C in advance, it is inherently improbable that the accused would know his programme, waylay and attack him armed with kirpan, gandasi, datar etc. (Para 7)

That apart, the house of the accused is 6/7 killas towards the west of Village Abadi and the place of occurrence was at a distance of half a kilometre on the eastern side of Village Abadi. In ordinary circumstances, it is difficult to accept that the accused would be loitering around the place of occurrence covering a distance of 6/7 killas armed with kirpan, gandasi, datar etc. (Para 7)

PW 5 did not accompany the injured to the hospital. There is no explanation by the prosecution as to why he could not accompany the injured to the hospital. The conduct of PW 5 is quite unnatural. (Para 7)

(12) Acquittal/Reversal of conviction justified (contd.)

Apart from discrepancy between ocular and medical evidence with regard to the injuries sustained by the deceased on his body, the fact that the deceased suffered as many as twenty-four bodily injuries makes all the more doubtful the presence of PWs 4 and 5 at the place of occurrence. Inflicting twenty-four injuries on the body of the deceased by the three accused persons would require a considerable amount of time. This itself suggests that the accused had sufficient time at their disposal to commit the crime. Any father, worth the name, would not remain a mute spectator when his son is being inflicted as many as twenty-four injuries under his very nose. (Para 10)

The evidence on record shows that in a murder case of one K (nephew of accused H) the complainant party including PW 4, who were accused in that case, were acquitted by the High Court. If that could be the motive to nurse a grudge against the complainant party, the accused would not have spared PW 4. That apart, when the basic foundation of the prosecution case crumbled down, motive becomes inconsequential. At the same time, animosity is a double-edged sword. It could be a ground for false implication, it could also be a ground for assault. In view of the facts and circumstances, the motive, however strong, merely creates a suspicion. Suspicion cannot take the place of proof of guilt. (Paras 7 and 11). State of Punjab v. Sucha Singh, (2003) 3 SCC 153: 2003 SCC (Cri) 856: AIR 2003 SC 1471: 2003 Cri LJ 1210.

[5704] — Ss. 386 and 374(2) — Murder — Circumstantial evidence — Appeal against conviction — Interference by High Court — On facts, held, was proper — Acquittal justified — Dowry death — Circumstantial evidence — Homicidal death by throttling — Prosecution proving the circumstances that (i) there was some demand for dowry because of which there used to be quarrels, (ii) on the date of the incident A-3, the brother-in-law of the deceased, along with some other persons was seen carrying the body of the deceased which he claimed was being taken to the hospital for treatment, and (iii) that the deceased died of strangulation — No material to show who actually committed the murder — Thus, necessary link in the chain of circumstances missing — Further, no reason why others including the husband, who were staying along with the accused persons, were not made party to the crime — Role of A-3 as stated in the statement made under S. 313 CrPC by A-3, also not implicating A-3 of having been a party to any crime — On facts, trial court erred in awarding capital punishment to A-3 and life imprisonment to others — High Court was justified in reversing the finding of the trial court — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/34

It is true that the prosecution has been able to establish motive but then that by itself is not sufficient to base a conviction. The other circumstantial evidence that is established beyond reasonable doubt is the fact that the deceased died of strangulation. There is no material produced by the prosecution to show who actually committed this crime, but there being no eyewitnesses to the incident the prosecution will have to establish all the links in the chain of circumstances which would have to show that in all probability it is only the accused persons who could have committed this crime. This the prosecution has failed to establish. It is an admitted fact that apart from the accused persons there were others also staying in the house of A-1 which included the husband of the deceased. No case is made out by the prosecution why others including the husband could not have been a party to this crime. In the absence of any such material, the trial court relied on a statement made in Section 313 CrPC by A-3 which the trial court construed as a confession. It is evident from that statement that when A-3 came to know that the deceased had swallowed poison he went to the room where the deceased was and found her husband pressing her neck. With a view to prevent the poison from going down the throat at this stage, A-3 put his fingers in the throat of the deceased to make her vomit the poison. In the said process, he injured his fingers. This statement, if it is to be accepted in its entirety, shows it was the husband of the deceased who pressed the throat which could have caused the suffocation. The role of A-3 as stated in the statement does not implicate A-3 of having been a party to any crime but the trial court thought otherwise. In these facts and circumstances, the High Court was justified in reversing the finding of the trial court. All the witnesses deposed in unequivocal terms regarding the incident. It is in concurrence with the prosecution case that while the deceased was talking with PWs 2 and 3, the assailants suddenly came and attacked them. All of them also deposed that the assailants immediately escaped in a jeep. This version is not at all tallying with the scene mahazar prepared by PW 29. Scene mahazar accounts for some material objects that are not explained by the prosecution. The non-explanation of several objects that found place in the scene mahazar will go on to dilute the prosecution case. Such unexplained objects point towards the possibility of a preceding clash and some happenings other than those portrayed by the prosecution and accounted for by the witnesses. According to all the witnesses the attack was with sword and knife. But the deceased had injuries other than those which could have been inflicted by the said weapons. Moreover, the prosecution could not explain MO 11 danda (stick) recovered from the scene of incident. This also casts a certain amount of doubt upon the prosecution case. (Para 11)

The delayed filing of FIR and its consequences were discussed in Thulia Kali v. State of T.N., (1972) 3 SCC 393 wherein the Supreme Court observed that the delay in lodging the FIR quite often results in embellishment which is a creature of afterthought. It was further stated that on account of delay, the report not only gets bereft of the advantage of spontaneity, danger creeps in of the introduction of coloured version, exaggerated account or concocted story as a result of deliberation and consultation. The delay of 12 hours in filing the FIR in the instant case irrespective of the fact that the police station is situated only at a distance of 100 metres from the spot of incident is another factor sufficient to doubt the genuineness of the FIR. (Paras 12 and 14)

Further, the Supreme Court in Marudanal Augusti case, (1980) 4 SCC 425 observed that the delay in forwarding the FIR to the Magistrate would throw serious doubt on the prosecution case, whereas in Arjun Marik v. State of Bihar, 1994 Supp (2) SCC 372 it was reminded that the forwarding of the occurrence report is indispensable and absolute and it has to be forwarded with earliest dispatch. But, in the instant case, the prosecution did not satisfactorily explain the delayed lodging of the FIR with the Magistrate. (Paras 15 and 14)

The trial court took note of the fact that it is unnatural not to mention the names of the assailants to the doctor who examined the deceased and the injured witnesses (PWs 2 and 3). The trial court also noticed that immediately after the incident PWs 1 and 4 took the injured I (deceased) along with PWs 2 and 3 to Medical College Hospital which is 48 kilometres away from the place of incident but found that it is improbable that none in the jeep had talked about the incident or the accused during the long journey. That apart, though PW 28 (SI of Police) proceeded to the spot on getting information of the clash within half an hour and although he had definite information and details of the incident which he noted in the general diary, FIR was not registered on the ostensible ground that the names of the assailants were not known. There is no satisfactory explanation by the police officer regarding the blank sheets in the counterfoil of the FIR. The trial court observed that the first information statement given by PW 1 also seemed to have been subsequently written on a blank signed paper. Thus, the possibility of subsequent implication of the appellants as a result of an afterthought, maybe due to political bitterness, cannot be ruled out. (Paras 8, 16, 6 and 14)

[5710] — Ss. 386 and 378 — Reversal of acquittal by High Court, held on facts, not justified — Prosecution case against appellants, A-1 and A-3, not proved beyond reasonable doubt — No evidence to show any preplan or common intention on their part to commit murder of G — All accused neither went together nor waiting together at a common place for arrival of deceased G — Further, it was A-2 who assaulted G — On facts, High Court committed serious error in reversing the order of acquittal merely because it could take a different view — Penal Code, 1860 — Ss. 302/34

According to prosecution, A-1, A-3 and A-4 barged into the house of deceased G and started beating his mother M with sticks and dragged her outside the house. When G was rushing towards M to rescue her, A-2 emerged from the lane and inflicted knife-blows on the chest and abdomen of the deceased. A-1, A-2, A-3 and A-4 were tried for offences under Sections 452, 302 and 323 read with Section 34 IPC and also under Section 135 of the Bombay Police Act. The Sessions Court acquitted A-1, A-3 and A-4 giving benefit of doubt and convicted A-2 alone for offence under Section 302 IPC. Before the High Court, the State challenged the order of acquittal in respect of A-1 and A-3 whereas A-2 challenged the order of his conviction. The High Court confirmed the conviction of A-2, but reversed the order of acquittal of A-1 and A-3. Appellants A-1 and A-3 challenged their conviction before the Supreme Court on the grounds: (i) that the trial court on a careful and objective consideration of the entire evidence found that the prosecution failed to prove the incident alleged to have taken place at the house of M and that the incident of beating M by the appellants A-1 and A-3 was not established; (ii) that in the light of evidence recorded during trial and in view of the contradictions and omissions brought about, the High Court was not at all right and justified in looking to the statements of witnesses made to the police, (iii) that regarding the use of sticks by the appellants and their assaulting the deceased by sticks, there were serious omissions as pointed by the trial court which the High Court did not properly appreciate; (iv) that it could not be said that the reasons recorded by the trial court were either perverse or not based on proper appreciation of evidence and so the High Court erred in reversing the order of acquittal and convicting them applying Section 34 IPC. On the other hand, appellant A-2 submitted that in view of the concurrent findings of conviction recorded against him, he was not in a position to challenge the same. However, he argued that he could be held guilty only for an offence under Section 304 Part II IPC.

Allowing the appeal preferred by A-1 and A-3, but dismissing the appeal filed by A-2,

Held :

It is not possible to say having regard to the evidence on record that the reasons recorded and findings arrived at by the trial court to acquit A-1 and A-3 were unjustified or untenable. The High Court also failed to dislodge all the reasons given by the trial court for acquitting them. It was not proved beyond reasonable doubt that A-1 and A-3 assaulted the deceased with sticks. Even otherwise there is no evidence to show any preplan or common intention on the part of A-1 and A-3 to commit the murder of the deceased. It is not the case that all the accused went together or were waiting together in a common place for the arrival of the deceased. Further, it is also in the evidence that A-2 emerged suddenly from a lane and assaulted the deceased with a knife. Under the circumstances, it is difficult to accept that A-1 and A-3 could be held guilty for offence under Section 302 read with Section 34 IPC. [5712] — Ss. 386(a) and 378 — Acquittal justified — High Court reversing order of acquittal and convicting appellant-accused under S. 377 IPC — High Court relying on irrelevant facts — On facts, held, the mind of the Judges of High Court stood prejudiced

On 18-7-1986 at about 8.30 a.m., the appellant Swamiji in a position of authority in the Mutt school allegedly through PW 2, P and G called the complainant, PW 1 a student of the IXth standard to his office. The office had been partitioned and one part of it had been converted into a bedroom. PW 1 alleged that he was then subjected to unnatural offence by the appellant. His clothes, anus and panche (lungi) got soiled. He allegedly came back to his house with his brother on 28-7-1986. He gave the dirty clothes for washing to his mother. His mother, PW 4 found sticky substances in the lungi. When accosted, he allegedly told her about the indecent behaviour of the appellant. PW 8, B, the maternal uncle of Respondent 2 at that time was also present. The victim was allegedly persuaded to go back to the school. He came back to the school on 3-8-1986. PW 9, S and N were said to have been asked by the appellant to bring him again to the appellant's office. He declined to come. He allegedly made a complaint to the senior Swamiji as regards the incident who assured him of looking thereinto and asked him not to make any complaint, the prestige of the Mutt being involved. However, no action was allegedly taken. PW 1 thereafter lodged a first information report on 29-8-1986 at about 6.30 p.m. The appeal against acquittal and the criminal revision application were taken up together for hearing by the High Court. The High Court by the impugned order convicted the appellant-accused.

Allowing the appeal,

Held :

The High Court completely lost sight of the parameters of its jurisdiction to reverse a judgment of acquittal. The High Court could have made an endeavour to arrive at its independent findings. But the mind of the Judges of the High Court stood influenced. If the High Court was clear in its mind that it was dealing with a criminal case and that too with the offence under Section 377 IPC, which is a serious one, there was no reason why it had made endeavours to mediate in the internal disputes of the Mutt and for that purpose held sittings in chamber. There was also no reason why the presence of the appellant on each day of hearing was insisted upon and his absence had been adversely commented upon. A large number of irrelevant factors including the rate of conviction, legalisation of sodomy in other countries had been taken into consideration by the High Court. The appellant for no reason was condemned in the clearest possible terms. He was accused of coming to the High Court in an air-conditioned car and holding press conferences which was denied and disputed by the Public Prosecutor. He was also branded as a habitual offender. Again, although the allegation against the appellant was commission of a heinous offence, an attempt was made by the Court to get certain civil disputes between the appellant and the senior Swamiji of the Mutt settled. (Paras 38, 32 and 12)

It is one of the rarest of rare cases where a deeper scrutiny was necessary particularly when the trial court had recorded a judgment of acquittal upon assigning sufficient and cogent reasons. While deciding an appeal against acquittal, the power of the appellate court is no less than the power exercised while hearing appeals against conviction. In both types of appeals, the power exists to review the entire evidence. However, one significant difference is that an order of acquittal will not be interfered with, by an appellate court, where the judgment of the trial court is based on evidence and the view taken is reasonable and plausible. It will not reverse the decision of the trial court merely because a different view is possible. The appellate court will also bear in mind that there is a presumption of innocence in favour of the accused and the accused is entitled to get the benefit of any doubt. Further, if the appellate court decides to interfere, it should assign reasons for differing with the decision of the trial court.
